RUSSIA FINDS U.S. DOOR OPEN

COPELAND FINDS CITIES RULED BY UNDERWORLD

Senator Tells of U.S. Racket Quiz.

Certain cities in the United States are almost wholly under the domination of the underworld, United States Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York told members of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon yesterday in the Morrison hotel.

As chairman of a senatorial sub committee on rackets and kidnaping, Senator Copeland has been investigating crime in the big cities for several months. His committee will hold a hearing in Chicago Monday and Tuesday.

Although "trembling" over the increase in crime, the senator is hopeful, he said, that the nation will be able to deal with the situation. The report of the subcommittee will outline the modern growth of crime throughout the country and make recommendations to congress for legislative reforms tending to aid in the battle against gangsters and racketeers.

Challenge to Government.

"The present situation is a challenge to organized government," he said. "There can be no doubt that certain communities are now dominated by the rats of the underworld. This statement may sound sensational, but the records of crime prove it."

According to an estimate prepared by the Manufacturers' Record, the annual cost of crime in the United States is nearly thirteen billions of dollars, Senator Copeland said.

"Crime costs six times as much as education," he declared. "The cost is ten times as great as the combined cost of maintaining the army and navy. It represents a sum sufficient to pay every dollar of federal, state, and local taxation."

The speaker said he regarded some of the modern forms of the old crimes as acts of treason to be dealt with by the government in the same manner as treasonable acts during wartime.

Threats Against Government.

"While it is difficult to conceive of treason as a peace time crime, yet society is all the time in a war against criminals," Senator Copeland pointed out. "Racketeering, kidnaping, and gang conspiracies to prey upon the public are concerted attempts against organized society. They are a threat against government, and in a strict sense they are treasonous acts. Crime of this sort is directed against the state and must not be tolerated if government is to live."

There is a general conviction, he remarked, that the administration of criminal justice has broken down. The subcommittee of the senate is attempting to find out, he said, why crime is permitted to thrive and criminals to escape justice.

Senator Copeland said he believes in the immediate intervention of the federal government when a kidnaping is committed.

"This is the most terrifying of crimes," he declared, "and in every case there is a presumption that federal laws have been violated. There is a reasonable probability that the crime is interstate and the intervention of the government is justified. Should it later develop that the crime is wholly intrastate the coöperation of the government will have done no harm to the state's rights and its efforts will have benefited the state."

While a score of laws may be passed to strengthen the opponents of the underworld in their war against crime, there will be no victory for law and order unless public opinion is aroused, Senator Copeland said.

Must End All Tributes.

"The business man will never be free from blackmailing as long as he pays tribute to the underworld," he said. "He must refuse to be levied upon and promptly report all the facts to the authorities. Every dollar paid to the underworld is an invitation for further demands."

The speaker also discussed the economic outlook of the nation. The NRA holds the immediate and perhaps the only hope of recovery, he asserted.

"Before leaving Washington," the senator said, "I talked both with the President and Gen. Hugh Johnson. I have no right to quote them, but I found in them an atmosphere of confidence regarding the future."

Attorney Walter Williams of Benton, Ill., a trustee of the University of Illinois, was reelected for his third term as president of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce at the annual election preceding the luncheon.

Farm Strike Slated for Today

CENTRAL WEST SEEKS TO FORCE HIGHER PRICES

President Will Talk Tomorrow.

President to Talk

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—It was announced late today that President Roosevelt intends to make a radio address to the nation at 10 o'clock [9 o'clock Chicago time] Sunday night. It is thought that he may appeal to the farmers to hold on a bit longer with promises of redoubled efforts to bring up the prices of agricultural commodities. Great interest was expressed as to whether the speech is to prove the long expected statement of the administration's monetary policy. From the farm belt have come the demands for inflation of the currency.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—Faced with outbreaks of agricultural unrest in a dozen prairie states of the middle west, which were brought to a head by the calling of a farm strike to begin tomorrow by Milo Reno, president of the National Farm Holiday association, President Roosevelt and his advisers today maintained their faith in their own farm program as a means of raising prices for agriculture.

The President conferred with his cabinet today and there was definite intimation at the White House that he would have a statement on the situation soon.

Peek for Production Cut.

George N. Peek, administrator of the agricultural adjustment act, expressed sympathy with the farmers, but pointed out his belief that curtailment of the production is the only permanent remedy for the present low prices of farm products. Other officials stated that special credit extension plans for wheat and corn are being studied by the newly created Commodity Credit corporation, although it was admitted that such plans are still "semi-nebulous."

"All these people are trying to do is to save their homes," said Peek. "I, too, would fight to hold my home.

"We have been warning the east for twelve years that things like this would happen unless the income of farmers was increased.

Fighting to Raise Prices.

"We have been fighting to raise farm prices and also to hold down supply so as to support higher prices and bring permanent recovery, rather than merely invite new surpluses and new disaster. Every experiment ever made has ended in great depression for agriculture.

"The loss of our foreign markets for wheat and pork with resulting low prices are unpleasant facts, but nevertheless they are facts which we must have the courage to face. We are moving with varying plans as rapidly as is humanly possible. But it should be recalled that the depression did not come overnight. It was years in developing. Complete and substantial recovery cannot be brought about by the waving of a magic wand."

Hears of NRA Attack.

Meanwhile Senator Gerald Nye [Radical, N. D.] told reporters that he had received information "from reliable sources" that farm leaders in the middle west are planning to lead their followers into towns to tear down NRA signs from the windows of merchants.

Attacks on the NRA have been a consistent feature of the present farm outbreak. Gov. Charles Bryan of Nebraska attacked the recovery act yesterday, charging that it was raising prices of the things which farmers buy without raising prices for what they raise, with a resulting farm buyers' strike which, he charged, is ruining thousands of small town merchants.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, replied today that events in the middle west were more or less natural and that when the full effect of the general recovery program makes itself felt with its farm relief, public works, and industrial aspects, the farmers' discontent will vanish.

President Roosevelt was reported to be noting with interest messages from Senator George W. Norris [Radical,

REVOLT RUMORS ALARM HAVANA; PALACE GUARDED

HAVANA, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Additional machine guns were mounted on top of the presidential palace and hotel and restaurant keepers laid in large supplies of foodstuffs tonight as reports of agitation for a new general strike swept through the capital.

Whether the strengthening of the palace fortifications was the result of the strike reports or of an assortment of rumors of anti-government activities was not explained, but soldiers busied themselves placing sandbags around their machine gun nests.

Reports of anti-government activities ranged from a story that former President Machado was plotting a counter revolution to rumors that the communists, after being routed by army forces on Sept. 29, were preparing to open a new attack on the Grau San Martin government.

MEDICAL GROUP TO USE ADS TO INFORM PUBLIC

The Cook County Medical society, at a meeting in the Palmer house last night, adopted a program designed to bring the general practitioner of medicine into a more favorable light before the public.

First, the society adopted a resolution stating that the public should be informed, through paid advertising, of the abilities and trustworthiness of the general practitioner. A second resolution urged that all costs of medical care should be lowered, and a third recommended that scientific programs of the organization should be fitted to the needs of the general practitioner rather than the specialist.

The Cook County Medical society was organized some months ago by physicians who broke away from the Chicago Medical society. It has several hundred members.

Anti-Whistling Ordinance: Train Cuts Truck in Two

Jewett, O., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Albert Humrighouse, a Pennsylvania railroad engineer, was fined recently under a new town ordinance forbidding excessive whistling. Early today his locomotive struck a truck loaded with cheese, eggs and meat on a street crossing. The truck was cut in two, but its two human occupants escaped injury. Humrighouse claims he blew his whistle so as to comply with the ordinance.

Auto Passes Stop Light; 2 Shot, 1 Killed

An automobile passenger was shot and killed this morning and a companion was wounded in the left ear—both by the same bullet—because the driver of their car drove through a stop light at the busy intersection of Belmont, Western, and Clybourn avenues and failed to heed the shouts of a traffic policeman. Six persons—two girls and four men—were in the car.

The man killed was Harry Nielson, 25 years old, of 3507 North Irving avenue, a professional banjo player. The man wounded was Larkin Gervais, 26, of 4005 Wilcox street, a piano player. Henry Vehlow of the North Damen avenue station was the policeman who shot them.

Drive Through Stop Light.

Those with Nielson and Gervais were Roy Chapman, 26 years old, 3436 North Seeley avenue, the driver; Darwin Nicewarner, 25, of 1732 North Campbell avenue; Miss Helen Muelir, 22, of 2441 North Spaulding avenue, and Miss Mary Ann Lammer, 23, of 3430 North Oakley avenue. They had met earlier at the Riverview park ballroom and started in Chapman's car to take Nielson and Gervais to Ravenswood avenue and Melrose street, where the two were to join a small orchestra.

Chapman, driving east in Belmont avenue, ignored the red lights, which were against him, and continued going east on the west bound car tracks. Then he attempted a sharp turn north into Western avenue. His car, police said, had no lights burning.

Policeman Vehlow blew his whistle and tried to wave the car to a stop. The automobile, he charged later, almost ran him down.

Mistaken for Robbers.

"I was sure it was a holdup gang," said Vehlow later, "and I fired."

Vehlow's bullet pierced the rear window of Chapman's automobile, clipped Gervais' ear, and struck Nielson in the back of the head. He slumped over against Chapman and the latter then stopped his car. Policeman Vehlow ran up. He took Nielson and Gervais to the Martha Washington hospital and held Chapman and the others.

They were questioned at the station by Lieut. Arthur Wentzel. Gervais and the girls admitted Chapman had been driving crazily. Lieut. Wentzel had the slain victim's record looked up and a card was found at the detective bureau showing he had served 30 days in jail in 1931 for petty larceny and had been placed on probation in 1925 for larceny and in 1929 for attempted confidence game. On this revelation Wentzel ordered Chapman, Gervais, Nicewarner, and the girls held for the inquest today.

Ohio Dry Law Violators to Go Free After Repeal

Columbus, O., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Gov. George White said today he probably will pardon persons serving terms in Ohio prisons and workhouses as the result of liquor law violations, provided, of course, the cases involve no other violations. There will be no wholesale pardoning, the governor said. He will resort to no proclamation to turn liquor law violators out of jail even if the 18th amendment and other liquor laws are repealed.

Insull Faces Greek Court Hearing Today

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 20.—Samuel Insull, former Chicago utilities magnate and now a fugitive from justice, for the second time tomorrow will marshal his choice legal talent before the Greek Court of Appeals to fight against returning to Chicago to answer charges of fraud in connection with the bankruptcy of some of his utilities companies.

Insull was indicted by a federal grand jury on six counts charging that he illegally paid dividends on Corporation Securities stock when it was bankrupt and also made illegal use of collateral in obtaining loans from New York banks. These charges will be examined by the Greek Court of Appeals at tomorrow's extradition hearing. Insull's main line of defense will be that he did not personally profit by any stock transfers or manipulations from which the fraudulent bankruptcy charges against him arose.

U. S. Authorities Worried.

Forrest Harness, United States assistant attorney general, on the other hand declares the case is overwhelmingly against Insull and that there is no loophole this time through which he may escape according to the rules of law and evidence.

American authorities here are greatly concerned with the manner and procedure of the hearing. They maintain that an extradition hearing does not constitute a trial of the case in Greece, as was done here last year when the state of Illinois tried to secure Insull's extradition. In that respect tomorrow's hearing may have an important bearing on the future aspect of the extradition treaty between the United States and Greece.

Insull's lawyers declare that they are going to get Insull off again this time and that they will seek practically to try the case here. They received a whole load of new material and depositions from the United States yesterday.

Insull Appears Confident.

On the eve of the hearing Insull looks well. He has spent exactly eight weeks tomorrow in luxurious hospital quarters under detention and with every care. Tonight he appeared to be full of confidence that he will win.

Guarded by police, Insull will be taken from the hospital to the same courtroom where he got himself off last year. A policeman will sit next to him in court.

Insull will be defended tomorrow by Christos Ladas, his leading lawyer last year, and also by George Lazarimos, special counsel in Greece for the Standard Oil company and for the American Express, and by Pericles Rhallys, whom he hired this year. These three Greek lawyers have the advice and coöperation of Simmons & Simmons, Insull's London lawyers, and also the coöperation of Insull's American attorneys, so he will have an unusually high powered and high priced array of lawyers behind him.

New Judges on Case.

Against these on the prosecution side will be only Prosecutor Anthony Reganakos of the Greek Court of Appeals, the same man who presented the case in court last year, when Insull was charged with larceny and embezzlement. Sitting within conversational distance of Reganakos with an interpreter will be Harness.

The judges at tomorrow's hearing will be entirely different from those who declared Insull innocent of the charges against him last year and refused to extradite him. The president of the court tomorrow is Emmanuel Panegyrakis and the other four judges are George Tairigotis, John Antoniades, Andrew Digenopolous, and Charles Stavropolous.

The hearing will start at 10 o'clock and it is expected the court will announce its decision late in the evening. Prosecutor Reganakos will arraign Insull first, then each of Insull's lawyers will speak, with the prosecutor making the final rebuttal.

New Parachute Saves Life in "Short Distance" Jump

[Copyright, 1933, By the New York Times.]

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 20.—A new parachute invention enabling a flyer to descend from a slight altitude was successfully demonstrated today at the Amsterdam airdrome by its inventor, the German aviator and parachutist, H. S. Appell. Appell jumped out of an airplane at a height of about 600 feet. Within 80 feet the parachute fully unfolded and Appell landed with ease and safety.

SOVIET INVITED TO A DISCUSSION BY ROOSEVELT

Offer Is Accepted by Kalinin.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—The long heralded move of the Roosevelt administration toward recognition of the soviet government of Russia materialized today.

President Roosevelt made public an exchange of letters between him and President Kalinin of Russia arranging for negotiations on the question of recognition and other matters at issue which are to take place in Washington.

Mr. Roosevelt is understood to be willing to make important concessions if the Russian government proves willing to compromise the differences as a result of which recognition of the soviets has been withheld for 15 years.

Litvinov Russian Envoy.

In the negotiations which the President will conduct personally on behalf of the United States the Russian government will be represented by the astute and wily M. M. Litvinov, people's commissar for foreign affairs. Mr. Litvinov is to come to Washington as soon as a date for the negotiations is agreed upon by the two governments.

The initiative in this matter was taken by Mr. Roosevelt, who proposed the negotiations in a message cabled to Moscow on Oct. 10. After considering the proposition for a week, President Kalinin accepted in a dispatch dated Oct. 17.

Though the President sought the conference, he emphasized when he gave out the correspondence at the press conference this afternoon that he is not committed to recognition of the soviet republic in any shape, form, or manner. All that he had suggested was that he and a representative of the Moscow government should sit down together and see if there was not some basis of adjustment of the differences that have kept two great peoples apart.

The President said he did not expect any further correspondence and expressed the hope that Mr. Litvinov would come to Washington soon.

Refuses to Discuss Debts.

Mr. Roosevelt declined to be drawn into a discussion of the debts owed America which the soviets repudiated, and of the subversive propaganda activities in the United States, which constitute the two major reasons for the refusal of the Washington government under four administrations to recognize the communist republic. The President conceded there were numerous matters at issue, but would not go into them without consulting the state department.

In like manner the President dodged when asked if the invitation to send a plenipotentiary to Washington might be construed as recognition. He waved the question aside with the reiteration that the correspondence tells the whole story.

Whether Mr. Litvinov will be the guest of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House has not been considered. So far only the President of Cuba and two prime ministers—MacDonald of Great Britain and Bennett of Canada—have been White House guests during international negotiations. Ministers of foreign affairs have not qualified heretofore for such honors.

President to Do Negotiating.

The President also emphasized that he alone will do the negotiating with Mr. Litvinov.

Although Mr. Roosevelt emphatically disclaimed any commitment to recognize Russia and declared it wholly unjustified to draw the conclusion that the negotiations will result in recognition other administration officials did not conceal their expectation and belief that recognition is a virtual certainty.

The liberals and radicals who form so large an element of the political support of the President are solidly in favor of recognition, even without exacting conditions of the soviets, and have been clamoring for the step for months. The President himself has shown a strong leaning toward a reconciliation with Moscow.

Officials of the NRA and AAA were elated by the President's step, expressing the belief that the restoration of diplomatic relations with Moscow will boom trade between the two countries and promote to a profound degree the recovery of prosperity in the United States.

AAA officials particularly stressed the argument that recognition would boost sales of American farm products to Russia, citing the volume of cotton and pork products the soviets are already buying in this country—on credit advanced by the R. F. C.

In his letter to Mr. Kalinin, Mr. Roosevelt referred to the differences between the two countries as "serious but not, in my opinion, insoluble."

Such difficulties can be removed, he added, "only by frank, friendly conversations." He would be willing to enter into such conversations with the understanding that neither country would be committed thereby "to any future course of action."

In conclusion, he contented himself with expression of the hope that "such conversations might result in good to the people of both our countries."

In the main, Mr. Kalinin echoed the sentiments expressed by Mr. Roosevelt, but he did contribute the further suggestion that the absence of diplomatic relations between the countries "has an unfavorable effect, not only on the interests of the two states concerned, but also on the general international situation, increasing the element of disquiet, complicating the process of consolidating world peace, and encouraging forces tending to disturb that peace."

At the late London economic conference Litvinov expatiated on the billions of dollars' worth of commodities the soviet government stood ready to buy abroad—on credit.

Regarded as Bait.

This was generally regarded as bait for American recognition, as well as for trade relations with other countries. American exports to Russia were valued at 114 million dollars in 1930 and 103 millions in 1931, but fell to 12 millions in 1932. Imports from Russia were 24 millions in 1930, 13 millions in 1931, and 9 millions in 1932.

American claims against Russia aggregate $768,683,071. The Wilson administration loaned the Kerensky government $192,601,297, which the succeeding soviet government immediately repudiated. Interest on this loan now amounts to $134,981,774.

In addition, there are private American claims against the soviet government aggregating 491 millions. These are principally claims by American corporations for property confiscated by the soviets.

Soviets File Counter Claims.

The soviets have countered with claims against the United States, chiefly for property alleged to have been destroyed by American troops in the intervention by the United States and the allies in north Russia and Siberia in 1918 and 1919.

President Wilson, though opposing intervention at first, finally yielded and joined with the allies in sending troops into Russia, ostensibly to strengthen the eastern front, disrupted by Russian withdrawal from the war, and to protect Czechoslovakian prisoners then on their way to the United States through Siberia.

An American force of 7,000 men under Gen. William S. Graves was sent to Siberia and another force was dispatched to Archangel. The former force was withdrawn April 1, 1920, and the latter in June, 1919.

Hughes States Position.

The most comprehensive statement of the reasons for the American government's refusal to recognize the soviets was made by Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes on Dec. 18, 1923.

Mr. Hughes said that . . . "there would seem to be at this time no reason for negotiations. . . . If the soviet authorities are ready to restore the confiscated property of American citizens or make effective compensation they can do so. If the soviet authorities are ready to repeal their decree repudiating Russia's obligations to this country and appropriately recognize them they can do so.

"It requires no conference nor negotiations to accomplish these results, which can and should be achieved at Moscow as evidence of good faith. The American government has not incurred liabilities to Russia nor repudiated obligations. Most serious is the continued propaganda to overthrow the institutions of this country. This government can enter into no negotiations until these efforts directed from Moscow are abandoned."

Announced in Moscow.

[Copyright: 1933: By the Associated Press.]

MOSCOW, Oct. 20.—Russia announced tonight its acceptance of President Roosevelt's proposal to negotiate for the American recognition of the soviet union, believing that such action will serve the cause of world peace.

A foreign office spokesman who gave out copies of the messages said that "President Roosevelt's step comes at a moment of a very serious and complicated international situation in which the cause of peace is being assailed in many parts of the world.

"We hope that President Roosevelt's message is the first step toward fruitful cooperation between the two countries which will be useful in the cause of peace and which might even be able to change the international scene."

The official language of President Kalinin's reply to President Roosevelt gave no hint of the enthusiasm which bubbled up under the surface here at the fact the ice had been broken after Washington's steadfast refusal for 16 years to recognize the existence of the workers' and peasants' state.

But some indication of the importance Moscow attaches to the move is given in the diversion of M. Litvinoff from another important diplomatic journey to go to Washington. He was scheduled to depart Oct. 22 for Constantinople to participate in the celebration of the anniversary of the Turkish republic, returning the visit made here last year by Ismet Pasha.

The date of his departure for Washington has not yet been announced, nor is it known at this time whether he will be accompanied by other statesmen.

PRESIDENT GIVES REPORTERS LESSON IN JOURNALISM

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—More than 150 newspaper correspondents jammed ten deep in a sweltering semi-circle before the long mahogany desk of Franklin D. Roosevelt this afternoon heard the story of the presidential overtures to the Russian soviet and, incidentally, listened to a lecture on practical newspaper work from the lips of one of the most skillful publicists America has ever known.

The "lesson in journalism" concerned headline writers more particularly. The Roosevelt skill in publicity was shown in breaking the long awaited Russian story at the very moment when its importance would perhaps thrust from the headlines of the nation's press the discomfiting news that farmers in the middlewest were in revolt against the NRA. And for precept, came this injunction from Roosevelt's lips:

"Writing this story correctly will not be so difficult for you as it will be for the headline writers. The headline writer will look through your lead for an excuse to put in the head:

"'America Recognizes Russia.'"

The President pounded on his desk for emphasis and the smiling face became serious:

"I hope the headline writers won't say we have recognized Russia. We have not."

The throng of Washington correspondents that packed the executive wing of the White House this afternoon challenged in size the groups that gathered during those mad days of the banking holiday last March—or during the war days of Woodrow Wilson's administration. An hour before the press conference word had gone forth to all press services and bureaus. Hundreds of papers were waiting for the telegraphed flash and then—once the reporters had gathered—on Roosevelt's personal instructions the doors of his office were closed and locked with the correspondents inside. There was to be no "flash beat" or leak on his announcement.

For three days, the President had held in his hands the eager soviet acceptance of the Roosevelt suggestion, based on his "good neighbor" philosophy, but he timed its announcement for this afternoon, thus diverting the attention of a nation from the unpleasant farmers' strike.

Letters Between Presidents of United States and Russia

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—The correspondence between President Roosevelt and President Kalinin follows:

"The White House, Washington, Oct. 10, 1933.

"My Dear President:

"Since the beginning of my administration I have contemplated the desirability of an effort to end the present abnormal relations between the hundred and twenty-five million people of the United States and the hundred and sixty million people of Russia.

"It is most regrettable that these great peoples, between whom a happy tradition of friendship existed for more than a century to their mutual advantage, should now be without a practical method of communicating directly with each other.

"The difficulties that have created this anomalous situation are serious, but not, in my opinion, insoluble; and difficulties between great nations can be removed only by frank, friendly conversations. If you are of similar mind I should be glad to receive any representatives you may designate to explore with me personally all questions outstanding between our countries.

"Participation in such a discussion would of course not commit either nation to any future course of action, but would indicate a sincere desire to reach a satisfactory solution of the problems involved. It is my hope that such conversations might result in good to the people of both our countries.

"I am, My Dear Mr. President,

"Very sincerely yours,

"[Signed] "FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

"Mr. Mikhail Kalinin, President of the All-Union Central Executive Committee, Moscow."

"Moscow, Oct. 17, 1933.

"My Dear Mr. President:

"I have received your message of Oct. 10.

"I have always considered most abnormal and regrettable a situation wherein, during the last sixteen years, two great republics—the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics—have lacked the usual methods of communication and have been deprived of the benefits which such communication could give. I am glad to note that you also reached the same conclusion.

"There is no doubt that difficulties, present or arising, between two countries can be solved only when direct relations exist between them; and that, on the other hand, they have no chance for solution in the absence of such relations. I shall take the liberty further to express the opinion that the abnormal situation, to which you correctly refer in your message, has an unfavorable effect not only on the interests of the two states concerned, but also on the general international situation, increasing the element of disquiet, complicating the process of consolidating world peace and encouraging forces tending to disturb that peace.

"In accordance with the above I gladly accept your proposal to send to the United States a representative of the soviet government to discuss with you the questions of interest to our countries. The soviet government will be represented by Mr. M. M. Litvinov, people's commissar for foreign affairs, who will come to Washington at a time to be mutually agreed upon.

"I am, My Dear Mr. President,

"Very sincerely yours,

"[Signed] MIKHAIL KALININ.

"Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, Washington."

CHICAGO YOUTH FLEES RUSSIA; DISILLUSIONED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 20.—Going to school in Russia has not come up to the expectations of William Gedritis Jr., 17, son of a Chicago communist. He showed up at the American consulate here today with exactly 20 francs [$1.10] in his pocket to request the assistance of authorities.

Young Gedritis told consular officials he was sent to Russia two years ago to study by his father, whom he describes as a "rabid communist."

When the school closed last summer the youth decided he had had enough of the soviet "Paradise."

RUSSIA PLUNGES S.A.R. PARTY INTO STORMY DEBATE

Social Gathering Winds Up in Battle of Words.

The social gathering of members of the Illinois chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution at the Union League club ended in a stormy debate last night over the question of recognition of the soviet government.

It was a question that had not been scheduled, the night's affair being solely in celebration of the Yorktown end of the Revolutionary war. In this connection it was strictly a social gathering, with wives of members being present. Charles B. Elder, president of the Illinois chapter, presided. United States Attorney Dwight H. Green, Prof. Charles E. Merriam, and Arthur M. McCrillis of Providence, R. I., national president of the S. A. R., spoke.

Talks of Benedict Arnold.

Mr. McCrillis, it was, who led up to the soviet question, he first talked of "Benedict Arnolds of the Constitution," listing as such the American Civil Liberties union, the Socialist party, the Communist party, pacifists, ministers who talk about subjects of which they are ignorant, college professors who think they can teach anything, and internationalists who want a universal flag.

Then, at the end of his talk, Mr. McCrillis asked that every member wire President Roosevelt against recognition of Russia, for, he said, no country which has avowed the overthrow of our own country, should be recognized.

Then Frank Stetson, a tax specialist, made a motion that the meeting should adopt a resolution against recognition. Immediately Prof. Merriam stood up. He argued "this is not the time or place to go on record on such a momentous question."

Objects to Objection.

Dean Traxler, a lawyer, objected to Prof. Merriam's objections, and the professor retaliated saying he had not expected to get into a debate or he would have brought along his books.

Then Alfred H. Burgess spoke against allowing the discussion at all. Some one moved for an adjournment, to which C. C. Bartlett shouted a protest. On a hurried vote the motion to adjournment won by two votes.

LITVINOFF 15 YEARS IN FOREIGN OFFICE; 4 YEARS AS CHIEF

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Maxim Litvinoff, the spokesman for the Russian government in the forthcoming negotiations with President Roosevelt, is a blunt spoken man who for fifteen years has been the driving force in the Moscow foreign office.

He was assistant to George Tchitcherin, commissar for foreign affairs, for eleven years, but actually directed foreign policy most of the time because the commissar was in ill health. Four years ago, Tchitcherin retired and Litvinoff took his place.

Nonaggression pacts with most of Russia's neighbors have been negotiated by Litvinoff. He has attended a dozen international conferences.

It was Litvinoff who signed the agreement with the United States at Riga in 1921 under which Americans were able to carry on a feeding program during the terrible famine in Russia that winter.

He was born in Dielstok, now a part of Poland, of Jewish parents. Litvinoff is a name assumed in the years when he was a refugee from Russia because of his revolutionary activities. His real name is said to have been Finkelstein.

Litvinoff's wife is a cultured Englishwoman. She was formerly Miss Ivy Low, niece of Sir Maurice Low, who served as Washington correspondent of a London newspaper for many years.

U. S. Naval Commander Tries to End Life on Ship

YOKOHAMA, Japan, Oct. 21.—[Saturday.]—(AP)—Commander Francis J. Comerford of the United States navy was removed today from the liner President Jackson on its arrival from Shanghai and taken to a hospital. Ship's officers said he attempted to commit suicide by slashing his wrists and ankles with a razor while the ship was one day out of Yokohama. Although his condition was serious, physicians held out hope for his recovery.

U. S. EMBARGO ON LIQUOR WORRIES FRENCH SHIPPERS

See Action as Directed Chiefly Against Nation.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The American embargo on liquor has thrown a scare into the French wine and liquor interests, who see it as directed chiefly against France.

About 1,000,000 cases of champagne have been invoiced to Bermuda to await the repeal of prohibition. The shippers are consulting their lawyers to learn the effect of the embargo. They are particularly worried as to how long it will be effective.

Liquor Shares Drop in London.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The announcement made yesterday of the United States embargo on the importation of spirits had the effect of slackening business in distillers shares on the stock exchange today.

Recently these shares have risen fairly rapidly in anticipation of an increased demand from the United States. Yesterday, however, the shares dropped two shillings and today another six pence to 81 shillings 6 pence [$18.50].

Investors frequently have been warned against too much optimism in the expected demand for liquor in the United States following repeal.

Does Not Affect Canada.

OTTAWA, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The embargo imposed by President Roosevelt on importations of spirits into the United States does not at present affect Canada, officials of the national revenue department said today.

The export of liquor from Canada to the United States is banned by this country.

Efforts have been made by liquor interests to have the Canadian ban raised, but with no success. The statute specifies that no liquor can be legally exported to countries into which importation is prohibited.

WALL STREET BANKS PREPARE TO EASE UP ON CREDIT TO RUSSIA

[Copyright: 1933: By the Associated Press.]

New York, Oct. 20.—With the announcement of the forthcoming Roosevelt-Litvinov recognition conversations it was learned authoritatively tonight that several Wall street banks are preparing to ease credit immediately for increased soviet sales by discounting acceptances of the Amtorg Trading corporation.

In addition to discounts—something that Wall street has shied away from since the soviet repudiation of debts—it was learned the banks stand ready to make loans direct to Amtorg, the Russian trading agency.

One of the largest of the financial institutions has already notified several industries engaged in trade with Russia of its discounting intention.

It was also felt certain in informed quarters here that the Washington conversations between the President and the soviet commissar for foreign affairs will lead to a heavy extension of federal credit.

While it was thought likely this will eventually take the form of a government guarantee on soviet sales—as in the case of several European countries—it appeared the credit extension would first come through direct loans from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

MINERS WAVER ON PICKETING AS LEADERS DIFFER

5,000 Still Massed in Springfield.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 20. — Coal miners affiliated with the Progressive union who came here on a "holiday" movement yesterday to picket two pits employing United Mine Workers were urged to return to work tonight by their president, Claude Pearcy of Gillespie. Unless a left wing group advocating direct action proves to have more influence than Pearcy, the "holiday" is at an end. Rain is helping the arguments of the more conservative leaders.

Until almost daylight this morning, a crowd of more than 10,000 Progressives and members of their women's auxiliary intended to picket the Capitol and Peerless mines owned by the Peabody Coal company of Chicago. A lack of leadership in their ranks, the presence of National Guardsmen and the unrest caused by inner union politics combined to dissolve the plans. Half the throng went home, but at least 5,000 still were here tonight.

Woman Urges Direct Action.

It remained to be seen whether the leaders of the left wing—Mrs. Agnes Burns Wieck of Belleville, president of the auxiliary, and Pat Ansbury of West Frankfort, a firebrand among the radicals of the union—could keep enough of this crowd in town to picket the mines tomorrow morning.

Speaking to them in a ball park grand stand in the midst of a driving rain this morning, Pearcy told those who have been working to "return to the mines and protect our contracts." He reminded them that if they stay away from work longer than two days contracts would be dissolved and the union will fail.

"There is a group among you which is creating dissension," Pearcy said. "I'm for solidarity. How many men want to go back on the picket line in the morning?"

About three hundred among the five thousand held up their hands and cried "Yes!" There were many "No's." Most of the men were silent and Pearcy continued his conservative counseling.

Argues Against Holiday.

While not advising against picketing in so many words, the union president did make it plain that working miners should stick to their jobs so that the union could continue. More than $250,000 in charity assessments, levied upon the working men for the benefit of those not working, have been collected in the last fourteen months, he recalled.

Pearcy spoke after Mrs. Wieck had urged the miners to continue the holiday. The auxiliary president is a potent influence among the miners' wives. She demanded that the holiday last until 13,000 Progressives now without work are given employment in mines manned at present by United Mine Workers.

She characterized the report on the Illinois situation made yesterday by Donald R. Richberg, counsel for the NRA, as "a slap in the face," and had many unkind words for the NRA itself. Ansbury gave similar advice.

Springfield Leader Differs.

Blunt, conflicting advice was given by Dan McGill, undisputed leader of the Springfield Progressives.

"Don't stand around in a ball park in the rain," he said. "Do something; if you're going to picket, picket. It's time to go out on the picket lines right now. Close the Peabody mines; that's fine and dandy, but I don't think you ought to ask the Progressives who are working to help you picket."

There was applause and condemnation alike for both speakers, but more interest was shown in Pearcy's advice. Darkness came on and the driving rain continued and it was late when the meeting broke up. An exodus to trucks which brought many of the crowd here was noted after adjournment and it seemed that a large number would leave town at once.

Meanwhile, three National Guard companies under command of Maj. Omer E. Davenport of Decatur remained in the state arsenal across from the capitol waiting for tomorrow.

Submits Objections to Horner.

Before he left for Gillespie Pearcy presented to Gov. Horner the objections the Progressives have to the Richberg report, which advocated the continuing of mining operations under existing contracts.

The principal request was that all striking miners be replaced in the mines where they formerly worked. This would reemploy 11,000 members of his union not working at present, Pearcy told reporters.

The union also wants "imported" miners barred from work in the Illinois mines. It seeks equal footing with the United Mine Workers of America with all operators and contends that no operators have actual contracts with the United group at present because the contracts were signed by officials without an expression from the union members during a "state of emergency."

If the NRA eventually decides against the Progressive suggestions Pearcy predicted that "the only thing we can do is go into court." This plan, it was said, contemplates the seeking of an injunction barring mine operators employing United miners from working their mines. The petition for an injunction would state that since Progressives formerly worked the pits as United miners and have been on strike they should still be classed as employés and given the jobs now held by members of the United union.

BOY, 13, MANGLED BY TRAIN, GRINS AT HIS RESCUERS

Carl McFarland, 13 years old, 505 South Eastern avenue, Joliet, was walking to school on the tracks of the Alton railroad yesterday when a freight train struck him, crushing one of his legs and breaking the other.

He retained consciousness, however, and when police arrived ten minutes later to take him to a hospital he grinned at them and said, "Hello, pals."

At St. Joseph's hospital surgeons told him after he had submitted to a blood transfusion that they would have to amputate the crushed leg.

"My father was killed by a train four years ago in Cincinnati," he remarked.

An hour after the operation the boy died of shock and loss of blood.

CHICAGO POLICE TO TALK IN OWN CAREFREE STYLE

Won't Follow N.Y. Rule for Pure English.

In detective bureau circles yesterday there was for a time a certain amount of apprehension. Dispatches from New York told of the engagement of a college professor to instruct the police of that city in the use of pure and academic English. It would be useless to deny that a face turned pale here and there. Such radical innovations have a habit of spreading.

But by nightfall members of the pickpocket, bombing, homicide, and other details were smiling peacefully. Chicago will not follow the dangerous precedent set by its eastern rival.

From Mayor Kelly himself came the assurance that the police may still address hoodlums in the happy and carefree manner which insures a perfect understanding between speaker and listener. From Police Commissioner Allman came the statement that Chicago policemen have always used good English and need no further instruction.

An Imaginary Conversation.

"Can you imagine," asked the mayor, "Lieut. Ray Crane there saying to a gangster: 'Please accompany me to the detective bureau to sit for your photograph,' instead of growling: 'Come on, hoodlum, and be mugged'?"

The lieutenant is six feet two inches tall and weighs 225 pounds. None present could imagine it.

Lieut. Otto Erlanson of the homicide detail expressed the pious hope that the New York force would derive much benefit from the English courses.

"I'm sure it's a good idea—for New York," he said. "As for my detail, I may say that we never use any but the most perfect English in our investigation of killings."

Sergt. Wacholz Explains.

In the headquarters assigned to the pickpocket detail Sergts. Arthur Wacholz, William Hosna, and Thomas Walsh were discussing matters of the hour with one Arthur Shea, a pickpocket of twenty-five years' experience. The three sergeants had been among the most alarmed at the suggestion that only pure English should be used in the verbal investigation of crime.

"I was ridin' the shorts" [a short street car ride], explained Sergt. Wacholz, "when I saw this cannon [pickpocket] puttin' the eye on a sucker. I knew he was only a stall [a pickpocket's accomplice]. He never put the clips [hands] on a poke [pocketbook] in his life. But I couldn't finger [identify] the stall, so I sneezed [arrests] him."

"There's smart coppers and there's chump coppers," said Mr. Shea. "And this fuzz is no chump."

The idea of using good English in dealing with pickpockets aroused merriment in the pickpocket detail.

Haste Leads to Arrest of Suspect in Holdup

Detective Harry Neuman of the Des Plaines street station was driving to work last night when he saw a man depart hastily in a cab from Joe Robinson's tavern at 518 West Van Buren street. Neuman dashed into the place and learned that Robinson had just been robbed of $30. He then traced the cab and passenger to the tavern at 1416 Van Buren street. Inside he found Robert Conway, 32 years old, 5344 North Latrobe avenue, and arrested him. Conway was armed. He was identified by Robinson as the bandit.

OLD IRONSIDES ACTS AS FLAGSHIP OF FLEET ON 136TH BIRTHDAY

San Pedro, Cal., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—The frigate Constitution [Old Ironsides] will become temporary flagship of the United States fleet tomorrow, on the occasion of her 136th birthday, with Rear Admiral David F. Sellers, commander in chief, piped over the side for inspection, and for the purpose of breaking his four starred flag from the historic old vessel's main truck. The Constitution will fly a miniature pennant cut from its original pennant borne in the Barbary coast war and the war of 1812, the blue bunting with white stars flying from a height of 188 feet above waterline, on the tallest truck and shipmast in the world. More than four million persons have boarded Old Ironsides since she began her history telling cruise to American ports on both oceans, on July 2, 1931.

HOLD UP POLICE STATION, CARRY OFF MACHINE GUN

Peru, Ind., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Two gunmen invaded the Peru city police station late tonight, herded three officers into the basement, and escaped with a machine gun, a high powered rifle and two revolvers.

It was the second time in less than a week that desperadoes had raided Indiana city police stations in search of arms. Last Saturday night, three men obtained a machine gun, rifles and a number of revolvers from the Auburn police station.

Officers locked in a cell by the gunmen at Auburn said they believed the raiders resembled some of the ten convicts who escaped from the Indiana state prison at Michigan City Sept. 26.

INVENTS DEVICE TO HARNESS WIND FOR USE OF MAN

Electric Power Generated by Spinning Tower.

Burlington, N. J., Oct. 20.—(AP)—A cylindrical metal tower, 90 feet tall and 28 feet broad, was set spinning toplike at 50 miles an hour here today to illustrate the possibility of tapping the enormous power in wind on a commercial scale.

The tower is the land version of the pipe like rotors which several years ago drove Anton Flettner's rotor ship across the Atlantic. It is an experiment, the first step toward erecting in some wind favored locality a battery of not less than 20 of these great towers, each mounted on a 150 ton wheeled truck, which it is to drive around a circular railway. Generators geared to the truck axles are to develop the electrical power.

Bends Steel Bars.

The rotor today was not mounted on a truck. It was anchored firmly in an open meadow between the Delaware river and the wide marshes. It showed its force by pulling against and bending four steel bars, each two inches thick, six wide and 36 long.

With the wind at 10 miles an hour and the tower's circumference rotating at a 50 mile speed, the tower exerted a pull on these bars of 8,000 pounds. This pull was at right angles to the direction of the wind. It showed the tower trying to move bodily in this right angle direction. It was an illustration of the same principal which enables a baseball pitcher to throw a curve by spinning the ball.

In the tower, as in the ball, the wind striking the oncoming edge of spin was compressed. On the opposite edge, where the spin was in the same direction as the wind, a partial vacuum was formed. So the compression of air on one side and the vacuum on the other caused the tower to try to move at right angles to the wind.

Got Idea from Spin of Bullet.

To get this effect the spin of the rotor must be faster than the speed of the wind. But when it is faster, the cross current force set up is tremendously greater than the force of the wind. This cross force, the rotor's potential power, may be five to six times that of the wind.

Julius D. Madaras is the inventor of the device. He got the idea from studying the spin of a rifle bullet.

Small models of the proposed rotor plant have been built and operated in wind tunnels at the University of Michigan and elsewhere under Mr. Madaras' direction. In the present outdoor, full-scale experiment he has the backing of the Detroit Edison company and the Standard Gas and Electric company.

Ousted Worker Admits He Set Fire "to Get Even"

Adolph Christel, 20 years old, 4557 Princeton avenue, confessed yesterday that he started the fire Monday at the plant of the Wizard Company, Inc., 5253 West 65th street, Summit, which caused damage estimated from $10,000 to $20,000. Christel, a riveter who was discharged on Oct. 2, told Assistant State's Attorney Richard D. Austin that he started the fire "to get even." Officials of the company said they had discharged Christel because he was spreading unrest among the other workers.

DUKE PASSES OUT $180,000 IN HIS PRIVATE LOTTERY

Evades Law with 'Mystery Fund.'

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Contributions to the duke of Atholl's "mystery fund" were concluded today with the distribution of $180,000 to 748 individuals in prizes ranging from $50 to $10,000.

Because British laws forbid lotteries, the campaign was conducted with the catch phrase, "Trust the duke," and the distribution was made with the hope that "it will provide timely assistance in case of ill health or misfortune coming to them, their relatives or friends."

Two Millionaires Win.

Two millionaires won prizes. Lady Houston received $125 and Lady Carson $50. Four ticket holders won $10,000, four won $5,000, six won $2,500, eighteen won $1,000, forty won $500, 100 won $250, 176 won $125, and 400 won $50.

The duke, irritated because much English money was being poured into the Irish Sweepstakes, started some weeks ago a contest of "skill and chance," but withdrew it under threats of official interference. He followed with a drive to obtain 10 shillings [about $2.50] from a "million sportsmen" for the benefit of English charities. Tickets were marked "canceled," but it was freely hinted that lucky supporters could expect something.

At the conclusion 337,784 contributors, mostly in England, had bought tickets. The net receipts were about $586,000 after the 10 per cent commission to ticket sellers and $174,025 salaries to distributors had been paid. There were a few additional donations, making total receipts $592,815.

$295,010 for Charity.

The auditor's report today showed expenses of $117,805 for printing, postage and salary bills, then $295,010 was turned over to a board of trustees for charity, leaving $180,000 for distribution. One item of the report was $5,250 for legal fees.

It is pointed out that the duke spent something like 43 per cent of the gross takings for expenses, but the auditor in his statement declares it is impossible to compare the figures with the Irish Sweepstakes, whose full expenses never are disclosed.

Against the highly skilled staff in Dublin, the duke of Atholl with an amateur organization did badly, however. Assuming that each contributor bought one ticket, the campaign fell short of its aims by two-thirds.

HOTEL ROBBERS ROUTED BY FIRE OF DETECTIVE

Three armed men who tried a robbery last night in the Sovereign hotel, 6200 Kenmore avenue, were routed by the fire of Roy Bakken, house detective. He reported that his bullets struck one of the bandits and bloodstains on the lobby floor substantiated his story.

The trio first approached Earl Nott, the manager, and compelled him to leave the desk and go into his office. There they also herded Robert Kennedy, a bellboy, and Miss Catherine Murphy, telephone operator. While two of the men guarded these prisoners and took $90 from Nott, the third went into the lounge.

Seeing Bakken there, he ordered him to raise his hands. Instead of obeying, the detective drew his pistol and fired. The bandit returned the fire. Then, with the assistance of the other two, he fled to the street. A fourth man awaited them there in an automobile and all escaped.

CITIZENS' GROUP HITS PROPOSED SCHOOL LEASES

Calls Loop Tenants' Plan Unfair to Public.

The Citizens' Association of Chicago yesterday presented to the school board a report on the leases of school lands in the loop, recommending that the board rejected the present proposals of the lessees for new leases as unfair to the public, and that the board start proceedings at once to cancel the leases of those tenants in arrears on their rent.

The report outlines the history of the eight leases on lots owned by the school board in the block bounded by State, Dearborn, Madison and Monroe streets. The leases run until 1985, with provisions for revaluation of the land every ten years, the rent to be 6 per cent annually of the appraised value of the land.

The leases as they now stand were made in 1885, and each decennial revaluation was the subject of a court contest by the tenants. The school board won these contests until that over the revaluation of 1925. That one increased the valuations 79 per cent over those for 1915.

Court Orders Revaluation.

The tenants contested it in court, and after long litigation the Supreme court, in April, 1932, ordered the land revalued on the ground that the appraisers had considered as part of the value the fact that while owned by the school board, the ground is tax exempt. The court held that since the school board could not pass this tax exemption on the private purchasers of the lots, the feature should not affect the appraisals.

Edward R. Johnston, special attorney for the school board, filed a cross-bill before Judge Denis E. Sullivan in the Superior court, to whom the case was remanded for new valuations, asking that the valuations be made at once. On pleas for extensions to permit negotiations with the board on new leases, made by former Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson, representing some of the lessees, and agreed to by the board's counsel, hearing on this cross-bill has been delayed.

"We are informed," states the citizens' association report, "that in the summer of 1932 the lessees of the school fund properties were solicited to sign a contract authorizing Asher J. Goldfine, a young real estate broker of pleasing address to negotiate on their behalf for a revision of their leases that would eliminate the ten year revaluation clause and would give them vastly lower rentals."

Two Rent Proposals.

Two rental proposals came from these negotiations. The first, drawn up by appraisers appointed by a board named by a former Republican mayor, would have extended the leases 99 years from the present time, wiped out the revaluation clause, fixed rents at 5 per cent, instead of 6 per cent, of the valuation of the properties, and increased those valuations on a fixed sliding scale at a much lower rate than they have increased in the past.

The average rental, the citizens' association found, for the whole 99 years, would be less than that under the 1925 valuations, which totaled $9,485,320. During the period of the proposed new leases, the board would get $6,758,136 less in rents than it would if the valuations remained unchanged for the whole period at the 1925 figures.

Mayor Cermak squelched this lease plan shortly before his death, but it was revived later. A conference between school attorneys and Attorney Ettelson and other representatives of the tenants then brought forth a new proposal last May.

New Rentals Even Lower.

These proposed rentals were even lower than those of the first negotiations, and would yield the board $13,000,000 less during the period of the proposed leases than it would get by leaving the 1925 valuations unchanged.

"We are of the opinion that the self-respecting trustees of the Chicago school system cannot afford to approve the proposals for revision of downtown leases now before them, whether based on the sliding scale of rentals or the so-called 'conference figures,'" the report states.

The report goes on to point out that forfeiture of the leases of those lessees who persist in refusal to pay rent need not take much time, since the leases provide for such procedure.

Sees Settlement in 60 Days.

School Trustee Andrew O. Jackson announced yesterday that a settlement of the lease controversy is expected within sixty days. Trustee Jackson, who is chairman of a special school board committee, made his announcement following a conference with representatives of the lessees.

A proposal that the leases run for 50 years will be submitted to the lessees by Attorney Ettelson.

"The lessees want 99 year leases, but members of the school board would rather have them run for 50 years," explained Trustee Jackson. "If one or more of the lessees plan to erect new buildings on the property, which would bring additional taxes, longer leaseholds might be considered."

It is said that a 23 story office building is being planned for the lot at 31-41 South Dearborn street, which is leased by the estate of Daniel F. Crilly.

CHARGES LOS ANGELES FAILS TO AID NEEDY KIN OF FIRE VICTIMS

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—Charges there has been direct suffering among families of some of the men who lost their lives in the recent Griffith park blaze and that no relief has been given by Los Angeles county welfare department other than a cash donation of $25 and a package of foodstuffs were aired before the board of supervisors today by a group of citizens.

Not only were families of the victims neglected by county charity officials but the true figures of the death list have been withheld, the protestants charged. They asserted the actual number of men who lost their lives in the blaze totaled 52 instead of 29 as officially reported.

1931 DELINQUENT TAX SALES TO BE STARTED DEC. 4

750,000 Pieces of Real Estate Now on List.

TAX COLLECTIONS.

Real estate tax collections yesterday were $558,999, making a total of $79,999,397 collected since enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act began on April 28. The day's collection of real estate taxes and the uncollected taxes for the last four years follow:

	1928.	1929.
Oct. 20	$ 24,367	$ 74,955
Uncollected	16,948,044	45,080,374
	1930.	1931.
Oct. 20	$ 137,945	$ 321,732
Uncollected	71,706,548	74,300,750

The day's collection of 1931 personal property taxes totaled $1,003.

Sale of properties on which the 1931 real estate taxes are unpaid will begin Dec. 4, it was announced yesterday by County Treasurer McDonough. There are 750,000 items of real estate in the county at present on which taxes have not been paid. The number to be sold will be considerably fewer, however, because of payments that will be made in the interim.

Await Supreme Court Decision.

The second installment of 1931 taxes on nearly all of the 430,000 properties involved in the order of the board of appeals reducing the assessment 15 per cent has not been paid. These properties are homes and small flat buildings. It is expected that property owners in this class will make their payments within thirty days after the state Supreme court has ruled on the validity of the order of the board of appeals, and the properties will be removed from the treasurer's delinquent list.

Judgment Must Precede Sale.

Before selling tax delinquent properties the treasurer must obtain judgments for the amount of taxes in the County court.

County Judge Jarecki yesterday appointed the treasurer receiver for 48 income bearing properties to collect back taxes totaling $97,000 under the Kerner-Skarda act.

SHOOTS AT WINDOW SMASHERS.

Two window breaking burglars fled without loot early yesterday when Joseph Gary, a watchman, emptied his revolver at them after they had tossed an iron bar through the window of the Neumode Hosiery company, 2032 East 71st street.

ALDERMAN CLARK BEGINS WORK ON 1934 CITY BUDGET

Difficulty in Estimating Revenue Revealed.

Ald. John S. Clark [30th], chairman of the city council finance committee, began work on the 1934 city corporate budget yesterday by estimating revenues in a conference with Victor S. Petterson, deputy city controller. Their figures, and variations based on their arguments, revealed that the expected revenue may be between $31,158,000 and $45,158,000. Appropriations for the current year totaled $47,883,051, and expenditures will be in the neighborhood of $46,000,000.

The range in the estimates is due to uncertainties resulting from Cook county's tax difficulties. These include the 15 per cent reduction in valuation on small homes and flats ordered by the board of tax appeals; Assessor Jacobs' announced cut of 25 per cent in real estate valuations; personal property tax revenue; the deficit that may result from the valuation cuts; and the amount of revenue the city may expect from the liquor traffic.

How Figure Is Reached.

The basic figures used by the two fiscal experts and their staffs were: $32,398,000 obtained by applying the city's corporate rate of $1.29 to an estimated 1934 valuation of $2,511,000,000; 10 per cent loss and cost in collections amounting to $3,239,800; miscellaneous revenue of $13,000,000 and additional liquor revenue of $3,000,000. This gives a total of $45,158,000.

If the state tax on alcoholic beverages leaves the city little revenue from that source the total revenues may only be $42,158,000. Deducting from that a $7,000,000 deficit as of Dec. 31, 1933, resulting from the effect of Jacobs' 25 per cent valuation cut, the city could appropriate only $35,158,000. Then, if the 15 per cent cut is upheld in the supreme court, revenues would be further decreased by $3,600,000, leaving only $31,500,000 for the corporate fund.

"One difficulty of building a budget on the minimum figure is that in the 1933 budget the appropriations for police, fire, health, street lights and street cleaning totaled $32,700,000," said Ald. Clark. "If we take a less severe course and appropriate $35,158,000 the city will be back on the expenditure basis of 1920.

Urge More Personal Property.

"It seems to me that these figures place an obligation on the assessor to write more personal property on the tax books. City employés shouldn't be cut more than the 21 per cent they have taken during the past two years.

"I think it would be sound financing to fund the deficit of 1932 and 1933 instead of trying to absorb it in one year."

Mayor Kelly has taken the stand that the city's expenditures must be cut to fit the revenues. He created the Chicago recovery administration to aid in effecting further governmental economies and to bring together the heads of the other local governments so that their budgets would conform to the same pattern. He said, however, that there would be no cuts in the personnel of the police and fire departments.

STATE CURBING GAS TAX EVADERS, OFFICIAL SAYS

Replies to Report of Cheating.

Joseph J. Rice, state director of finance, arrived in Chicago from Springfield last night with a portfolio of statistics and statements indicating that the administration is waging a successful war against gasoline tax evaders. The gas tax collections for September totaled $2,970,165, the third largest for any month since the motor fuel excise went into effect in August, 1929. Gas tax collections in August of this year were $2,771,084; for September of last year the figure was $2,753,188.

The copies of the records which Mr. Rice brought to Chicago will be presented to a meeting here on Tuesday of officials collecting gasoline taxes in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin. The purpose of the meeting is to coördinate efforts against gasoline bootlegging.

Charge State Is Cheated.

Mr. Rice opened his portfolio at the railroad station to comment on a published report to the effect that gasoline bootleggers have cheated the highway fund of five million dollars and are continuing to cheat. The report was made by Jonathan Cook & Co., certified public accountants employed by former Gov. Emmerson to audit the department of finance, but no longer on the state pay roll.

"When the gasoline tax was first imposed in Illinois," said Mr. Rice, commenting on this report, "it took time for my predecessor to organize his collecting agency. There were many evasions. The Cook company, in mentioning the $5,000,000 figure, undoubtedly refers to the state's early experiences with the motor fuel excise.

"The legitimate gasoline distributors, ever on the alert to detect any unfair competition by tax dodgers, report to me that the bootlegging is on the wane. As for the one company mentioned in the published account of gasoline bootlegging—the Active Oil company—it is in a receivership, and the receiver, as an officer of the court, is protecting the state's interests in taxes.

Accountants on Staff.

"The department of public finance no longer employs an outside auditing firm. On its staff are 26 accountants and inspectors. Since June 1, in the routine of their duties, they have gone over the books of 264 of the 900 licensed distributors in Illinois and they have collected $23,187 additional taxes from these companies.

"When I took office the first of this year many of the distributors were delinquent in their taxes because banks had closed with their funds. We have collected $105,000 of the old accounts and the distributors are keeping tax payments up to date on their current sales.

"The Illinois Petroleum Marketers, representing the independent filling stations of the state, and the Petroleum association, representing the big oil companies, have commended my efforts against the gas bootleggers."

State's Attorney Courtney said he had received no recent report of renewed gas tax evasions in Cook county, but that if any one had any evidence he would prosecute the bootleggers as he has in the past.

NAZI GERMANY AGAIN EXTENDS HAND TO FRANCE

Goebbels Insists Reich Opposes War.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 20.—"We are ready to make great sacrifices to reach an agreement with France, only our honor must remain unsullied," Dr. Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda and public enlightenment said tonight as he opened the government's campaign for the Nov. 12 plebiscite on Chancellor Hitler's foreign policy.

Goebbels played on the emotions of the cheering thousands in the sports palace. He announced that the slogan, "Germans refuse to be treated as an inferior nation," has been adopted.

Defends Bolt from League.

"We refuse to sit at a table where we are only allowed on suffrance," the minister said in defending his government's withdrawal from the league of nations and the disarmament policy.

"At Geneva others have talked themselves into a frame of mind which considers us a second class nation," he continued. "Very well, let them, but not while we are there. We do not shout about tearing up the treaty of Versailles. All we have done is to say, 'Adieu, gentlemen, until you recognize our point of honor.'

"As soon as others do that we shall extend our hand and try to work to restore peace.

"We have been tolerant with our enemies. We have been patient. Neither have we threatened or humiliated any one, and we have not rearmed. Yet the world is unfair to us. It claims we terrorize the Jews, yet in the past the Jews have done us more harm than we have done them.

Ready "to Forget Wrongs."

"Persons who fled Germany have been spreading lies, but we are relying on time to establish the truth. We will not let our enemies make us outcasts and lepers among nations. Our efforts for friendship must find an echo. There is nothing we will not do to save Europe the anguish of a new war. We have a right to be bitter at the treatment the world gave us, but we are ready to forget the wrongs others have inflicted upon us.

"We will go ahead with constructive work. In eight months time we have achieved much. We have reëstablished decent public opinion and pulled the poisonous fangs of the Jewish press. We have cut down the unemployed by one-third."

Goebbels insisted that freedom of opinion still exists in Germany, but derided foreign governments "which permit their press to attack them."

"Germany is more democratic than the western states which originated democracy," he added. "Our government is democratic because it is fulfilling the wishes of the people."

Refers to Arson Trial.

Goebbels said he deplored the "false objectivity which induced Germans to stage a fussy trial of the Dutch pyromaniac, Marinus van der Lubbe, instead of stringing him up, as well as his friends, in front of the reichstag within 24 hours after the act."

In conclusion he called upon the nation to demonstrate to the world on Nov. 12 that all Germany is behind Hitler.

Two reasons why Germany resigned from the league were offered today. The semi-official Wolff News agency said the league lost the right to represent the civilized world "because it had become an anti-Fascist mass meeting and a platform for Jewish and Marxist oratory."

The officially inspired Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz declared that the allies' refusal to admit Germany from the start estranged the German people from the league.

Confiscate Book on Warfare.

An official communique announced the confiscation of "Military Science," a book written by Prof. Ewald Banse.

"The views Prof. Banse expressed in the book are entirely his own; but do not correspond with those of the German government," the communique said.

Prof. Banse, a member of the faculty at the Brunswick Technical university, recently was appointed to the chair of military science. His book claimed that biological warfare "is undoubtedly the given weapon for a nation that has been disarmed and rendered defenseless." He cited as methods of such warfare infection of drinking water by typhus bacilli and the introduction of plague by infected rats.

NOBEL WINNER

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The 1933 Nobel prize for medicine was awarded tonight to Dr. Thomas Hunt Morgan of Pasadena, Cal. Dr. Morgan has written a number of works on heredity, sex and embryological subjects. The award was made in recognition of Dr. Morgan's discoveries concerning the eugenic functions of chromosomes.

Dr. Morgan, former professor of zoölogy at Columbia university, was born in Lexington, Ky., in 1866. Among his works in zoölogy are "The Development of the Frog's Egg," "Regeneration," "Evolution and Heredity and Sex," "Critique of the Theory of Evolution," and "The Physical Basis of Heredity."

He also has written papers on biological and embryological subjects. In 1924 he was awarded the Darwin medal of the Royal society in London for valuable work in zoölogy and especially for research in heredity and cytology. In 1931 he was elected a member of the French Academy of Sciences.

LEAGUE INSISTS BERLIN IS BOUND BY THE COVENANT

Says It Is Linked Up with Versailles Treaty.

GENEVA, Oct. 20.—(AP)—League of nations circles held the general view tonight that Germany's resignation from the league would affect the cause of disarmament disastrously.

But regarding the league itself, Geneva believed that the council of nations got along without Germany up to 1926, that it can survive now without the reich, and that Germany herself will be the loser.

The German consul, it was learned, will deliver Germany's official notification of Chancellor Hitler's action, which was first announced last Saturday, tomorrow.

Officials of the league pointed out, meanwhile, that Chancellor Hitler's government is bound indefinitely by the league covenant, since it is a part of the Versailles treaty.

Reveal Duce's Efforts.

League quarters believed Hitler's action was occasioned, at least partly, by the conviction that the four power arms conversations had not advanced.

They said Premier Mussolini of Italy had caused Hitler to delay the resignation while other states were being sounded out, but when it was apparent that nothing would come of this move, Hitler decided to break with Geneva.

It was considered probable that with the resumption of the arms discussions next week a committee would be appointed to draft principles and thereby avoid the appearance of a failure.

Propose 3 Power Alliance.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—French senators urged their government tonight to erect a three power alliance of France, Great Britain, and Italy to supplant the peace pact those nations signed last July with Germany.

This development followed the emergence of the opinion among cabinet and parliament members that the four power agreement was killed by Germany's resignation from the league of nations.

Britain Publishes White Paper.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 20.—In an effort to end the controversy between Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon of Great Britain and Foreign Minister Baron Konstantin von Neurath of Germany over what actually happened at Geneva that led to the withdrawal of the Germans from the disarmament conference and the league of nations, the British foreign office tonight published as a white paper an account of the speeches and other proceedings at the bureau [steering committee] of the conference with a short introduction giving the work of the conference chronologically from March 27, when the general commission adopted the British disarmament draft as the basis for negotiations.

The white paper contains nothing that has not been published piecemeal as it occurred, but it is felt by the foreign office that the document, bringing the whole work of the conference into a connected report, will draw attention away from the personal controversy and focus it on the realities of the situation.

The report does not touch on the private conversations between the statesmen. It is on these conversations that Germany relies for most of her case.

Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, in a speech tonight, made a plea for fair play for Germany. The viscount said the disarmament conference must continue and urged Great Britain to take a courageous lead in striving to obtain a disarmament convention fair to all concerned.

GERMANY TO ABANDON ITS PRISON CAMPS; INMATES BEING FREED

BERLIN, Oct. 20.—(AP)—It was authoritatively learned today from a high storm troop leader that just as quickly as conditions permit, the concentration camps are to be abandoned.

Whereas about 100 such camps existed in June, these have been reduced to ten. For Berlin, for example, fourteen concentration camps were operated in June, while now there are only two, at Oranienburg and Sonnenburg. The workers who were sent to concentration camps for political reasons practically have all been freed, so that according to the Nazi informant, only political leaders and criminal elements remain.

Among those sent to the camps, the storm troop leader said, were numerous Nazis, since the party exercises the strictest discipline.

In connection with the recent expression of Chancellor Hitler that the Nov. 12 reichstag election would reconcile the entire nation provided his opponents stood for German honor and love of peace, the chancellor has ordered that the demarkation line between those who were party members before Jan. 30 and those who joined later must disappear. All must be regarded equally as loyal Nazis.

AUSTRIAN POLICE ARE ORDERED TO SHOOT NAZIS

Drastic Steps Taken to End Demonstrations.

VIENNA, Oct. 20.—(AP)—With police ordered to "shoot to kill" Nazi demonstrators in one section and a strict curb on railroad employes who "further anti-government movements," Austria today tightened its lines against German propaganda.

To impress the populace of Dornbirn, in the Vorarlberg district, with the seriousness of the government's intentions regarding the Nazi movement in Austria, the federal police commissar gave warning that any one refusing to halt when ordered to do so will be fired upon.

Warnings Were Ignored.

The hoisting of Nazi flags on factory chimneys and the plastering of trains with swastikas has continued in Dornbirn despite previous warnings.

There was no immediate denial from the government of the assertion in the secretly circulated Socialist organ Wahrheit that approximately one-tenth of the Austrian army has deserted and gone to Germany.

The paper asserted this number includes soldiers which actually are on German soil, not troops in the so-called "barbed wire border," protected with an average of only about one man to a mile, the guards being mostly green auxiliaries recruited from the heimwehr [home guard].

Business Leaders Under Fire.

Meanwhile Vice Chancellor Emil Fey's paper, Abend Zeitung, called attention to serious desertions in another quarter.

Alleging that many business and industrial leaders, particularly in the Tyrol and Styria, were trying to sabotage the government's program, the paper warned them they will be dealt with as "traitors and enemies of the people."

The government's decree against railroad employes authorized immediate dismissal of active workers and the cancellation of pensions of retired ones who were known to be furthering movements against the government.

It was not known whether the decree would affect first the Nazi workers or those who are members of the Socialist railway unions. Instructions have been circulated among the latter to be prepared to strike if the unions are touched.

The government operated railways have 65,000 active employes and 73,000 pensioners.

GERMANY 'LINES UP' CHILDREN OF U.S. TOURISTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 20.—American families touring Germany must line up their children before authorities if they desire to obtain their full allowance of frozen marks for holiday expenses, the government announced today. All foreign visitors, including children, are allowed to draw 1,000 frozen marks [about $333] every ten days, but must appear in person when applying for the cash.

U. S. Citizen Sent to Jail.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

STUTTGART, Oct. 20.—Gottlob Bittler, a naturalized American citizen of German birth and a resident of Reading, Pa., and Alfred Deiterich, whose home also is in Reading, but who is still a German citizen, were sentenced here today to prison terms and were fined for violating the German exchange control laws.

They were charged with bringing German securities obtained in the United States and Switzerland to Germany and selling them at a profit and trying to dispose of the proceeds without the consent of the exchange control. Defendants pleaded that they had followed the advice of a German-American paper, which had pointed out that German securities bought in the United States could be sold in the Reich at a profit of 30 per cent, owing to the decline of the dollar rate.

Bittler was sentenced to nine months in jail and fined 5,000 marks. Dieterich's penalty was five months in jail and 1,000 marks.

FLORIDA LOOKS TO NRA FOR GOOD TOURIST SEASON

Also Happy Over Returns from Citrus Crop.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—Florida is making preparations for a good tourist season as one of the prospective fruits of the NRA. It is also looking forward to great returns from its citrus industry, largely as a silver lining to the hurricane which devastated competing grapefruit areas in Texas, Porto Rico, and the Isle of Pines. The state and the counties have been cutting cost of government and the pickup in employment last month was rated second only to that of Oregon.

At Miami the last week is reported to have brought a perceptible betterment in business. Taxicab drivers say their commissions have doubled, an index to the arrival of early visitors. Last season was a good normal one, thousands being attracted from the north by the lure of cheap living expenses during the winter.

Higher Rents and Prices.

Rents and prices this season are expected to be somewhat higher than last, but still far below normal years, and the east coast and gulf coast towns are looking for more travel southward than last winter. In this they are forfeited by the advance plans of the transportation agencies, rail and water, who say signs are for larger volume of business.

The serial revolution in Cuba also is expected by Miami to reduce the travel to Havana this winter, keeping the money in Florida. Refugees from Cuba are coming in numbers to Florida, but, where the exiles in the Machado régime were generally well to do, those now fleeing the island are reported mostly low in funds and not likely to add much to the wealth of the Florida resort towns.

At Jacksonville, the excellent position in which the citrus industry seems to find itself is the main talk. The state has little manufacturing industry, oueside of naval stores, lumbering and making of containers for fruits. So far as the effects of the NRA upon industry are concerned, the state looks to reap benefits from improvements which may be registered in other states.

Big Trade in Grapefruit.

In the last few years, Florida by its own efforts has built up a flourishing export in grapefruit, sending the eye squirting breakfast fruit to England in refrigerator ships from Jacksonville and Tampa. This has been done without the NRA, and Florida is regarding the grapefruit export industry as its ace in the hole. The big wind blew down citrus orchards in areas it struck, but Florida was little affected, and as affairs stand, the experts here say, the crop this season is just about right in size to put money into Florida's pocket.

Pre-cooling plants are being built and expanded to handle the export business. At Jacksonville's municipal docks a plant with 32 pre-cooling rooms and a capacity of 70,000 boxes is being built by the Refrigerated Steamship Lines, Inc., subsidiary of the United Fruit company, at a cost of $300,000. At the Merchants and Miners Line terminal, a pre-cooling plant to cost $250,000 is being built, while half a million is being spent equipping ships with refrigeration.

$250,000 Public Works Loan.

The public works board in Washington has furnished a loan of a quarter million dollars for a pre-cooling plant at Commodore's Point to be erected by the Florida Produce terminal, and a like amount has been raised among firms and individuals in the state. It is a movement for expansion of foreign markets for Florida's famous product, and the business has been built up in the last few years until grapefruit is served in England in the hotels along Piccadilly and the Strand, while canned grapefruit is pushing orange marmalade off its traditional place on the British breakfast table. The exported fruit has to be thin skinned and small, for the British customer, when he goes for grapefruit, wants a whole one, hence the small sizes are in demand.

Tampa also is expanding its export business. In the year ended July 1 last Jacksonville shipped 135,500 boxes of grapefruit to England, and Tampa, 67,000, while Tampa sent 287,000 cases of canned grapefruit and Jacksonville, 2,700 cases.

Jobs Responding to NRA.

The operations of the NRA in Florida are pointed to by the local authorities as getting a larger response than in many other states. It is estimated there are about 35,000 employers in the state, including small owners of turpentine pine enterprises with one or two employés. More than 31,000 signed the blanket NRA code.

Exactly what the effect has been upon employment and business is now being studied and is not yet determined. The U. S. labor department's September survey, covering 552 establishments, a few days ago showed Florida's increase in employment and pay rolls was beaten only by Oregon. The establishments showed a September gain of 9.3 per cent in employment and an increase of 18 per cent in one weekly pay roll. In Jacksonville a survey indicated an increase of 4,000 in employed and of $70,000 a week in pay roll. The full pay roll in Jacksonville is figured at about $800,000 a week.

The buying phase of NRA, it appears, has been slower to develop than the employment. Merchants in general report that business has improved, but in many instances it has so far failed to catch up with the increase in labor overhead. This is especially reported among smaller places of business, where the wage bill in many cases has been doubled, with little or no increase as yet in volume of business.

The automobile trade has shown a jump, so has the radio business and many lines based on installment buying, while some of the leading merchants say trade has registered an increase, but the main trouble is with the people now getting higher wages under the code, who, fearing it may not last, are putting the extra dollars into the sock instead of spending.

SMITH TOLD 'EM TO PAY CAMPAIGN LOANS OF BANK

Ex-Candidate Witness in New York Suit.

New York, Oct. 20.—[Special.]—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith took the witness stand in Supreme court today and told a jury he had urged Timothy J. Mara, sports promoter, and Patrick F. Kenny, a contractor, to pay the loans they obtained from the County Trust company to enable them to contribute to the 1928 presidential campaign.

The trust company is suing Messrs. Mara and Kenny to recover $50,000 from one and $20,000 from the other, and in defense they contend that the late James J. Riordan told them their notes never would be collected.

He Remembers.

"You are the man referred to in previous testimony as the Democratic candidate for the presidency?" asked Joseph M. Proskauer, the bank's counsel.

"I have a recollection of it," replied Gov. Smith, without a smile.

Mara, Kenny, Daniel Reardon and George Van Names, all of whom had made notes to the bank and contributed to the campaign, came to see him in November, 1931, to consult over the status of the loans, former Gov. Smith said.

What He Told Friends.

"I frankly told them," he testified, "I could take no position other than as chairman of the board of the County Trust company, and that any promises which Mr. Riordan had made them concerning non-payment were personal matters between him and the makers of the notes.

"I told them that it was a matter of record that the money was borrowed from the bank and had to be repaid to the bank and that there was no record in the bank concerning non-payment."

John J. Raskob, then the treasurer of the Democratic national committee, told him, said the governor, that he never heard of the supposed agreement with Mr. Riordan. He denied emphatically that he told Mara, as Mara testified, that the committee would pay the note.

The former governor, who has been ill, lacked his usual grin and his usual "wise-cracks" as he testified today. He left the courthouse by the back door to escape attention.

Cambridge, Ill., Oct. 20.—Mr. and Mrs. William Riggle will celebrate their sixtieth wedding anniversary Sunday. He is pioneer merchant and veteran live stock buyer, 86 years old. She is 82, and was born in Peoria county.

CITY EMPLOYES TO GET $1,900,000 PAY NEXT WEEK

City employés will be paid Monday for the last two weeks in July, reducing their pay arrears to two and a half months, Mayor Kelly announced yesterday. Part of the funds for the $1,900,000 pay roll were obtained by the sale to the telephone company of $600,000 worth of 1933 tax warrants.

GIRL TAKES POISON BY ERROR.

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—Miss Dorothy Emmick, aged 14, adopted daughter of Dr. and Mrs. T. C. Emmick of Mount Vernon, is in a critical condition as the result of taking poison by mistake last night.

PLANE IS SAFER THAN AUTO, SAYS AMELIA EARHART

Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, noted aviator, last night told an audience of several hundred women at Fullerton hall in the Art institute that flying is safer than riding in an automobile at 50 miles an hour. Her lecture was under the sponsorship of the Railway Business Women's association.

The United States was far ahead of other countries, Mrs. Putnam declared, in commercial aviation. She added that only 4 per cent of the passengers on the regular lines ever suffered from air sickness.

The theme song at the Fair today is "The Sidewalls of New York," and the official headgear is the brown derby. For it is Al Smith day, honoring the picturesque former governor and Democratic presidential nominee. As an especial consideration for today only every Fair visitor who can display an authentic brown derby will enter the gates free of charge.

Whereas most of the distinguished visitors to the Fair have been handled with gloves, armed guards keeping back the admirers, Mr. Smith will be just the opposite. He told officials that he would go every place and do everything, and the more the merrier.

Only 23 More Days Remain in Which to See the Fair

Police Commissioner Allman yesterday ordered 160 policemen to report at the Union station at 7:30 a. m. to guard Mr. Smith. The detail is commanded by Supervising Capt. John P. Horan. Another detachment of thirty-two men was commanded to keep watch over the former governor.

The "Happy Warrior" will arrive in Chicago over the Pennsylvania lines at the Union station at 8:25 a. m., but strict orders have been issued that he is not to be disturbed until 10 o'clock. At that time the festivities will begin.

Officially the honor guest does not arrive until the welcoming committee greets him in the station at 10 a. m. At that time Mayor Kelly, Gov. Horner, President Daves of the Fair, and a majority of the Democratic bigwigs from this area will be on hand to give Al Smith the freedom of the city and of the Fair.

Reception Without Salute.

At 10:30 a. m. a military reception will be tendered in the Court of Honor without a salute for Mr. Smith is without official status. Following the reception the party will make a tour of the grounds, returning to the Administration building at 12:30 p. m. for a luncheon in the trustees' room.

Brown derby wearers will assemble at 10:30 a. m. in front of the Administration building, where they will form an honor escort to Mr. Smith.

The main event of the day will be the formal program in the court of the Hall of Science in the afternoon when Mr. Smith will make his principal address. He has not named his subject in advance, but indicated it would be national in scope. Immediately following the address a reception will be given by Gov. Horner in the Illinois Host house.

Reception at New York Exhibit.

Following his speech at the Science court a tour will be made of the island, with emphasis on the Federal building and the Court of States. A reception will be held in the New York state exhibit. Then Mr. Smith will become just another Fair visitor.

At 7:30 p. m. he will reappear in his rôle of honor guest at a banquet in the lounge of the Federal building. He will leave for New York tonight.

With Al Smith, always a popular figure in Chicago, as guest of honor, Fair officials last night were expecting to welcome a crowd of more than two hundred thousand visitors. The attendance yesterday, with North Side day as the program feature, totaled 107,265 at 11:30 p. m.

GREAT ART SHOW AT INSTITUTE TO CLOSE ON NOV. 1

Whistler's "mother," sensation piece of the Art institute's seventy-five million dollar World's Fair show, will start back to Paris on Wednesday morning, Nov. 1, under heavy guard. That night the whole exhibition will close—not on Nov. 12 as previously stated—and the packing of hundreds of masterpieces that go back to American museums and private owners will begin.

Window Smasher at Shoe Store Slain by Policeman

A man identified as Orville Dunning, 35 years old, of 7620 Lowe avenue, was shot and killed early today by Policeman Walter Oakes of the Gresham station after he had smashed a window of the Florsheim shoe store at 7916 South Halsted street. Policeman Oakes, assigned to that particular area, saw the man break the window and called on him to halt. When the window breaker turned to run Oakes fired three shots, one hitting him in the chest and killing him.

$2,500 in Rare Stamps Stolen from Fair Exhibit

Rare postage stamps, valued at $2,500, part of an exhibit in the General Exhibits building at A Century of Progress, were stolen last night, it was reported by Lou W. Drives 15,200 Miles

Isaac Sacks, 79 years old, who has traveled 15,200 miles in a covered wagon drawn by two Shetland ponies, arrived yesterday in Chicago to visit the Fair. He announced that he would go from Chicago to Florida. Mr. Sacks took his ponies and wagon and left his farm near Nashville, Tenn., in 1926 to travel over the United States.

NORTH SIDE FAIR PROGRAM DRAWS CROWD OF 25,000

4,500 Children Guests of Business Groups.

The north side of Chicago, from the river to the county line, went to the Fair yesterday to present its own program of music, parades, and beauty contests. While no check was kept of the neighborhood visitors, they were given official credit for swelling the day's total by more than 25,000.

The festivities opened with a parade down Michigan avenue led by a police escort and the army troops from the Fair ground encampment. Represented in the parade were sixty-three units, including bands, floats, R. O. T. C. units, Scout troops, and neighborhood organizations. As guests of the north side business men some 4,500 orphans and underprivileged children rode in buses to be given their first chance to see the Fair.

Following a concert by the Lake View High school band, Mayor Kelly made a brief address, during which he reiterated his demand that the Fair reopen next year.

"Chicago is proud of its north side," he said. "And it is proud of its north shore neighbors. You should be complimented for bringing 4,500 orphans to the Fair. But many similar children have not had the chance to visit the Exposition, and many adults, through economic circumstances, have been unable to do so. Therefore, I again urge that the Fair be reopened next year, not only to give every one an opportunity to visit it, but because it is the greatest single factor in national recovery."

Miss Val Wiles, 17 years old, 2019 North Leavitt street, was named winner of the Cinderella contest. She received a $1,000 scholarship, a pair of silver slippers, a complete costume, a medal, and numerous small articles of clothing and jewelry. In addition, she is to have a screen test.

Second place in the contest was awarded to Miss Lillian Scheffler, 4421 North Rockwell street, and third place to Miss Violet Sheets, 4538 Clarendon avenue. Twenty-one beauties, each representing a north side neighborhood, competed in the contest.

CHICAGO WOMEN MOBILIZE TO HAIL MRS. ROOSEVELT

Plan to Rally All Groups for Fair Event.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt made Oct. 31 women's day at the Fair just by telegraphing that she would be here. Yesterday 300 women, each representing an organization, planned to make Mrs. Roosevelt's visit one of the great events on A Century of Progress calendar.

They met in the sky room of the Palmer house, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Henry W. Hardy, president of the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Organizations. They heard the program outlined and promised to make the day a demonstration of the solidarity of Chicago women, in a turnout that may surpass any other celebration at the Exposition.

Mobilization of Women.

"We Chicago women are 'on the spot,'" Mrs. Hardy said. "We wanted a day to honor the first lady of the land, and now that we are to realize that ambition, we are going to have to mobolize our organizations and communicate with every woman who does not belong to any club or society, and show the men and the world what women of this city can do when they try—that they can stand together and put over a big program as we propose to put over this one."

There was immediate proof that the group intended to wipe out all political, religious, and other differences, and to mobilize the women of Chicago "as Americans only."

Mrs. Hardy has established her own headquarters in room 1931 in the Republic building, 209 South State street, and will receive reports of progress there.

Her executive committee comprises ten women prominent in club life. They are Mrs. Elizabeth A. Conkey and Mrs. Bertha Baur, respectively Democratic and Republican national committeewomen from Illinois; Mrs. Charles P. Schwartz, Chicago Woman's Aid; Mrs. George V. McIntyre, Big Sisters; Mrs. Sylvester Schuele, Church Federation; Mrs. Mark Mears, Woman's City club; Mrs. Ozora S. Davis, Chicago Woman's club; Mrs. Holland Flagler, Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers; Miss Jessamine Hoagland, Business and Professional Women, and Mrs. Charles S. Clark, conference of club presidents and program chairmen.

Robert S. Cook of the events division of A Century of Progress presented the program of the day, which will open with a review of the troops from Camp Whistler at 10:30 o'clock by Mrs. Roosevelt at the Court of Honor. A tour of the grounds will follow, with a boat trip for sightseeing if the weather permits.

At 12:30 o'clock a luncheon will be served in the Federal building lounge to 100 guests selected by the exposition officials and the executive committee. From 2 until 2:15 the guest of honor will rest, and at 2:30 the massmeeting and Mrs. Roosevelt's address will take place in the Court of States. After this her time will be her own.

GRAF ZEPPELIN'S ARRIVAL NOW SET FOR THURSDAY

The Graf Zeppelin will arrive in Chicago early next Thursday, Oct. 26, officials of the Fair were informed last night. A landing will be made at Curtiss-Wright-Reynolds airport in Glenview shortly after dawn, with a ground crew of two hundred men handling the craft. The Graf will remain at the airport for approximately thirty minutes, during which Commander Hugo Eckener will land to be the guest of the Fair. During the day the Graf will cruise over the Fair grounds and the city.

Fifteen Chicago passengers are carried on the ship, but they may disembark at Akron and proceed to Chicago by train. Mail to ports in the United States and to Spain and Germany will be loaded here.

The Graf left Pernambuco, Brazil, yesterday and is due to arrive at Miami, Fla., Monday morning, leaving the afternoon of the same day to land at Akron, O., on Oct. 24. After the Chicago trip the ship will return to Akron, from which port it will leave on Oct. 28 for the trans-Atlantic flight to Seville, Spain. The ship is scheduled to be back at Friedrichshafen, Germany, Oct. 31.

NEW YORK DRAGS NATIONAL ISSUE INTO ITS POLITICS

Tammany Grins at G.O.P.-Democratic Fracas.

New York, Oct. 20.—[Special.]—National politics came forcibly to the foreground in the campaign for the New York mayoralty tonight.

While the fusionlists were rushing out their heavy Republican artillery at Mecca temple, Joseph V. McKee, Independent candidate, openly charged that an effort was being made to embarrass President Roosevelt and defeat his recovery program.

Meanwhile Tammany chiefs stood by, chuckling, seeing in the Republican-Democratic fracas a slight profit through reaction for their candidate, Mayor John P. O'Brien.

Prior to today most of the national politics has been injected by Fiorella H. La Guardia and his chief backer, Samuel Seabury. They have charged that the McKee candidacy is a smoke screen for a plot by Edward J. Flynn, Bronx Democratic leader, and Postmaster General James A. Farley to unseat John F. Curry as boss of Tammany Hall and install themselves.

"It will be like swapping one boss for another boss and getting nowhere," La Guardia and Seabury have said.

McKee In Hot Retort.

Mr. McKee, roiled by these charges and by the appearance in the campaign of Ogden Mills, secretary of the United States treasury under President Hoover, decided to strike back.

He declared Mr. Mills was supporting La Guardia in an attempt to gain Republican advantage in the city, state and nation, increase his own chance for the Presidency in 1936, and discredit the Roosevelt administration.

Declaring that he and the other candidates on the recovery party ticket offered the same sort of "new deal" for New York City that President Roosevelt had given the nation, Mr. McKee put himself forward as a supporter of the Roosevelt administration. He urged the election of himself and associates on the ground that as mayor he could coöperate best with Gov. Herbert Lehman in the state and President Roosevelt in the nation and intimated that the coöperation of all three would be of great advantage in solving the city's major problems.

Calls La Guardia "Opportunist."

Mr. McKee turned his attention to Mr. La Guardia, whose case, he said, presents a strange record.

"Once a hater of the rich, now a friend of the rich," he said of his fusion opponent, "once a willing accomplice of Tammany, now their avowed enemy. He has changed his coat every time the political atmosphere has changed."

He criticized La Guardia as an "opportunist," a "damagogue," and "a communist at heart."

At Mecca temple Mr. La Guardia ignored the McKee shafts, but warned his hearers—Republicans and fusionists alike—that if he is elected mayor he will "go out of politics" and give New York City a strictly nonpartisan administration.

Elihu Root Sends Wire.

All of the Republican speakers turned their heavy guns against Tammany, bossism, and extravagance and graft in city government.

Elihu Root, chief of the elder statesmen of the party, sent a telegram to the Republican state committee saying:

"This is not a question of men. It is a rare opportunity to help break the strangle hold in which Tammany substitutes itself for lawful self-government by the citizens of New York. Republicans can help especially because they have an organization and that will be tested by the service it renders here."

NEW YORK ADDS 37 MILLIONS TO ITS TAX BUDGET

New York, Oct. 20.—[Special.]—The Tammany board of estimates elected to wait till the eleventh hour today—the last day in which additions to the budget may be made—to add $41,672,000 to its 1934 budget, an increase over the 1933 figures of $37,609,135.

And when the board completes its additions the 1934 budget will total $555,978,928. Thus the "savings," already wiped out, will not be savings at all, but increases.

The real estate taxpayer, however, will not be called upon to meet all the jacked-up budget. The increase will be at the expense of the office holder and the public. In order to make up the increase Samuel Untermyer, special financial counsel to the city, will probably be called upon to conjure up more taxes and pull some economies out of his hat.

The economies and new taxes may be introduced at the hearings upon the "budget as proposed" on Oct. 25 and 26.

The increases voted today are caused by the restoration to the budget of the $17,722,000 pension fund for teachers and city employés and inclusion of the $23,950,000 tax deficiency fund called for by the city's four year agreement with the bankers.

Report Polly Moran Will Wed Los Angeles Attorney

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—Friends of Polly Moran, motion picture comedienne, today said they expect shortly to receive news of her marriage to Martin Malone, young Los Angeles attorney, crediting a rumor of Miss Moran's trip with Malone to a Las Vegas, Nev., marriage license bureau recently. Miss Moran, who was in vaudeville many years, was married and divorced once. She hails from Chicago.

Wrigley Mausoleum Permit Is Issued at Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—A county permit for the construction of a mausoleum for the late William Wrigley Jr. on Catalina island, which he owned, was issued here today. The mausoleum will be 80 feet high and 60 feet wide.

Educate Adults to Fit New World, Is Plea to Librarians

The need for adult education in order that persons in all walks of life may adjust themselves to the complexities of the modern world was stressed yesterday by George F. Zook, United States commissioner of education. Dr. Zook spoke before a general session of the American Library association convention at the Stevens hotel.

Dr. Zook based his argument for the extension of adult education on the increase of leisure time under modern trends. And educational research with its discoveries, he pointed out, has had much to do with this leisure time.

Too Much for Schools.

"I do not believe that we can rely solely on the work of the schools devoted exclusively to children to prepare one generation to face the problems of the next," asserted Dr. Zook. "We must educate adults to the new social problems confronting us. We need more parks and park attendants, more playgrounds and playground attendants, more librarians, good music, drama, more good colleges and professors.

"Instead of thinking that we cannot afford an extension of these cultural advantages, may I repeat that in as much as an increasing proportion is not needed in the production of goods, the remaining number must be used, if they are to be used at all, in the conduct of our leisure time activities. There must be an organized educational program for adults which is as comprehensive and noncommercial as our public school program."

Learning New Jobs.

Turning to the changes in the social order, Dr. Zook said that some of the vocations and professions are disappearing, to be replaced by others, while the rest are being modified in the light of new discoveries. In many cases, he declared, men and women in order to keep up with the process must give up the occupation for which they trained themselves in early life and learn an entirely new field of work.

"Both men and women should have the opportunity," said Dr. Zook, "to familiarize themselves with these trends in occupations and the further opportunity through appropriate facilities to prepare themselves for these new types of service."

A Plea for Cheer.

A suggestion that some library rooms be made more attractive, or less "funereal," was made by Prof. Howard Mumford Jones, author and professor of English at the University of Michigan.

"I have been in library reading rooms more suggestive of a genteel funeral establishment than of the delight to be found in literature," said Prof. Jones. "In the children's room we feel the need for color and humanity, but when the child grows to manhood we suppose he will be equally drawn to books in a room like a church parlor.

"I wish there were rooms in our libraries into which people could go to express their unrestrained enthusiasms—rooms in which they could read out loud, and talk, shout with joy, and break into guffaws. We need librarians to encourage them in this sort of misbehavior, and trustees who do not regard talking out loud as a penal offense."

T. P. Sevensma, librarian of the League of Nations library at Geneva, Switzerland, talked before an afternoon meeting of the American Library institute. He declared that the chief difference between American libraries and those in Europe is that on the continent libraries are collections of treasures, while in this country they have been made an instrument of public service.

A new service of the library, that of helping persons find new occupations, was described by Jennie M. Flexner, readers' adviser of the New York public library, in a speech before the book selections round table. She said that the library could furnish knowledge on technical and professional work.

TELLS GOVERNMENT PLAN

The federal government's plan for financing the teaching of adult classes by unemployed teachers was explained yesterday by Commissioner Zook before a luncheon meeting of the adult educational council at the Palmer house. Dr. Zook said that the program is intended first for the relief of white collar workers, and second as an educational service.

More than 30,000 adult persons are attending classes in New York City, under the plan, according to Dr. Zook. An application prepared by Supt. William J. Bogan for the unemployed teachers in Chicago is pending.

"The white collar worker may be used as a teacher of other unemployed people," said Dr. Zook. "Where unemployed teachers are proficient in any field, such as vocational training, they will be employed, of course. It is the white collar worker that will starve rather than make direct application for relief. Many of this class are deserving and must be found."

The rehabilitation of the rural school system of the country through federal funds was hailed as "an unusual American advance" by the speaker. He said that congress would probably discuss the question at the next session.

REJUVENATION THROUGH GLANDS BALKS SCIENCE

Pituitary Functions Told by Dr. Klein.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

With all the skill of modern chemistry, man has not approached, in simplicity or efficiency, the chemical transformations that occur as routine in the human body. Rejuvenation of humans through gland therapy is impossible as yet. The man-made extracts have proved unstable. Clinical experiments successful in animals have been failures with the human body.

This report on the present status of gland therapy, a subject of interest throughout the world, was made last night by Dr. David Klein, retiring chairman of the Chicago section of the American Chemical society, at a meeting of that organization at the Midland club.

Dr. Klein did not touch the subject of gland operations, a method of controlling thyroid ills through lessening of the activity of the adrenals, which is the latest proposal in that field by Dr. George W. Crile of Cleveland. Dr. Klein's address was concerned chiefly with the pituitary gland, the story of which, he said, is as fascinating as a detective novel and as fantastic as an Arabian Night episode.

Interdependence of Glands.

He did, however, state that the interdependence of the glands of internal secretions is becoming more evident and that abnormality in the function of one gland affects related glands.

"To most people," Dr. Klein said, "gland therapy connotes rejuvenation. In the present state of our knowledge this is impossible. In fact, it enters as a minor consideration, if at all, in the work of those engaged in isolating hormones. There are more immediate prospects of successful isolation. Out of it will come more precise knowledge of how to apply hormone preparations to human ills."

Describing one of the many disappointments to fall to the lot of those working with the endocrines, Dr. Klein said:

"Brilliant as have been the experimental results in certain animals to demonstrate the presence of the sex-stimulating hormones, as dismal have been the failures when applied to human patients where the indications were favorable. Likewise, in monkeys, the results have been negative.

Body a Chemical Factory.

"The human body is a gigantic chemical factory, controlled by the endocrines. It is astounding that one little gland—the pituitary—weighing not more than one-sixth of an ounce—can be responsible for so many human functions.

"Indeed, it may be said that as the pituitary functions so will the individual be. Too little pituitary, a dwarf; too much, a giant. Too little, no sex development; too much, probably overstimulation. Too little, an undeveloped thyroid and the whole train of symptoms that are characteristic of hypothyroid function. Too little, a subnormal suprarenal cortex. That has something to do with bodily tone, vigor, stamina.

"If we believe in the purposefulness of the anatomical structure of the human body, the pituitary is probably the most valuable part, for it is not only protected by the skull, but also by a miniature skull, called the sella turcica. The pituitary is not one gland but several, embryologically different, and possessing distinct functions."

Control Bodily Contour.

It is the anterior portion of the gland, he said, which conditions bodily contour, sex development, the action of the thyroid and the suprarenal cortex.

"Take a young rat," he said, "and inject it with growth hormone. It will grow enormously and put on weight. Such examples have their human counterparts.

"Unfortunately, the clinical experience has not followed the animal results. Large doses of the growth hormone given over a long period to a seventeen year old boy did not increase his stature."

ENGINEERS BACK COUNCIL PLAN FOR ELEVATED ROADS

Ald. Massen Discusses Cost of Project.

BY HAL FOUST.

The civic affairs committee of the Midwestern Society of Engineers yesterday announced its indorsement of the proposal to build a system of elevated highways in Chicago as recommended in a study of the city's street transportation problems conducted by Dr. Miller McClintock, head of the Harvard university traffic research bureau.

The committee, at a meeting in the club's assembly room in the Engineers' building, heard Ald. John A. Massen [48th] discuss this superhighway construction program with revenue from the gasoline tax. The alderman is chairman of the council traffic committee, which employed Dr. McClintock.

"This society," said W. A. Van Hook, chairman, "intends to increase its activities in the promotion of worth while public improvements that will relieve unemployment and return benefits in proportion to expenditures. The civic affairs committee has studied the Massen-McClintock report and has recommended it for approval by the society's directorate."

Wait on Relief Action.

Ald. Massen said that the best technical minds of the country were working on the details of design. Progress of state, county, and city officials reaching an agreement on the construction program is awaiting the outcome of relief legislation pending before the general assembly. The $30,000,000 relief bond bill, which passed the senate this week, will take a substantial portion of the gasoline tax revenue.

"The state collects $5,000,000 a year in Chicago on its 1 cent of the gasoline tax," said Ald. Massen. "The city, after Jan. 1, will receive $5,000,000 a year minus whatever is taken for relief. The county, already donating to charity from its motor fuel revenue, still receives $1,500,000 a year.

See Ease of Financing.

"At this rate of income, it will be easy to finance 160 miles of superhighway in the next 20 or 25 years at a total cost of $160,000,000. The board of local improvements, from 1915 to 1931, spent $135,000,000 on 99 miles of major street widening. The cost of the elevated highway per lane is 15.6 per cent of the cost of the same additional traffic capacity obtained through street widening.

"The initial projects in this program involve 15.26 miles of superhighway: One west from the loop in Randolph street, another northwest in Kinsbury avenue, another connecting Leif Ericsen drive with Stony Island avenue and Sonti Chicago avenue with Indianapolis boulevard, and another southwest in Archer avenue from the central business district.

"Property damage indemnities, engineering, and litigatin as well as materials and labor for these 15.26 miles will not total as much as $10,000,000, well within the community's means from the existing gasoline tax."

BANKRUPTCY SUIT HITS OPERATORS OF SEA DOG INN

An involuntary bankruptcy petition was filed yesterday in the United States District court against the Marine Service corporation, operators of the Sea Dog inn, a night club near the mouth of the river. The owners are Harry DeLisle, president, and William Walton Hal, 31 year old law student who reported he had been kidnaped after he disappeared for several days.

Nominal claims of $1,600 are set forth in the petition, which was filed in behalf of the Photo-Press, Inc., and two other creditors. Attorney Mort D. Goldberg said the corporation has liabilities of about $10,000 and assets of $4,000.

Meanwhile it was learned that De Lisle's cruising yacht had entered the harbor at Kenosha, Wis., unannounced last Wednesday, the same day that Hall returned to his home. The boat was still there last night.

ROB BAKERY PROPRIETOR.

Philip Grossman, proprietor of a bakery at 4032 West Roosevelt road, was robbed of $160 early yesterday by three gunmen who entered the bakery as Grosman prepared to close.

LOANS ON GRAIN FAVORED TO END FARM 'STRIKES'

Administration Ready to Try "Fixing Prices."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—Government loans to farmers on their unsold stocks of wheat and corn were forecast today as the administration's answer to unrest and brewing "strikes" in the midwestern farm belt.

The plan as authoritatively outlined, contemplates the extension of the activities of the commodity credit corporation which was recently formed to make loans of 10 cents a pound on the planter's unsold cotton—the farmer to take any resultant profits, the government to stand any future loss.

In its effect, the scheme is price fixing. So far as the farmer is concerned, the price of cotton is virtually fixed at between 10 cents and 15 cents, the latter figure being the one at which the government reserves the right to make the farmer sell. If carried into action, therefore, the expanded program now being drawn up will mean the pegging of the prices of two major grain crops.

Speed Wheat Lease Checks.

In addition, the agricultural adjustment administration is making renewed efforts to speed the dispatch of checks for the more than 100 million dollars in benefits which the government has pledged to pay wheat farmers who signed up to cut next year's acreage the required 15 per cent.

Officials expect to assist both the wheat and corn acreage reduction campaigns with their new loan program; for loans will be made only to farmers who have signed up to curtail production.

At what percentage of current prices the loans will be fixed, has not yet been determined, nor therefore, can it be predicted at what level the plan will act to fix wheat and corn prices. One of the factors to be taken into consideration is the amount of wheat and corn remaining in the farmers' hands. In the case of wheat, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace estimated today, farmers in the southwest still held about one-third of their grain, and in the northwest about one-half.

Quarrel Between Bureaus.

The growing unrest of the farm population, dramatized by the events of the past few days, has served to heighten the latent hostility between the agricultural adjustment administration and the national recovery administration.

Farm prices have risen at a sharper angle than industrial prices, but because of their start from farther down have not yet caught up. Neither have all of them risen—notably hogs and cattle. As given out at the AAA today, average prices received by the farmer were as follows in September, 1932: Wheat, 37.4 cents a bushel; butter fat, 17.6 cents a pound; hogs, $3.78 a hundred; beef cattle, $4.31 a hundred. In September, 1933, they were Wheat, 71.1 cents a bushel; butter fat, 21.1 cents a pound; hogs, $3.73 a hundred, and beef cattle, $3.61 a hundred.

Prices Below "Parity."

At today's prices the farmer is getting from 55 to 60 cents a bushel for wheat, while the parity price called for by the farm adjustment act is $1.04. The farm price for beef cattle has fallen from $3.97 a hundred in July to close to $3.50.

In addition, in the northwestern spring wheat belt crops have been poor, South Dakota being listed in the "crop failure" class.

FAMILY SEES COP ROUT 2 ROBBERS IN GUN BATTLE

Policeman Michael Shannon, 36 years old, of the stolen automobile detail, battled two gunmen last night in a successful effort to save his wife and three children from being kidnaped. During the battle Shannon and the bandits exchanged more than a dozen shots as his family looked on.

The policeman, off duty and in civilian clothes, had driven his car into the garage in the rear of their home at 8554 St. Lawrence avenue. His wife, Mary, and the children, Mary, 9 years old; Margaret, 6, and Michael Jr., 4, had alighted, and all were about to go into the house when the robbers stepped up. Shannon, facing two revolvers, pleaded that his wife and children be allowed to go into the house.

"They get back into the car," ordered the bandits.

The children and Mrs. Shannon obeyed. Then, suddenly, Shannon turned around and ran ten steps away from the car, drawing his gun. The two bandits fired at him and he fired back. The children screamed and Mrs. Shannon fainted. The robbers fled.

COL. M'CORMICK ASSAILS U. S. RULE OVER INDUSTRY

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Government control of industry and trade was characterized by Col. R. R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, in a speech here tonight as a "reestablishment of the medieval English 'star chamber' system of government."

"From a democratic people, governing themselves and electing representatives, we are today little if any better than a nation of subjects dominated and domineered over by an army of officials modeled after Russia, Italy, and Germany," Col. McCormick told the annual state chamber of commerce forum.

While criticizing the system of codes inaugurated under the national recovery act, the publisher said there is no fear of development of a dictatorship and urged that results rather than purposes of the NRA campaign be studied.

"Even the courts are dangerously impressed by the purposes when the real issue is the consequences," he said.

QUITS THE NRA

Keith Neville, former Nebraska governor, resigns as state chairman of the NRA because he is "entirely out of sympathy with the manner in which the program is being conducted in agricultural states."

DISPUTE ABOUT VENDER SYSTEM OF CHICAGO MILK

Witnesses Called at Capital Hearing.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—[Special]—Eighty per cent of the milk consumers' dollar in Chicago now goes to the former, to labor and for taxes, according to testimony procured by the government today in answer to the plea of three Chicago independent dairies for a modification of the federal milk code.

It was a contest at the hearing today between the "vender" system of milk distribution fostered by the accused independents and the regular dairy delivery service maintained by the larger milk companies backing the milk pact.

Independents Seek Change.

Having based their defense of the federal charges primarily on the nature of the business they conduct, the three independents—the Lake View dairy, the Edgewater dairy and the Wagner dairy—now seek to prove the unreasonableness of applying the code's price schedule to their "vender" systems. A modification to provide a price differential for sales to peddlers is sought.

While they were demanding the change, Ald. David Sutton [8th], chairman of the Chicago city council milk committee, reiterated statements of his commitee against any modification of the milk agreement until after the projected federal investigation into the milk situation in Chicago.

Sutton Committee's Stand.

The Sutton committee's original opposition was directed at the proposed amendment to the code which would raise the retail price from 10 cents a quart to 11 cents. His telegram to William Hamilton, Chicago dairy expert, was construed as meaning that the aldermanic group likewise opposes reduction in certain milk prices sought by the independents, at least until the Chicago hearing. Mr. Hamilton claims to be the personal representative of Mayor Kelly in the city council.

Mayor Kelly was quoted in Chicago as saying no one had been authorized to speak for him on the milk question in Washington. Mr. Sutton explained that although Mr. Hamilton came here as a dairy expert with the city council committee a fortnight ago, he is now in the capital "on his own hook."

Presented as an "expert" witness by the government, Dr. A. C. Brown, technical adviser to the Milk Council of Chicago, testified today that of every dollar spent for milk in Chicago 80.3 per cent goes to the farmer, to labor, and for taxes, leaving 19.7 for distribution, overhead, bad debts, and profit.

ATTORNEY WINS ACQUITTAL IN PERJURY CASE

Attorney Ira Blackstone Fehrman, who was charged with subornation of perjury by relatives of a former client, was acquitted yesterday by a jury in the Criminal court of Judge James F. Fardy. The charge grew out of testimony given at an extradition hearing for Steve Jalloway, who was extradited to Georgia for robbery despite a family alibi presented by Attorney Fehrman in his behalf.

In the trial Attorney Thaddeus C. Toudor, representing Fehrman, brought from Jalloway's wife and mother, who were the state witnesses, the admission that they had tried to persuade Fehrman to return a $150 fee before the time at which they said he had told them to testify falsely in an extradition hearing. It was charged by the defense that Mike Fay, a Cicero politician, had assisted the Jalloways in trying to get the return of the fee on threat of an indictment.

Joseph B. McDonough Says He Will Run for Sheriff

County Treasurer Joseph B. McDonough yesterday announced he would be a candidate for sheriff in the Democratic primaries next spring. The announcement was no surprise in political circles, as it had been known McDonough was contemplating the step for months. It is known that Ald. John Toman [23d] and Ald. Mathias [Paddy] Bauler [43d] are also considering running for the nomination.

5,500 Enroll in Second Ft. Sheridan Forest Camp

Enrollment in the second civilian conservation corps camp at Fort Sheridan, started Oct. 2, reached a total of 5,500 yesterday. Of these 2,430 forest workers have already been assigned to reforestation camps in Wisconsin. Beginning Monday 2,500 of the men remaining at the fort will entrain for camps in the Pacific northwest.

CENTRAL WEST FARMER STRIKE SET FOR TODAY

Roosevelt Maintains His Program Will Win.

Neb.] and other proponents of inflation, but there were no indications that the present policy of the administration regarding currency expansion was to be changed.

Meanwhile plans for the farm holiday went forward in wheat raising states, although reports of the violence which characterized previous farm strike movements were lacking for the present. In this connection Gov. Bryan of Nebraska said:

"I do not believe the farmer could be critisised for withholding grain from the market in order to get better prices any more than the recommendations from Washington that the public should confine its buying to merchants displaying the Blue Eagle. I could not approve physical interference with those moving their crops to market who desire to, and hope no such plan is contemplated or will be attempted."

Plan Nebraska Action Today.

Nebraska members of the Farmer's Holiday association will put down an air tight ban on shipment of farm products at noon tomorrow, it was declared at Omaha by H. C. Parmenter, state president of the association.

He made the announcement following a conference with Milo Reno. It will be several days, however, he added, before all the farmers in the state will get notice of the strike. Information was sent to county leaders tonight.

"By farm products we mean all products," said Parmenter. "If some farmers insist on selling their products, they will bring about picketing. But we hope there will be no picketing of any kind. We expect to reason with those who hope to sell right on the farm. Our greatest dread is the communists, and we hope to combat this influence so there will be no violence."

Wants Aid from Others.

Reno proposes, according to word received here, that holiday leaders present their program to other groups of industry, carry their campaign into the churches and schools, and that, if necessary, they use what he termed a weapon of the NRA, "nonsupport of noncoöperative business firms and other organizations."

"The public conscience is aroused," Reno declared. "The farmers' chances of success in this strike are greater than ever before. We must work to make all farmers realize that this is a battle for their rights, the cost of production for their products."

In North Dakota, Gov. William Langer was taking further steps to enforce the embargo on wheat shipments out of the state, which he proclaimed a few days ago. In addition to the 1,800 officers and men of the National Guard, he today ordered sheriffs of the 53 counties in the state to take steps to enforce the embargo.

South Dakota Fails to Act.

The South Dakota Farmers' Holiday association has taken no action to join in the strike, it was stated at Aberdeen by B. W. McVeigh, its president. But a meeting will be held shortly on the subject, he added. He urged that governors of other wheat producing states follow the lead of Gov. Langer in North Dakota.

Tom Berry, governor of the state, declared, however, that he will not support the movement. He predicted that it would fail, as similar movements have failed in the past, through failure to attain their objectives of increased prices for the farmer.

Herring for Conference.

Gov. Clyde Herring of Iowa, who has proposed a conference of executives of fifteen midwestern states to consider the current farm crisis, made public a reply to his invitation from Gov. William H. Murray of Oklahoma. Gov. Murray regretted that he could not attend the conference, his secretary informed Gov. Herring, "because the present lieutenant governor, when Gov. Murray is beyond its borders, uses the power given him by law to the great detriment of the public good."

The extension of the moratorium on mortgage foreclosure sales, decreed by Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas, was declared unconstitutional yesterday in the Circuit court of Kansas City, Kas. Judge Clyde G. Glandon issued a writ of mandamus bidding Sheriff Albert G. Becker carry out such a sale. The moratorium, originally provided by legislative action, expired Sept. 4, and Gov. Landon sought to prolong it six months by executive proclamation.

Demands "Orderly Holiday."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 20.—[Special]—Gov. A. G. Schmedeman in a public statement late today pledged the support of the state government to a national farm strike to begin tomorrow noon. He warned, however, that the withholding of farm produce from markets must be "an orderly holiday."

The governor said he was informed by Leo T. Crowley, his chief adviser, who is now in the national capital, that President Roosevelt intends to exercise authority which may tend to dissipate the proposed strike.

Officials of the Wisconsin National Guard were called into session with the governor to formulate plans designed to avoid violence in the strike called by the National Farm Holiday association. Reports reaching the capitol were that officials of the Wisconsin Cooperative Milk Pool and the Farmers' union also favor lending their support to the strike.

The governor pledged the assistance of his administration "in a forceful but dignified demand for a program which will immediately put agriculture in Wisconsin on the road to a restoration to its former higher position in the economic life of our commonwealth."

LOS ANGELES POLICE BATTLE WITH WOMEN STRIKERS IN STREET

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Women scratched, kicked, and screamed today as pickets of the striking women's garment makers' union, nonstrikers, and police tangled in street fighting in the downtown industrial area.

One garment shop employé was injured. Police said 10 strikers mobbed her, tore her clothes off and scratched her so severely that she was treated at the police hospital. She told police her woman attackers threw salt in her eyes.

Four arrests were made.

Several officers were kicked and scratched, police said.

The fighting broke out as Los Angeles ministers prepared to attend a massmeeting at the First Unitarian church at which strikers and employers were to present their sides of the dispute.

Montana's Governor Here; Will Not Join NRA Revolt

Gov. Frank H. Cooney of Montana passed through Chicago yesterday on his way home after a stay of one month in Washington, where he conferred with officials on his state's relief problems. When asked whether he planned anti-NRA moves in sympathy with the chief executives of Nebraska and North Dakota he said he planned to "go along with the President."

REVENUE POURS INTO U. S. FASTER THAN FOR YEARS

Beer Alone Is Producing 14 Millions a Month.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—Domestic tax revenues are pouring into the federal government's coffers faster now than at any time since the early days of the depression, the treasury department disclosed today after casting up its accounts for the first quarter of the new fiscal year, which ended Sept. 30.

For every dollar of internal revenue collected from taxpayers in the first quarter of the previous fiscal year, the treasury this year collected $1.71, inquiry revealed.

Generally Improved Yield.

Domestic tax collections for the June-September period, constituting the first three months of the fiscal year, jumped to 613 million dollars this year from 358 millions a year ago, a gain of 71 per cent, according to the records.

A large share of the increase has been due to additional taxes such as those imposed in the national recovery act, on wheat processing, and on beer, but a generally improving yield from old tax, also is reflected in the treasury's reports.

Liquor taxes, exclusive of beer, for instance, brought in $4,900,000 in the three months ended Sept. 30, 1933, compared with $1,900,000 a year before, a gain of $3,000,000. Most of this resulted from a relaxation of federal control over medicinal liquor withdrawals in April, officials said.

Cigaret Revenue Shows Gain.

Cigaret taxes, one of the most important sources of internal revenue, likewise have shown a substantial gain, yielding $90,700,000 in the first three months of this fiscal year compared with $85,200,000 a year before. Levies on sales of stocks, bonds, and commodities have increased $10,700,000.

Meanwhile the beer tax has been pouring in in a steady stream of new revenue. Producing more than 14 million dollars a month, it has accounted for $42,500,000 in revenue since June 30.

Taxes on dividends, capital stock, and excess profits and the additional tax of half a cent a gallon on gasoline, all imposed in the recovery act and all doomed to cease after repeal, likewise have been turning new sources of government cash. The added gasoline levy and capital stock tax have far outstripped the estimate set for them.

Processing Tax $39,700,000.

Processing taxes, earmarked in theory to pay farm benefits under the agricultural adjustment program, have brought in $39,700,000 in less than three months, of which $18,500,000 came from wheat and $14,500,000 from cotton.

Outstanding in its failure to join the march to higher yields is the income tax, treasury records show. Despite being strengthened this year by heavily increased rates, it has brought in only $160,000,000, $14,000,000 less than a year ago.

Farm Mortgage Crowd Delays Iowa Sheriff's Sale

Sioux City, Ia., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—Mass farm action was renewed today when 100 members of the Farmers' Holiday association filled the court house hall to halt a sheriff's foreclosure sale on the farm of Job Moyse of Lawton, Ia. The sale was postponed three days. The farmers will wire Henry Morgenthau Jr. of the farm credit administration and ask him to intervene. Attorneys for the Mutual Benefit Life insurance company, holders of the mortgage, said they would demand that the sale be held Monday.

MORGAN ARRIVES FROM EUROPE; NO COMMENT ON NRA

Greets Reporters, but Is Not Talkative.

New York, Oct. 20.—[Special.]—Somewhat puzzled by the new banking laws which go into effect on the first of the year, but determined to obey them, J. P. Morgan, the banker, returned today aboard the Cunarder Berengaria after a three months' vacation abroad.

Asked if the laws would have to be rewritten to make it possible for banking to continue according to the present banking system, Mr. Morgan said, on shipboard:

"If it [the banking law] makes banking impossible, then it is hardly worth while to have banking, is it?"

Mr. Morgan broke an old ruling of his today. Instead of gruffly denying himself to ship news reporters and photographers, he invited them into his stateroom after breakfast.

His eyes under his heavy brows brightened as the men filed in. He shook hands all around and chuckled, "The grouse shooting was fine!"

"Nothing to Say."

He sat back in a deep chair, puffed on his meerschaum pipe, his blue eyes sparkling.

"I like to be nice to the newspaper men," he said—and some of the old timers seemed startled. He added: "But I just can't see any sense in talking when I have nothing to say."

"What do you think of the NRA Mr. Morgan?"

"I can't discuss any phase of the NRA because I don't know enough about it."

As for the earnings questionnaire sent by the treasury to 2,000 investment bankers, Mr. Morgan said he'd not heard about that. "I thought we had a constitution." he remarked.

He also declined to discuss questions about huge salaries and bonuses or about the government's financial situation and bank credit.

"Do you think, Mr. Morgan, that the government is tending toward Socialism?"

"I can't say"—puffing the meerschaum.

English Trade Better.

Asked about English trade, Mr. Morgan said: "England is getting along very well. Improvement certainly is well set in there. Heavy industries are showing improvement and the whole feeling there is that things are better."

The English, he said, are watching the NRA with great interest. He said that through his friends in England he obtained figures proving improvement in trade there as well as employment increases.

"The railroads and basic industries are getting better," he added.

About Germany's withdrawal from the league: "It isn't my job to talk about that. Universal statemanship is not my business."

He sat up startled when Russia was mentioned. "You say the United States is about to recognize Russia? That's interesting!" he chuckled again, and was silent.

Asked about international business again, he said: "Do you want me to prophesy?" Somebody said, "Yes." He said: "I won't prophesy. I prefer to prophesy after the event."

Evasive About Banking.

"Do you feel that security affiliates should be divorced from banking?"

"I think it is the business of banks to obey the law, but I don't know yet what that means," Mr. Morgan answered.

"Do you feel that private bankers will have to concentrate on investment banking rather than commercial banking as a result of the new laws?"

"When I went away three months ago," Mr. Morgan said, "I said I didn't know what the new laws meant and that we would find out first and then do whatever we were supposed to do."

Mr. Morgan spoke glowingly of his six weeks shooting grouse in Scotland, adding: "And if it means anything, I might add I'm in excellent health."

"I am not a public figure," he wanted it understood, however; "I am a private person."

U. OF C. DEAN HAS HOPES FOR NRA IN COURT TEST

Dean William H. Spencer of the University of Chicago school of business told an audience in Fullerton hall, the Art institute, last night that if the national industrial recovery act were brought before the United States Supreme court, reasonable grounds might be found for upholding its constitutionality.

"There is little or no authority," he said, "for saying that the court may declare legislation unconstitutional on the ground that it runs counter to the spirit of the constitution.

"The constitution does not specifically and expressly forbid one branch of the government to delegate its powers to another. In view of the fact that the delegation of power in question is of a temporary character to enable the President to meet a great economic emergency, and in view of the fact that congress can resume these powers when it desires, the Supreme court can, without doing violence to the constitution and without establishing any dangerous precedent, approve the delegation of powers involved in the recovery legislation."

HOUSE IS READY FOR SHOWDOWN ON RELIEF BILLS

Speaker Roe, Doyle in Hot Exchange.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—The stage was set today for next Tuesday's big battle in the Illinois house of representatives when all but one of the bills in Gov. Horner's $30,000,000 idle relief program will be on third reading. About 20 members of the house today advanced five of the bills and held the sixth for amendment. It had been agreed at yesterday's adjournment, that downstate opponents of the bond issue plan would hold their fire until Tuesday.

A brief but fiery interchange between Speaker Arthur Roe of Vandalia and Representative Howard L. Doyle of Decatur, both Democrats, enlivened the session.

Doyle Is Overruled.

Doyle was not present when the bills were advanced. Arriving later he asked that one be recalled for amendment, but R. V. Libonati [Rep., Chicago], raised the point of no quorum and the speaker sustained him. Doyle persisted and Mr. Roe finally turned him down with some force.

"I'm sorry I nominated you for speaker," Doyle complained, walking back to his seat.

"Didn't Give a Hang."

"You needn't be sorry," Roe retorted. "You didn't help me a bit. And you know-I didn't give a hang whether I was speaker."

"Well, there were certain things I did to help you get the job," Doyle fired back.

"I'm sorry if you did," Roe returned and the incident closed when James T. Thurns [Dem., Kankakee], moved adjournment.

OFFICE HOLDERS' ARMY SPRINGS UP IN WAKE OF NRA

Chicago Gets a Generous Share of Pro-Consuls.

Chicago has been given a generous share of the new regimental order of public officeholders who have sprung up all over the country under the new deal, a survey disclosed yesterday.

A corps of federal pro-consuls with impressive titles and an army of sub and sub sub aides have sprung up in the campaign by the national administration to restore the nation to economic normalcy by pouring billions of dollars into public works programs and other government controlled ventures and imposing supervision in every likely field.

In the Chicago area these generals who are serving under the regulatory banners of the NRA, the AAA, the RFC, the FHLB, the CCC, the HOLC, the TVA and others including the recently added FDIC, with their staffs, number almost 500. The salaries of these boards, mediators, managers, coordinators, administrators and deputies in Chicago alone total more than $1,000,000 annually.

Exclusive of Expenses.

The salaries are exclusive of numerous incidental expenses. Nor do they take into account the costs of outfitting and maintaining the numerous office quarters that had to be made available. For example, the Chicago headquarters of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration recently took over practically the entire seventh floor of the Congress Bank building, 506 South Wabash avenue.

As an indication of the great expense attached to these multiple units of pro-consuls throughout the country, it was pointed out that the yearly salaries of the various Chicago officials is almost one-fourth of the annual cost of maintaining the entire National Recovery Administration. It was recently announced that the cost of operating the NRA nationally for the first year would be $4,250,000, or at the rate of $11,600 a day.

Some of the new deal officials here were averse to telling just what their duties were, how many employés they had, or what their salaries were. C. F. Spofford, who is in charge of the Chicago headquarters of the AAA, would not even disclose his title or the nature of his activities. W. C. McQueen, milk marketing specialist under the AAA, took a similar attitude, stating that "Washington told us to be careful about giving out information."

Others Refuse Information.

George Fonger, in charge of the meat processing code under the AAA, said that his duties and personnel and salary were "my own personal business." Ira A. Moore, Chicago area manager of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said that his salary and the salaries of his 170 employés "should be kept out of the newspapers, particularly THE TRIBUNE." On Mr. Moore's staff are four attorneys drawing annual salaries of $6,000 to $8,000 each.

Officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Evanston, which was established by a federal subscription of $15,000,000, would not divulge the salaries of the operating staff headed by A. R. Gardiner, executive vice president. Mr. Gardiner took the position that the institution was a semi-private enterprise because the expenses of operating it were paid out of the profits on interest earnings on loans.

Most of the other emergency administration officials, however, gave all facts concerning their public positions without hesitation. In cases where the information was refused the data were forthcoming in Washington. In one case, that of the Federal Deposit Guarantee Insurance corporation, even at the capitol information relating to W. I. Schuman, the Chicago representative, and his staff, was flatly denied.

Pro-Consuls and Their Salaries

In the following table appears the names of the new federal pro-consuls in the Chicago area under the New Deal, annual salaries, the office which each holds and its function, the number of employés attached to each office, and the total of all salaries paid in each unit. Some of the personnel and salary figures are in round numbers. In several instances, as in the case of Daniel Sands, who handles both federal conservation and state public relief work, there is a combination of emergency and ordinary federal duties. The table follows:

	Annual salary of pro-consul	Number of employés	Total of all salaries
Ira A. Moore, RFC loan agency manager, 144 West Jackson boulevard; loans to banks, mortgage and insurance companies	$10,000	170	$324,000
William G. Donne, state manager of the Home Owners' Loan corporation, 34 North La Salle street; loans to home owners who need refinancing aid	7,500	100	290,000
W. I. Schuman, administrator of the Chicago office of the Federal Deposit Insurance Guarantee corporation, 230 South La Salle street (Schuman's salary not procurable)	.....	40	80,000
J. S. Campbell, marketing specialist in meat, live stock, and wool prices, 999 Exchange avenue	4,600	15	46,000
A. R. Gardner, executive vice president of the Federal Home Loan bank, 2544 West Railroad avenue, Evanston; loans to home mortgage loaning institutions	8,500	16	45,000
Joshua D'Esposito, consulting engineer for the Illinois public works advisory board, United States courthouse; easy money works projects	6,000	12	40,000
Harry A. Chetham, manager of the Chicago branch of the Agricultural Credit corporation, 4201 South Halsted street; loans to farmers and stockmen for financing agricultural and live stock operations	5,600	16	40,000

Norwegian Cabinet Defies Demand for Resignation

OSLO, Norway, Oct. 20.—(AP)—In the face of demands from the Labor party which made substantial gains in Sunday's national elections, the Liberal government announced tonight that it refuses to resign. The government emphasized that a decision of the storting [parliament] is necessary for a change in government and the storting cannot meet until January. It also pointed out that in spite of its recent gains the Labor party still had not a majority of seats.

ILLINOIS $2,300 OF $1,800,000 TO CHICAGOLAND

Other Nearby States Get Public Works Money.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—Chicagoland walked off with $1,800,000 of the $5,000,000 in federal easy money which Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes handed out today, but Illinois got only $2,300 to build a fence in Peoria.

As he doled out more than a million and a half dollars to Illinois' sister states in Chicagoland, much of it to Wisconsin, home of the Progressive Republicans he espouses, Ickes explained that the Peoria fence will give work to fifty of the state's unemployed for one month.

Fence and Materials.

The fence is to go along the Franklin street bridge in Peoria, and the $2,300 which Ickes granted outright to the city is to cover 30 per cent of the costs for materials and labor. The city asked for no loan in addition to this grant.

Almost half of the day's easy money allocations in Chicagoland went to Wisconsin.

These Had More Luck.

The Chicagoland allotments were: Ann Arbor, Mich., $650,000; Ottumwa, Ia., $42,000; Fond du Lac, Wis., $434,700; Tomah, Wis., $48,700; Douglas county, Wis., $437,500; Anderson, Ind., $209,000; Peoria, Ill., $2,300, and Mason City Ia., $13,000.

Outside of Chicagoland, the remaining easy money today was scattered over thirty-six projects, most of which were in Massachusetts, Minnesota, Idaho, Delaware, California, and Washington.

Act to Find Jobs for Relief Recipients, Reducing Rolls

The Illinois Emergency Relief commission yesterday announced that efforts are now being made to work out a plan through which jobless men and women on the relief rolls can be placed in regular employment. This statement was the first annunciation of a new policy adopted by the commission. In the past no efforts have been made by the commission to obtain regular employment for indigents.

The new plan as outlined by Robert J. Dunham, chairman of the commission, contemplates the coöperation of the Illinois free employment office. It is hoped that branches of this office can be placed in various branch headquarters of the relief commission so that jobs—when they are to be had—can be made known to the relief recipients.

The new policy in reference to the employment service and the issuance of 40 warrants on Thursday for men and women who have been fraudulently receiving relief are considered to be the outcome of Gov. Horner's attention to relief problems. He recently appointed Mr. Dunham to the commission to fill the vacancy left when Edward L. Ryerson Jr., former chairman, resigned.

Hopeful of Placing Large Number.

The possibility that the relief commission may be able to find jobs for large numbers of those on the relief rolls was considered good by relief authorities. They asserted that the state employment bureau had as many as 40 jobs offered by employers who sought housekeepers and maids, which they were unable to fill early this week.

In most of these jobs, it became known, the employers offered a small salary and board and room. Most of the salaries averaged $3 a week, the employment officials said. Usually these jobs were snatched up by young women eager to work. Recently, however, some of these jobs have gone begging for workers who refused to consider jobs which paid less than $5 a week.

In several cases, the employment people said, the applicants for these jobs were on the relief rolls. They felt that they would be provided for until they found better jobs and so they turned these offers down. With the jobs offered directly through case workers in the relief bureaus, it is expected that they would find many takers.

Keep in Touch with Employers.

The relief commission at present has a department which maintains contact with former employers of many of those on the rolls. The employers in these cases are asked to take back old employés when new jobs appear, but there was no effort to find new jobs for any of the relief clients.

Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins in Washington yesterday announced that he has authorized a grant of $1,993,654 to the Illinois Relief commission for use during the last half of October. The commission finds it necessary to seek the federal relief because of the shortage of money resulting from the delay in passage of the relief bond issue in the state legislature. The bill passed the senate on Thursday. Sales tax funds now in hand cannot be used until the Illinois Supreme court has passed upon the validity of the act. A test case now is pending before the court.

ASK 113 MILLION U. S. EASY MONEY FOR LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—The total of Los Angeles and county applications for federal easy money in construction projects mounted today to more than 113 million dollars with the filing of requests for aid on eight new city projects.

The new projects, six of them in the San Pedro and Wilmington harbor area, are classed as self-liquidating. The money amounting to $25,069,548 is divided 70 per cent as aid, thirty per cent as a grant.

THE PLIGHT OF THE FARMER.

Gov. Langer of North Dakota, who has ordered a state embargo on the shipping of spring wheat, says that the farmer is the forgotten man. Gov. Bryan of Nebraska will not declare a similar embargo, but he says the farmer's throat is being cut from ear to ear. If Gov. Langer and Gov. Bryan are in despair, Mr. Wallace and Mr. Peek of the agricultural adjustment administration must be fathoms below them in the abyss. Mr. Wallace and his advisers have outdone what might be regarded as the limit of ingenuity in agricultural relief. They may look at their critics with moist eyes and ask what possibly there was to be done, however fantastic, that they had not thought of and tried.

No law of economics or of the land has been permitted to stand in the way of the projects Mr. Wallace and his advisers have thought could take the mortgage off the farmer's house and barn, keep his schools open for his children, move his products into profitable markets, and put money in his pocket.

The farmer has been given a rental on land he agrees not to cultivate. The government has bought millions of his pigs and slaughtered them to take them off the market. Food has gone into tankage for grease to keep it out of the butcher shops. A processing tax is to be added to the cost of meat production to pay the farmer a subsidy. From the farm board of the Hoover administration to Mr. Wallace and Mr. Peek of the Roosevelt administration, the government has been a buyer of wheat in an effort to raise its price by taking surpluses at the expense of the taxpayer.

Cotton lands have been subsidized and checks have been sent to growers for what they did not grow. It has been made a crime to sell milk at a lower than a code price, even if the lower price were profitable both to the seller and the buyer. Federal money for the lifting of farm mortgages has been provided, loans have been made for seed and stock food, and the loans have been virtually forgiven to the borrower for the time being at least. The law that no one may receive federal money who is in debt to the federal government has been abrogated for the farmer's benefit. Law has required processors, as in the case of the California packers of fruit, to confine themselves to a quota pack and to furnish money for the purchase of surplus to hold up prices and prevent a market glut.

Extraordinary law has been used to stop foodstuff production, not by prohibiting the farmer from raising it, but by subsidizing him not to do so. The treasury has been opened to the demands of the agricultural administrators and money has been poured into the various schemes intended to destroy meat and grain and raise the prices of what consumers must pay for the necessities of life. Taxes are freely imposed for this purpose and the consumer has felt that he alone was unconsidered in all the government's schemes. Many warnings have been given against this program of tax subsidy, destruction and limitation of processing and production, but it has gone ahead. The farmer's plight may be what he says it is, but if so the fault could hardly be laid at the door of Mr. Wallace's imagination or activity.

Elsewhere in the administration of the recovery plan there is compulsion. Outside of the rural sections citizens are told what they must do under penalty. The farmer has been asked to comply and receive rents, tax proceeds, subsidies and loans if he will do so. Elsewhere business is threatened with enforced and costly restrictions, but the farmer has been advised, exhorted, and paid. Cautious men have feared the extraordinary things done by the agricultural administration would not work, but the administrators have had a free hand and have undertaken to do miracles. The farm has not been taxed for these experiments. It has been paid for them. Mr. Wallace must be at his wits' end.

FOOTBALL HOLDS ITS OWN.

Michigan is prepared for nearly 90,000 spectators at the game with Ohio State university today, a pre-slump capacity crowd. The reason is that the game is expected to be one of football's best. The team that beat Cornell, 40 to 0, meets the team that beat Virginia, 75 to 0, and later Vanderbilt, 20 to 0. No expert can see how either team can be defeated or how either can be kept from winning. Apparently two inevitabilities are meeting, and nature will have to make the best of the impossible.

This is the better article which will always get the customers. The accessible citizens can't afford to resist the sales pull of the event, and wherever they're getting the money, they're at least getting it. It proves the doctrine of improved goods. That doctrine holds good throughout conference football.

It is confidently asserted that nowhere else in the country can a university association of teams produce ten such. The winners have to be good because the losers will be. And so the big American can show weathers the hard times, a noteworthy phenomenon.

A FEDERAL WORK.

Federal Works Administrator Ickes is reported to have told the advocates of a federal airport on Chicago's lake front that while the government will contribute 30 per cent of the cost, some way must be found locally for providing the remaining 70 per cent. We are not disposed to protest any decision of Secretary Ickes for the protection of the public works fund from inequitable local demands, but we hope he will give full consideration to the importance of the federal aspects of the airport project and make his final decision as favorable as possible to its accomplishment.

Harbors are developed and maintained liberally by federal aid, although the local benefits involved are undeniable. Chicago has never been a selfish mendicant on the doorstep of the federal capital and its drafts upon the federal treasury have been modest. If circumstances permitted, as Secretary Ickes knows enough of the spirit of Chicago to admit, Chicago would build this airport at its own expense and present it to the nation, as it virtually has done with the waterway. It does not pretend to hide its own particular interest in the improvement of its airport facilities, but it asks a broad and farsighted consideration of the very substantial interest of the federal mail and transport in the immediate establishment of this air harbor.

As the hub of the nation's airways utilized by the mail service, the merits of the location are unequaled and will make possible a continuing and substantial saving in money as well as a profitable increase in efficiency. Many millions have been poured out and will continue to flow into projects with less federal utility than this air transport improvement. It should not be postponed through local difficulties, for delay will be translated in a substantial loss to the federal service itself. We think the proposed airport is so important a feature of the nation's system of air transport that its local aspects are irrelevant and that it should be established by the federal government on that principle as any great harbor facility is.

MR. ALLEN'S ACCURATE CONFUSION.

Henry J. Allen, former governor of Kansas, explains all. On his return from Europe he discovers that parts of Ella Winter's book, "Red Virtue," were found in his series of syndicated articles on Russia. Harcourt, Brace & Co., Miss Winter's publishers, made a point against Mr. Allen's use of material as his own which Miss Winter had written. Authors and publishers sometimes object to appropriations of this character.

Mr. Allen's explanation should be satisfactory to most fair minded people. As an interpreter of soviet Russia, spending seven weeks in a complete survey to qualify himself for expert opinion, he grabbed everything in sight. As he says, at the end of seven weeks his notebooks were full of material from varied sources, a vast miscellany of what he had seen, heard and read. He then began to write at high speed, as he says, and in great confusion. Clippings, jottings, articles, stories, handouts, marginal notes, and what not were everywhere and, as Mr. Allen says, he went blundering through them. He could not distinguish what he had read from what he had been told, what he had seen from what he had been told he had seen, what was his material from what was somebody else's material.

Grabbing here and grabbing there, working surely and expertly against time, interpreting the soviet situation accurately and intelligently, he reproduced some of Miss Winter almost verbatim. He would have done the same for a soviet press agent and probably did.

Mr. Allen says that his accurate and intelligent interpretation of the soviets, including part of Miss Winter's, confirmed his belief that there should be recognition of the communists, based probably upon his unprejudiced evaluation of the soviet government. No fair minded person will find fault with Mr. Allen's explanation of the appearance of Miss Winter's writings in his articles. The favored procedure of American soviet sympathizers in evaluating Russia intelligently and without prejudice is to travel fast, grab everything, and come to the same balanced conclusions they had before they entered to travel under the tutelage of equally unprejudiced, accurate and intelligent guides. In this whirlwind of accuracy and intelligence, Miss Winter got grabbed. And any one can understand how it would be possible and even inevitable.

At only one point would there be an inclination to argue with Mr. Allen. He says he was not trying to produce literature, but to tell a straight story. A critic might remark that a great many straight stories have made excellent literature. Possibly the former Kansas governor didn't miss being literature quite so much as he missed being straight.

Editorial of the Day

A PRESENT TO HIMSELF.

[The Minneapolis Tribune.]

Secretary Ickes' reference to the $3,300,000,000 public works program as "the taxpayers' magnificent contribution to recovery" certainly stays well within the facts. It will be generally conceded, at least, that such a sum is not to be sneezed at, that it is being spent for recovery, and that the taxpayer, sooner or later, will contribute every last cent of it.

But where we do not question the aptness of Mr. Ickes' reference, we are frankly disconcerted by his candor. Since time immemorial the notion that there was any remote relation between public works and the taxpayer has been conscientiously discouraged by the public workers. They have always leaned to the contrary theory that public works come from Christmas trees, and are placed there by a benevolent governmental Santa Claus for the pleasure of the taxpayer. So if Mr. Ickes had been a bit more orthodox he would have referred to the government's magnificent contribution to recovery and let it go at that.

But being Mr. Ickes, who is nothing if not frank, he has stated a shocking truth, to wit, that the taxpayer always foots the bills for whatever public works may hang upon his Christmas tree. Uncle Sam may wear the white whiskers and distribute the gifts, but the pennies to pay for them will all be shaken, sooner or later, from the bank of little Willie Taxpayer.

All of which may momentarily give little Willie a twinge of pain and disillusionment, but it will hardly keep him from clamoring, while the public works packages are being passed around, for as much as he can get.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

THESE DAYS THINGS get more and more upside down every minute, and after they get upside down they start whirling around. Which makes it worse. For instance, here's North Dakota defying the NRA and threatening to call out the state troops to stop shipments of wheat. North Dakota can't fire on Fort Sumter, as South Carolina did, because it hasn't got a Fort Sumter. But otherwise it might. Or, anyhow, heave a brick through the front window. Or do forts have front windows? Anyhow, things seem so much like a nightmare these days that when I looked out of the window yesterday morning at the soldiers in the World's Fair parade down the Boul Mich I thought at first it was the confederate army marching up to prevent North Dakota from going out of the Union.

THERE IS NO HELL.

"There is no Hell," you say; but I, who listen,
Am silent, pondering. I know too well
Behind the light that you admire glisten
The raging flames—the blazing fires of Hell.

You do not recognize its hidden portals—
The little doors that open to a touch.
They mask themselves to dupe unwary mortals
Who long for exploration overmuch.

There is no Hell? I know its every highway.
I know each signpost pointing to despair.
I wandered down each twisted, anguished byway,
To find pain and remorse awaiting there.

There is no Hell? Hell lies round and about you.
Souls in dire torment greet you with a smile.
They hide their desperate knowledge—not to flout you—
But hoping Fate may spare you for a while.

There is a Hell—to each his private burning;
To each his hidden heartache and regret.
"And is there, then, no Heaven for our yearning?"
I do not know. I have not found it yet.

THEY'RE GOING TO TEACH the cops of New York to speak better English. If it can be done. They may be able to make a New York policeman stop saying "squeal" for "complain" and "mugged" for "photographed," but how can they make any copper anywhere quit saying "youse guys" or "scram"? And after they've reformed the speech of the cops, why doesn't some professor start work on the preachers and make them in their Sunday sermons over the radio stop referring to "that immortal dockiment, the constetooshun of the United States," and that this or that evil "threatens to roon this country." "Constetooshun" and "roon" are just as heartbreaking and peace destroying as "youse guys" and "scram."

BUT IF THERE are to be no saloons when whisky comes back (what an amusing thing that is—"when whisky comes back") and if there are to be no old-fashioned saloons, then how are we to know when a man is drunk? For in the good old days the infallible test for drunkenness was when a customer tried to kiss the bartender good-night. Then the bartender would know the man was intoxicated and he would tap him on the head with the bung starter and throw him out on the sidewalk. Now, if there are to be no saloons, then there will be no bartenders, and so how are we to know? A man might stay drunk several days and nobody would ever guess it. Something should be done about this. Write to your congressman today!

NIGHT JOBS.

MRS. E. M. writes: Will continual night work impair the health? My husband gets on an average of six to seven hours' sleep during the day, and at times he feels exhausted and too tired to go on.

REPLY.

Two questions are raised by your letter. One is as to comparative healthfulness of night and day work. The other is as to the sufficiency of six to seven hours' sleep.

During the war it was deemed advisable to keep certain industries going day and night. One shift had to work nights. The effect of night jobs on workers was carefully studied. It was not possible to prove that night work of itself was harmful. It is difficult for a night worker to get eight hours of equal uninterrupted sleep. Custom makes the daytime noisier. It makes it difficult to protect the sleeper against callers, doorbells, peddlers, and street hawkers. In the summer the sleeper finds the day heat oppressive and the light is not easily kept out.

Except for indirect matters such as these, night work should be no more trying than day work. In ordinary times thousands have jobs that call for night work. There is no statistical evidence that they are less healthy or have a shorter life expectancy. Life insurance companies have not found newspaper men, railroad men, postal clerks, or others who do night shifts to be poorer risks than fellow workers on the same type of jobs, but doing day work.

Nevertheless the belief that night work is harmful was strong enough to cause the British commission on the health of munition workers to recommend that work be alternated—say one month on a day shift and one on a night. To my mind this seemed an unwise recommendation. Often a man becomes accustomed to a night shift and his home is regulated on that basis. It is better for him to stick to his grooves.

Jumping back and forth breaks up grooves and adds to friction, and that increases wear and tear.

The answer to the second question is that few men can remain in good health on a six to seven hour sleeping schedule. Most men require eight hours or more. Very few require less than eight. That this man is not getting enough sleep is proved by the fact that at times he feels "exhausted and too tired to go on." In the course of time a man who frequently feels exhausted and too tired to go on will pay the price of chronic fatigue.

One legitimate objection to night work is the practical difficulty night workers have in getting sufficient sleep.

HOW TO TAKE A SHOWER.

1. In taking a shower, is it necessary or advisable to let the stream fall on the crown of the head? Would it not be equally beneficial if the head were protected, and the spray directed to the nape of the neck and shoulders?

2. What about psoriasis? Is it dangerous or protective in the sense of warding off other complaints? I have heard this last theory advanced.

REPLY.

1. It would unless the circumstances are exceptional.

2. Psoriasis is not dangerous. The worst that can be said is that it is disfiguring. Nor is it protective.

SEVERAL OTHER CAUSES.

F. L. D. writes: Does a hemorrhage of the mouth ever come from any other causes than tuberculosis? If so, what are they?

REPLY.

Yes. Among the possibilities are scurvy, pyorrhea, infections of the type that cause arthritis, nosebleed, varicose veins in upper air passages, aneurysm.

A SEED EATER.

Mrs. A. writes: I have a very bad habit of eating Indian nuts, pumpkin seeds, watermelon seeds, with the skins and everything. Is it bad? Does it cause appendicitis?

REPLY.

1. It is an abnormal taste and a bad habit without justification. Pumpkin seed is a vermifuge of some reputation. All vermifuges are potential poisons. Those are about the only potential bad features.

2. No.

Recently the beauty parlor operators of the county have published a notice that it is an offense, subject to a fine, if any one sets another's hair, regardless of whether they pay or not. Can they prosecute? H. M. G.

Under section 1 of the act of 1925 "it shall be unlawful for any person to practice . . . beauty culture without a certificate." Sec. 2 defines beauty culture as "any one or combination of the following practices constitutes the practice of beauty culture when done for cosmetic or beautifying purposes and not for the treatment of disease. . . . The application of cosmetic preparations . . . arranging . . . or otherwise treating by any means the hair of any person."

This wording would be broad enough to cover a mother's brushing her baby's hair or perhaps even her own hair. We see no way to avoid such an absurdity without construing the word "practice" so as not to cover your case, but the enforcing officials might be persuaded to take a different view. BUILDING TO BE DEMOLISHED.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—[Friend of the People.]—On our corner is an old school building that is not in use and is a disgrace to the neighborhood and also dangerous for the children who play there. Broken glass is scattered all around and the building itself is in a dangerous condition. C. F. C.

As a result of a notice sent to the owner of the building in question, we have been informed by the owner that he will have said building wrecked as soon as possible and expects to have the work finished within a week from this time.

UNCLAIMED GOODS.

Athelstane, Wis., Oct. 17. — [Legal Friend of the People.]—How long after notifying a party must I wait before selling some goods left for repairs? I have several specimens of jobs here uncalled for. I have a sale for some, and inasmuch as my money and labor are in same I would like to know the law before selling them. W. H.

Sec. 289.41 of the Wisconsin statutes gives a lien to persons doing work on any article of personal property. Sec. 289.48 authorizes enforcing the lien by sale at public auction on written notice to the owner, when the value does not exceed $100.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FRIEND OF THE FARMER

[Inquiries on problems of farm management, financing or governmental regulations sent to this department must be accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope for reply.]

C. J. H. asks: I understand that potato growers in northern Wisconsin are being arrested and fined in Chicago for selling truckloads of potatoes without a produce dealer's license. Must I get a license to sell part of my crop?

Answer: A license fee of $150 is required by a Chicago city ordinance applying to what is known as a wholesale itinerant produce dealer. Unless you are licensed, we would advise you to write to the city collector's office in Chicago for provisions of this ordinance.

M. W. asks: To whom do we apply for a government loan to help us buy seed for next year's crop? The crops on my farm in Dakota this year were taken by grasshoppers.

Answer: Make application to the seed and crop loan office of the Farm Credit administration. If in South Dakota at Pierre, if in North Dakota at Bismarck. A ruling of the FCA on Sept. 26 allows the seed and crop production loan offices and regional agricultural corporations to finance the seeding of not to exceed 85 per cent of a borrower's average annual acreage of wheat for a period of the last four years. This limitation applies if the average annual acreage is in excess of 95 acres. Where winter wheat is necessary for live stock forage, plantings up to 80 acres may be made on a government loan, regardless of previous use of the land. Seed and crop production loan offices are making no loans for planting forage crops.

NRA Question Box

Following are typical questions occasioned by the national recovery act and their answers as given by the Chicago Recovery council which is aiding President Roosevelt's economic rehabilitation movement here. Other questions and their answers will be given daily in this column.

QUESTION—If an employé works more than 40 hours per week over a period of six days is he to be paid time and one-third or straight time for the overtime? What are the hours of overtime of the direct mail advertising code?

ANSWER—Under the direct mail advertisers code a 40 hour week is prescribed as the maximum week, averaged over a four week period. No one week may be more than 48 hours. Hourly employés are to be paid straight time up to 48 hours with no additional working hours permitted. Weekly employés are to receive their same salaries despite overtime.

QUESTION—I work 67 hours a week for a salary of $8 a week in a delicatessen store where I deliver goods and clean up. Can my employer be made to live up to the NRA?

ANSWER—If your employer read THE TRIBUNE several days ago he should be thoroughly convinced that the President is going to see to it that the employment agreements are kept. The quickest way to bring your employer in line is to report him in writing to the NRA compliance board, 201 North Wells street.

SOME INFORMATION FOR MRS. SMITH.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—The following information may be of interest to Mrs. Walter M. Smith:

Galena, Ill., in the late twenties was a thriving mining city. The Indians had mined lead there for many years before the arrival of the white men, and the white men extended their mining operations until in 1828 there were thirty thousand tents in the camp. From that time on, however, there was a rapid decline.

In the early thirties farmers from Egypt spent their winters working in the lead mines. Their remuneration, however, was so little that they were called suckers for their efforts. The use of the nickname gradually spread until it applied to the entire populace of the state.

ROBERT H. NIEMEYER.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—In answer to Mrs. Walter Smith's inquiry, I wish to state that while I was employed on a newspaper in Silver City, N. M., many years ago, an old soldier with whom I worked said to me one day, "Well, son, since you are from Illinois, can you tell me why they call your state the 'Sucker state'?" He then told me that the early settlers, when they became thirsty, would take their cane or a stick and jab it into the sand or soft soil; after withdrawing the stick the hole would fill with clear water and they would then kneel down and suck up the water. Hence the name, Illinois, "the Sucker state."

GEORGE ELLES DUDENBOSTEL.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Walter M. Smith asks for information concerning the nickname "Sucker" as applied to the people of Illinois.

This name was applied to us originally by our neighbors to the north, the Wisconsinites, years ago. Early in the spring of every year large numbers of Illinois fishermen were accustomed to invade the lower part of Wisconsin fishing for sucker fish. The Wisconsinites looked forward every year to this peaceful invasion of the sucker fishermen and gradually shortened the name to the "Suckers." I suppose a lot of people will immediately rise up on their hind legs and shout that the name is applied to us as a term of derision, which may be true at times, but its origin was as is described above.

EXPERIENCES AT THE FAIR.

Oak Park, Ill., Oct. 18.—I have just read Mrs. W. K. Jordan's letter in the Voice of the People and was surprised at her experience—so different from one I had with a stolen admission ticket.

I had bought some tickets at a parking space at the 18th street entrance, and when I presented one at the turnstile I was stopped and told that the ticket had been stolen.

Assuring me that I would lose nothing, but courteously asking if I would step to the office and give the details of the purchase, I was passed through and went to the office, where I told my story, which was respectfully listened to, after which the man thanked me and shook my hand. I was not delayed over five or ten minutes at the most.

Again on another visit, while in the Hall of Science, my boy fainted. A guard came up to me, took the boy from my arms, carried him to a water cooler, where he revived him, then carried him to the hospital, where with sympathetic kindness he was received and taken care of until we were able to leave.

I feel that I cannot let Mrs. Jordan's letter go by without comment, in view of my experience. A Century of Progress' constant courtesy should not be judged by a few lapses from grace.

JOSEPH F. NOVAK.

TOO MANY TAVERNS.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—I voted to repeal prohibition, but unless conditions speedily improve I will join the bone dry ranks, and judging from the remarks I hear a majority of the American people feel as I do.

Why do not the police close up all these obnoxious taverns that infest Chicago and the neighboring communities? They are all over, in all neighborhoods. As there are so many of them it is impossible to go anywhere without meeting a tavern. And after 10 p. m. it is impossible to pass one of these taverns without meeting a drunken man staggering out, using profane language, spitting on the sidewalk, and perhaps endangering one's life.

How long will a free people put up with this sort of tyranny? Do the streets of Chicago belong to the people or do they belong to the tavern owners who send out intoxicated men to annoy law abiding citizens?

FROM ONE FAIR TO ANOTHER.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—In the days of the World's Fair of '93, at which I was a gaping onlooker for one whole summer, I remember that the uplifters, the W. C. T. U. and various other reformers, were in a stew over the living pictures. It seems to me some highly rarefied female from London came over about that time and helped drape the various Venuses who threatened to taint our morals.

All in all there was a tremendous ruckus over the female form divine as it appeared clothed from neck to heels in thick tights. But today, with various fan dancers appearing with nothing on but a postage stamp or what have you, the only people who agitate the subject are the side show press agents and the thick headed cops, to say nothing of a publicity seeking mayor or judge. Who says common sense isn't winning out?

OLD DOCTOR.

THE LOST ROAD OF REMEMBRANCE.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—Can't we have the forestry corps restore the Wheaton "road of remembrance"? After the war we planted a beautiful avenue of trees on both sides of Roosevelt road and erected monuments with the names of Wheaton soldiers. When the road was widened the trees were torn up and the monuments removed. They should be replaced.

GETZ PREPARES TO TAKE OVER G.O.P. TREASURY

Hopeful of Building Up a New War Chest.

George F. Getz, coal magnate, prepared yesterday to take over the duties of treasurer of the Republican national committee. He expressed himself as confident of the future of the Republican party and hopeful of replenishing the party war chest.

Mr. Getz said he had been assured the party treasury would be turned over to him with a clean financial slate. At present, however, there is a deficit of $186,464, which was incurred in the closing days of the Hoover campaign. The Democratic national committee has a deficit of $524,292.

"In my conferences with the executive committee I have been told the deficit will be wiped out shortly," said Mr. Getz. "The obligations are principally for large amounts, which will be cleaned up before I take over the books.

Hope for New Contributors.

"I shall then set to work on the task of building up funds. In accepting the post I made no guarantee of any amount. It is likely that we shall have to work up a new list of contributors because of the change in financial conditions. This I shall do and I believe we shall succeed."

Treasurer Getz said he is familiar with the duties of his office because of his association with the late Fred W. Upham, his former partner and treasurer of the committee from 1918 to 1924. Mr. Getz said he conferred frequently with his partner on duties of the office and sometimes accompanied him to Washington in the performance of his duties.

"I did not seek the office," he said. "But I propose to give it my best. As treasurer I am a member of the executive committee of the party and propose to take an active part in its deliberations. What present plans are I do not know. I shall meet with the executive committee within a few days and dig into the work.

Congressional Fight Ahead.

"The first task before us is the congressional elections of 1934. I presume plans for this battle, which begins with the primaries of next spring, will be considered at the meeting. This will set me to work almost immediately."

Mr. Getz was asked to give his views on the present administration and the NRA. He declared every citizen should give the present administration full support in its effort to bring about the return of prosperity.

Of the NRA he said: "The NRA is a new situation and without a better substitute we should give it our full support. Personally I have found that it has purged my business of many evils."

Mr. Getz said he expected the books of the committee would be turned over to him within two weeks.

GETZ PRESENTS HIS ANIMAL COLLECTION TO THE CHICAGO ZOO

George F. Getz yesterday presented the animals in his zoo at Holland, Mich., to the Chicago Zoological park at Brookfield. The gift was made in a letter to John T. McCutcheon, TRIBUNE cartoonist and president of the Chicago Zoological society.

The Getz collection, valued at more than $60,000, includes 141 mammals, 201 birds, and 15 reptiles.

Mr. McCutcheon said the animals would be moved to their new home during the next month, after formal action by the animal committee of the Chicago zoo. This committee is made up of Herbert E. Bradley, Charles B. Goodspeed, Francis E. Manierre, and John T. Pirie. Mr. McCutcheon said he was delighted with the gift and said the animals in the Getz zoo are "in excellent condition because of the care they have received."

Mr. Getz, who gathered the animals in a 'round the world hunting trip, said that business and other responsibilities had moved him to give away the animals. Some comment was made on the fact that Mr. Getz had chosen the day after his appointment as treasurer of the Republican national committee to give away his one elephant.

Besides the elephant the collection includes a hippopotamus, an African rhinoceros, six lions, an Indian leopard, two tigers, a Malayan bear, a Syrian bear, a polar and a black bear, and monkeys. Included among the reptiles are two pythons.

The Chicago Zoölogical park is expected to open on or about July 1 with 2,500 to 3,000 animals in the zoo.

WIFE IS GRANTED A DIVORCE FROM POLISH SCULPTOR

Mrs. Helen Walker Szukalska, 2130 Lincoln Park West, was granted a divorce yesterday by Judge Joseph Sabath in the Superior court from Stanislaw Szukalski, accentric Polish sculptor.

She charged desertion. The couple were married in 1922, after meeting at the Art institute, where both were students. Mrs. Szukalska asked no alimony, having received as a property settlement her husband's waiver to his rights in three pieces of property in New York, Chicago, and Hollywood, according to her attorney, Lloyd A. Faxon.

Snowstorm Is Too Real, Film Girl Gets Bloody Nose

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Too much realism in a snow scene cost Lillian Harvey, screen actress, a bloody nose. Miss Harvey was the target of cotton snowballs at the hands of the chorus boys. One of the balls hit the actress with such force that it caused her nose to bleed. The actress retired to her dressing room.

FRENCH PREMIER WARNS DEPUTIES INFLATION'S NEAR

Says Unbalanced Budget Endangers Currency.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The defeat of Premier Edouard Daladier's cabinet loomed menacingly tonight as Radical Socialists and Socialists failed to agree on the part of the premier's budget balancing program providing for a reduction in government employés' pay.

The premier warned the chamber of deputies finance committee that if the budget is not balanced inflation of the franc will be necessary in five or six weeks.

And, under the whip lash of the drooping franc, which went to 18.35 francs to the dollar [5.449 cents to the franc] in after hours trading, compared with an official close of 18.18 francs [5.5005 cents], the main elements of the government's support vainly struggled for a compromise.

Revolt in the Senate.

There also were rumblings in the senate, which wants more economies and less taxes.

Premier Daladier in presenting his program earlier this week maintained that if the budget were not balanced a new cabinet would have to be found. He asked that 8,000,000,000 francs [about $320,000,000 at par] be raised through economies and taxes.

The slump in the franc was attributed by financial experts to worry among foreign capitalists over the cabinet crisis following upon the wrangling by the finance committee, which seeks to satisfy the protests of taxpayers and those of civil servants and veterans, whose pay and pensions Daladier wants to cut.

The controversy centered over the proposal to slash the functionaries' wages. This the Socialists flatly opposed.

Deputies Balk at Pension Cut.

While the finance committee voted in principle to cut, without deciding on the amount, the committee rejected the veterans' pension reduction, thereby adding to the troubles of the government.

The premier's fight for the life of the government and the protection of the French currency will begin openly on Sunday, when debate will start in the chamber of deputies.

He asked that debate on the many sided budget program be limited to a week, but the finance committee told him this would be impossible.

Today's announcement occasioned universal satisfaction in the U. S. S. R. because from the resumption of official relations soviet Russia hopes for a threefold result:

Greatly increased credit facilities; the lifting of American barriers against some of its goods, and a strengthening of its position in the far east with a respect to its relations with Japan.

New York, Oct. 20.—[Special.]—Frances Dee, motion picture leading woman, and Joel McCrea, film star, took out a marriage license this afternoon at the New York municipal building and secretly were wed a short time later. The McCreas left at once for Westchester, N. Y.

Miss Dee gave her age as 23 and her address as Los Angeles. Mr. McCrea is 27 and his residence is Hollywood.

A former film extra, Miss Dee skyrocketed into prominence when Maurice Chevalier chose her for his leading woman. She met Mr. McCrea when he played opposite her in "The Silver Cord."

Miss Dee formerly was a student at the University of Chicago and worked as an ad taker for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE prior to her movie start two years ago.

FIREBUG SALUTES NAZI CHIEFTAIN IN COURT DRAMA

Responds Like Soldier to Roaring Command.

BERLIN, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The audience at the reichstag arson trial today was electrified by seeing stolid Marinus Van der Lubbe, one of the five accused, responding like a soldier to a roaring command of the Nazi chieftain, Count Wolf von Helldorff, while an unidentified spectator shouted facetiously, "His master's voice."

The young, aristocratic police chief of Potsdam succeeded where all others had failed, namely, in getting a ready response from the young Dutch brickmason, who has confessed starting the fire.

For ten minutes the court tried to get Van der Lubbe to say whether he had seen the count before.

"Are you afraid to look him in the face?" Presiding Judge Wilhelm Buenger demanded of the defendant, who stood before him stooped over.

Alfons Sack, defense attorney, asked Von Helldorff to step closer to the defendant, so "the world can't say you were so far off he couldn't recognize you."

Then the count stepped up to Van der Lubbe and snapped out: "Zum donnerwetter! Put up your head and say something!"

Suddenly, electrically, the Dutchman straightened up, drew to attention like a soldier, and answered tersely but clearly, "No."

Earlier in the day Count von Helldorff testified that he issued orders for the arrest of leading communists and Socialist deputies at 11 o'clock the night of the fire last February on the assumption they had started the fire.

Questioned by Prisoner.

"According to our view," he said, "criminal elements in the state are generally Marxists."

Georgi Dimitroff, the defendant whose questions and remarks have brought down the ire of the court on many occasion, asked:

"What is your evidence that the communists and Socialists were the incendiarists?"

"After the reichstag was ablaze," Count von Helldorff replied, "there was not a doubt for me that the miscreants would generally be findable in the ranks of the Marxists. For this and reasons of safety I had prominent Socialists and communists taken into protective custody."

Nazi Leaders Testify.

Count von Helldorff, who with Paul Schulz, a former lieutenant, is charged in the "Brown Book" with having led a Nazi "arson squad" into the reichstag, testified they had nothing to do with the blaze.

Von Helldorf said he was in a Berlin restaurant when the fire broke out. Schulz testified he was in Tuthing, near Munich. Restaurant and hotel keepers, porters, waiters, doctors, nurses, and others corroborated this evidence.

What is in store for Germany's political prisoners was broadly hinted today during the hearing for 59 communists accused of slaying a Nazi storm trooper, Hans Eberhard Maikowski, and a policeman, Joseph Zauritz, in a political clash last Jan. 20.

The prosecutor significantly declared:

"Woe to those who leave this courtroom remaining bolshevists at heart! The fist of the third reich shall stay over them!"

This trial started Monday. There are 13 minors among the defendants.

HUSBAND OF ACTRESS, WALL STREET BROKER EMPLOYE, HANGS SELF

New York, Oct. 20.—[Special.]—Herbert B. Lederer, Wall street customers' man and husband of Isabel Leighton, author, actress, playwright, and publicist, was found hanging today from a transom in the library of his apartment. Detectives said it was suicide.

Miss Leighton, who is vice chairman of the women's division of the Joseph V. McKee mayoralty campaign, said that she and her husband had entertained friends last night and that they retired between midnight and 12:30 a. m. Her husband, she said, was in excellent health and spirits.

This morning at 8:10 o'clock the maid, Susan Wilkenson, who sleeps on the top floor of the apartment house, came down to work and found Mr. Lederer's body.

Hitler's Story Is a Handbook for Demagogue

Three Views of Germany Considered Here.

BY GEORGE J. SCHARSCHUG.
[Cable Editor of The Chicago Tribune.]

"My Battle," by Adolf Hitler. [Houghton-Mifflin.]

"The Brown Book of the Hitler Terror and the Burning of the Reichstag." [Knopf.]

"Germany Enters the Third Reich," by Calvin B. Hoover. [MacMillan.]

NAZI Germany? What is it? Why is it? Where is it going?

The answers to these questions are still anybody's guess. Three books now available serve to supply some sort of an answer to one or more of these questions. They also help to coördinate the daily pictures of Nazi Germany which newspaper dispatches are painting.

"My Battle," by Chancellor Adolf Hitler, explains the psychology behind the Nazi revolution.

"The Brown Book of the Hitler Terror and the Burning of the Reichstag" serves in turn to debunk much of Hitlerism. It also paints on a vast screen the medieval persecution, terrorism and blood letting that have marked Hitler's path to power.

"Germany Enters the Third Reich," by Calvin B. Hoover, is the most solid and best told of the three books. It is a balancing of the extremes: the work of a calm, studious, thorough, and neutral investigator.

Hitler's book should perhaps be classed as "old stuff." The first part of it was written in 1924 while he was imprisoned in the fortress of Landsberg am Lech for his part in the ill fated Munich putsch. The second part was written in 1927.

However, the book, which now appears in English for the first time, is a much more interesting document than was forecast by the various excerpts from it which have previously appeared in America's press. E. T. S. Dugdale has done a good job of abridging and translating. He has toned down the text in a number of places.

Hitler wrote his book for the instruction of his followers, not for foreign propaganda. It therefore reveals more of the man than would a more studied work designed for the world at large.

"The Leader" reveals himself not as a miracle man or one "sent by God," but as a super-egoist and a thorough demagogue. "My Battle" should prove a valuable handbook for ambitious politicians, particularly in this era of alphabetical economics. Here is a story of how one dictator made himself.

One is startled almost from the first page at Hitler's hatred for the Jew. Yet, as one reads on, the question arises whether much of this fanatical anti-Semitism is not stage setting, framed by the demagogue with a fine psychological knowledge of the "stupidity or simple-mindedness of the masses," to quote Hitler. The German people, sorely pressed, with their political and economic structure falling about their ears, had no desire to blame themselves. They wanted a "goat." Hitler gave it to them in the Jew. The Jew represented less than 1 per cent of the population, yet controlled much of the wealth, a vast part of the nation's intellectual leadership, and many of the choicer government positions. What better bait to excite greed, avarice, envy, and to satisfy the desire for a goat on which to blame all troubles.

There is much in this Hitler manual to startle any man who believes in democracy and the policy of freedom and equality, regardless of race, color, or creed. Hitler has no use or time for rule by the people.

"The Brown Book" was prepared by the World Committee for the Victims of German Fascism. The chairman is Prof. Albert Einstein, well known ex-pacifist, who recently announced that he had been misled by certain organizations and that he has never been disposed kindly to communism. Lord Marley, whom the Chinese considered too "liberal" or too radical to permit him to hold his Asiatic Anti-War congress in Shanghai and forced him to go to Vladivostok, wrote an introduction.

The book openly charges that the Hitler ministers, Goebbels and Goering, instigated the burning of the reichstag. It presents a vast amount of circumstantial evidence to support its charge. The gist of this "evidence" was cabled from London to THE TRIBUNE and printed on Sept. 1 of this year.

The book, too, is poorly edited for the American reader. English colloquialisms instead of the American language frequently appear. Values in German marks are translated into pounds sterling instead of the 100 cent dollars which still existed a few months ago.

Prof. Hoover's book is a real treat. Here is the work of an eyewitness who has kept his head and dug deep.

"How long must other nations expect to reckon with the National Socialist party as the absolute power in Germany?" he asks. "The answer is that it must be reckoned with as though it were permanent."

"THREE CITIES"

Sholom Asch, whose 912 page trilogy, "Three Cities," is hailed as a masterpiece.

Hervey Allen's Size Matches His Best Seller

HERVEY ALLEN, author of the biggest best seller that America has ever produced, "Anthony Adverse" [1,224 pages to be exact], arrived in Chicago the other day, the biggest author that has come our way for some time. Although there was the usual quip about having been in Chicago two hours and not having been shot at yet, there is little danger of Mr. Allen's being a gunman's target. . . . Two reasons: he looks as if he could easily pick up a gangster by the thumb and forefinger and snap him in two, and, judging by the number of copies of "Anthony Adverse" that have been sold, everybody by this time must have read it and liked it, and he would be spared out of municipal gratitude.

It would take somebody as vigorous and virile as Mr. Allen to turn out all of those words (in their lovely pattern) even in the length of time it took to write "Anthony Adverse."

"I spent four years at it," he said, as he showed us the manuscript. ["In longhand," I exclaimed at the sheer manual effort which must have gone into it.] "I used to use a typewriter until I realized that everything looks so much better in type than it does in longhand. 'This is swell stuff,' I'd say to myself the next morning after the previous day's work had got cold. It looked so neat and proper that I hated to do it over. So I took to pencil and the next day everything looked so bad that I'd do it over and over. This is perhaps the revision of a couple of revisions," and quite justly his hand touched lovingly the immense manuscript bound in three enormous volumes. There is a story about that manuscript which has not yet been told. After "Israfel," an admirer of that superb work, bought the manuscript of "Anthony Adverse" for $3,000 before it was written! That investment didn't feel the depression.

"I don't see why every one seems to think that 'Anthony Adverse' is outsize," he said. "True, there are not many long American novels, but it is not unusual that Russian novels, for instance, should be fifteen or sixteen hundred pages long. That exact length was necessary to the thing I wanted to do.

"Why did you choose that particular period to write about?"

"I can answer that question best in a roundabout way. Some one once said that what this country needed was a good 5 cent cigar. It seemed to me that what this country really needed, especially in those days when I started writing the book when it seemed to need so little, was a philosophy of life, and I chose a period which I thought corresponded to our own state of mind as much as any in the past. A period of peace devastated by the great Napoleonic wars as our heydays were wrecked by the world war.

"About that theory that the American public is too rushed to read a book of 1,224 pages . . . never before in the history of publishing have more readers had more time to read than they have now. The depression has done that much; it has apparently turned a lot of people into bookworms." Mr. Allen is, one might add, an even grander human being than this hastily recorded interview pictures him. F. B.

U. S. Near War in 1916, Avers Lloyd George

Considered as Threat to Force Peace.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Oct. 20.—How close President Wilson came to committing the United States to war in the early spring of 1916 is revealed in the second volume of David Lloyd George's war memoirs, published here.

Only one cautious word—"probably"—in a cable from President Wilson prevented the allies from getting a clear cut pledge of American intervention if Germany rejected their peace terms. And one word, "timidity," as Mr. Lloyd George sorrowfully describes it, was enough to cause the whole project to fall through.

The incident was an outgrowth of the President's own project to call a conference of the warring nations to discuss peace. Leading British statesmen had told Col. Edward M. House they were ready for peace, if Germany restored Belgium, Serbia, Alsace and Lorraine. "adjusted" the Austro-Italian frontier and gave Russia an outlet to the sea.

In return, the British were willing to offer Germany "compensations outside Europe," but insisted on "guarantees against future recurrence of such a catastrophe as this world war."

The intention was that if the Germans refused to accept these terms the United States would throw in her lot with the allies immediately.

"Col. House, who knew the President's mind better than any other living man, was convinced these terms would meet the President's view of the justice of the case," Mr. Lloyd George writes. The document, as cabled by Col. House, definitely committed the President to war, subject, of course, to the assent of congress, in the event of rejection by Germany. But the President, in his reply, inserted the word "probably" in front of the undertaking. In the view of Sir Edward Grey, the foreign minister, this completely changed the character of the proposal and he, therefore, did not think it worth while to communicate the purport of the negotiations to the allies.

In the light of subsequent knowledge, Mr. Lloyd George now admits there was not the faintest likelihood of Germany's accepting such terms in 1916, but this only makes him the more regretful now. Bitterly he taunts President Wilson with having been "afraid of public opinion in the United States," and Lord Grey with having been "frightened of our allies," and suggests that if it had not been for the one word "probably" the whole war would have been shortened by the help of the United States.

The book also tells of the sheer accident which led to the Balfour declaration and the establishment of the Jewish National Home in Palestine. As minister of munitions, Mr. Lloyd George was seriously worried by a shortage of acetone, which is essential for making cordite for explosives. In his dilemma he consulted C. P. Scott, editor of the Manchester Guardian, who suggested Dr. Chaim Weizmann, then a professor of chemistry at the University of Manchester.

Dr. Weizmann got busy in his laboratory and, after working night and day for weeks, came to Mr. Lloyd George to say the problem was solved. Here is Mr. Lloyd George's account of what follows:

"When our difficulties were solved through Weizmann's genius, I said to him: 'You have rendered great services to the state, and I should like to recommend you to his majesty for some kind of honor.' He said: 'There is nothing I want for myself, but I should like you to do something for my people.'

"That was the origin of the famous declaration about the National Home for the Jews in Palestine."

From the first to the last page, Mr. Lloyd George bitterly attacks the "incompetence" of the allied military leaders, who, he says, threw away repeated opportunities and wasted millions of lives.

The war might have been won in the Balkans in 1915 or 1916, he asserts, at the cost of fewer lives than were lost in the battle of the Somme. But the military men continued to hammer away at impregnable defenses in the west, "convinced that victory was awaiting their strategy, just around the next corner."

Among many fine character sketches in the volume is this of Lord Kitchener.

"He was like one of those revolving light houses which radiate moments of gleams of revealing light far out into the surrounding gloom, and then suddenly relapse into complete darkness."

He reveals for the first time that the prime ministership was offered to the earl of Balfour when the Asquith government fell.

*Editor's note: The first volume of Lloyd George's memoirs has just been published in America. It will be reviewed for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE by a member of the general staff of the A. E. F. and former American ambassador to Cuba, Col. Noble Brandon Judah.

'Two Franklins' Is Tale of Ben and Grandson

Frenchman Presents a Study of Patriots.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"The Two Franklins," by Bernard Fay." [Little-Brown.]

"FATHERS OF AMERICAN DEMOCRACY" the author calls Benjamin Franklin and his grandson, Benjamin Franklin Bache, the two Franklins who gave one his lifelong life and the other his life in a youthful death for the principles which have stirred and invigorated this nation through its astonishing development. The principles have been, shall we say, the white corpuscles in its body politic, keeping the red in regimentation.

Bernard Fay has a unique position in international literature. A Frenchman, the youngest member of that most august body of scholars, the College de France, occupying the American chair, which was created for him, he has written more understandingly, more humanly about many of our great historic figures than have any of their own countrymen. His life of Bejamin Franklin is the classic, popular life, in English, of that intricately and intensely human anomaly of character and that unswervingly, almost monastically dedicated patriot.

M. Fay writes with a brilliant French wit which, far from minimizing the historic importance of his work, gives it buoyancy but great power, like that giant air armada we saw in full flight last summer.

So frail those airships seemed to fight and conquer space, fragile, but tremendously powerful and tremendously of their period.

Something of that quality Mr. Fay's books have. They are definitely of the modern period, in method of approach, of writing and of technique, although they deal usually with a day past. A day forgotten in some cases. Definitely in the case of "The Two Franklins."

Vainly one looks for material on Benjamin Franklin Bache, the most beloved grandson of Benjamin Franklin. "Historians have little to say about him," M. Fay says, "but they mention him in passing rather as a vicious boy than as a man who lived his life." How little vicious a boy and how deeply and richly and fearlessly he lived his short life is the theme of M. Fay's enthralling narrative. Not only does the author bring to life a very real figure out of a dusty shadow, but he makes an important contribution to American political history in "The Two Franklins."

In his research on the life of Benjamin Franklin M. Fay first met young Benny Bache—and found him a boy who intrigued him as did no character in the whole Franklin entourage. Disappointed in his other grandson [Temple, illegitimate], Benny [legitimate] received an almost passionate devotion from Benjamin Franklin, the greatest international figure of his day. Benny, when a little boy, was taken by his grandfather to France, where he was taught everything that an aristocratic society and the subtle mental life of that highly civilized day offered. Then, lest he be schooled more in manners than in democratic virtue, he was sent to school in Switzerland, where he was trained to polite revolution.

"Geneva scarcely survived in him," writes M. Fay, "except as a yearning for devotion, moral purity and self-sacrifice. Of his French education he retained nothing but an instinct for refinement, intensity of feeling, and eagerness of mind. Out of all the dogmas, out of all the beliefs which he had received, learned, kept, discarded, he preserved only that faith in the future, in the spontaneous energy of the people and of Nature whom his grandfather adored in such simple and mysterious formulae, which he had himself learned to venerate at his side, and which remained the sole worship of his soul."

Benny Bache returned to America with his grandfather, who believed that he had prepared the boy perfectly for the same service to his country in which he had spent his life. His work had been better than he knew, for he had molded a fierce and fiery patriot in the boy. Because his patriotism took the form of attacking Washington, of pulling Jefferson from the pedestals which he adorned, of crying in his fearless newspaper so violently against a war with France that he was tried as a traitor [without being found guilty] after trying him as a spy was given up as too preposterous, his contemporaries at his youthful death turned on him the thunders of silence. Out of that obscurity M. Fay has rescued him, given him the historic position of leader of what he calls the second American revolution and—what is of even greater interest to the ordinary lay reader—written the life story of a man who truly "lived his life," brief though it was.

Benjamin Franklin told Benny as a boy, "Humanity is so fine, and it is going to be so great in the next few centuries. The happiness of mankind is bound to go on increasing, for philosophy, morality, politics and even daily life are undergoing marvelous improvements." Benny Bache as he grew into young manhood still believed that, or, even if the first full flush of his belief was gone, still hoped that it was true, and, according to M. Fay, dedicated himself to making it be true.

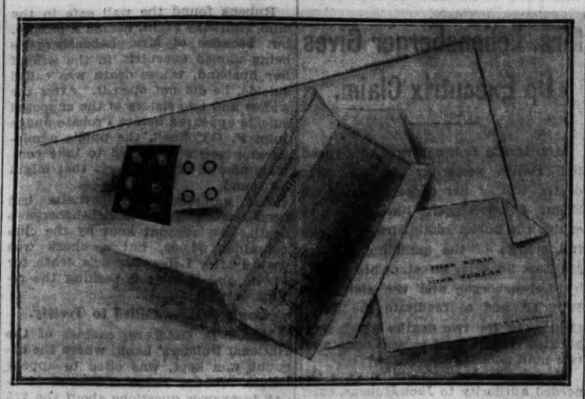
Of Interest to "Alice B. Toklas"



The unique Picasso item reproduced here is on exhibition at the Albert Roullier galleries.

Story of Visit

This original Picasso, here reproduced for the first time [in any language!] is a unique item of the most amusing interest to the readers of "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas," the book discussed at the moment more than any other by the contemporary intelligentsia.

In the autobiography Gertrude Stein [who wrote really her own autobiography in it] tells of calling on Picasso one day with Alice Toklas, finding him out and as a joke leaving their joint calling card with the corner formally turned down.

"In a few days," she writes, "we went again and Picasso was at work on a picture . . . at the lower corner . . . was Gertrude Stein's visiting card." And again "He made paper constructions . . . and gave one of these to Gertrude Stein. It is perhaps the only one left in existence." But Gertrude Stein's is not the only one left in existence. This one, discovered in Paris by a Chicago collector, is not only in existence, but is to be permanently in existence in Chicago. It was a great coincidence that it was found just as "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas" was published. On account of its timeliness in connection with the book, as well as a unique Picasso item, it has been loaned for exhibition in the Albert Roullier galleries.

Authors Entertained by Social Group of Century of Progress

The firmament was ablaze with literary stars at the luncheon which the writers' group of the social functions committee of the World's Fair gave yesterday for visiting craftsmen. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, chairman, introduced them, ladies first. Isabel Wilder, author of "Mother and Four," she called "intrepid," because even though she is the sister of Thornton Wilder, one of the most impressive novelists in America, she had the courage to write novels herself.

Laetitia Macdonald, author of "Young and Fair," was introduced as herself also, and not, the chairman said, as the wife of another illustrious literary man, Wallace Irwin. Foster Damon was presented as a distinguished American poet (and he made a plea for more nationalism and less internationalism in writing), and George Middleton as a dramatist whose list of successes, from "Polly with a Past" onward, would make any would-be dramatist's eyes starry with envy.

Owen Johnson, who has never lived down his Lawrenceville stories (and never should), was a lost star among the cosmic blaze of the Fair, according to relays of telephone calls from his hostess, who was to deliver him and had missed him at the gate. Mrs. Fairbank suggested that after his wanderings he could probably follow his "Stover at Yale" with a thoroughly documented "Stover at the Fair."

And finally Mrs. Fairbank introduced Hervey Allen, author of "Anthony Adverse," thanking him for restoring to literature the triumphant soul of the individual in a period when literature has become dedicated to the group.

New Poem of Gertrude Stein Given Praise

Work Called Handbook for Writers.

Editor's Note—No book for years has caused so much comment among the cognoscenti as "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas," written "as simply as Defoe did the Autobiography of Robinson Crusoe," by Gertrude Stein, who has influenced many of the most brilliant young writers of the generation. She has chosen to experiment in new forms of writing rather than—as in the autobiography to exercise her genius in the conventional forms of writing—and here is a review of her latest and—to some—most baffling work. The understanding review is written by a former Chicagoan who enjoys the intellectual as well as personal friendship of Gertrude Stein.

BY ELLEN ALIX DU POY.

"Before the Flowers of Friendship Faded Friendship Faded," by Gertrude Stein. Plain Edition, 27 Rue de Fleurus, Paris.

SHORTLY after my return to Paris I lunched with Gertrude Stein. She casually mentioned that she had published a volume of poems since we last met. When I took leave of her she slipped a thinnish gray book printed on antique paper under my arm. I dived into the Metro and seated myself, I opened the book. I was charmed. I was so charmed that for once I was oblivious of the horrid, musty tunnel of the Metro and was very nearly carried beyond my station.

I was not only charmed; I was amazed. For in "Before the Flowers of Friendship Faded Friendship Faded," Gertrude Stein has done an amazing thing. She not only demonstrates that the formal ode and even rhyme has its place in modern poetic expression, but she has given us a volume of magnificent poetry as well. It is, therefore, two things. It is a valuable handbook for the poet who is interested in the basic principles underlying his art and it is a volume to be read with delight by the layman who delights in poetry for its own sake.

It could be seen very nicely
That doves have each a heart,
Each one is always seeing that they could not be apart.
A little lake makes fountains
And fountains have no flow.
And a dove has need of flying,
And water can be low,
Let me go.

She has used rhyme here to intensify the image she wishes to evoke and to hasten the tempo, which is also an integral part of the image she wishes to evoke.

Her poems are music but not merely music. Gertrude Stein scorns music as such. She does not work for musical effects. She makes them work for her. The music of her poems is an integral part of the picture, a definite beat of emotion.

This brings us to the vast difference there is between the evocative and the associational in poetic thinking. Gertrude Stein evokes. Not one of the words in these poems leads anywhere but straight to the root of things. One of these poems is like a canvas by Picasso. It evokes the essence of the thing painted and does it with intensity and exactitude. She does not employ words that open vistas. When she paints a rose it is the rose petal by petal that is evoked and one is not deluded into thinking and feeling little pink gobs of cloud at sunset.

In other words, Gertrude Stein does not send the reader off on tangents wavering under moonlight or cradle him in melody which is all sound and no sense.

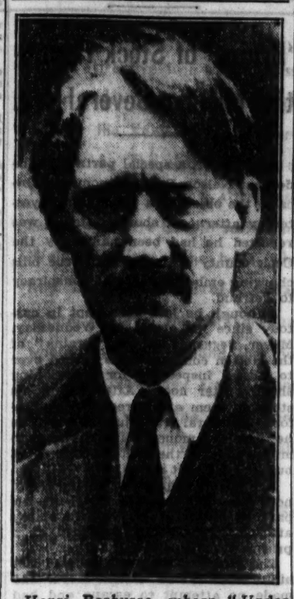
"Insect Behavior" Tells Why Bugs Never Bungle

"Insect Behavior," by Evelyn Cheesman [Robert Ballou], is NOT a depressing modern novel dealing with the w. k. human race, but a learned though not at all disspiriting record of how the bugs never bungle. The author says that there is no proof of the realization by insects of the ultimate aim of behavior, but that they are as far from being dumb as most of them are from being beautiful.

WAR FOR PEACE



Henri Barbusse, whose "Under Fire" was one of the first and the most powerful of the realistic books about the world war, is a distinguished visitor in Chicago today. He is on a lecture tour of the United States under the auspices of the United States Congress Against War, a branch of the international committee which consists of Romain Rolland, Theodore Dreiser, Albert Einstein, Maxim Gorky, Heinrich Mann, Bernard Shaw, Madame Sun Yat-Sen, and M. Barbusse.

Tibet Is Scene of Romance by James Hilton

Critic Sees Popularity for "Lost Horizon."

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—For some years those who take note of such things have observed the work of a young writer named James Hilton. Mr. Hilton is the author of four novels, of which "Contango" attracted more attention than the others, and he is now on the point of publishing a fifth, "Lost Horizon." The new book is a full-blooded modern romance of Tibet and the east in which airplanes play their part, but it is also full of interest as a psychological study.

Indeed, it is the work of a man who has much modern knowledge and who can still write tales of adventure with gusto. That gives it unusual quality. I shall be surprised if "Lost Horizon" does not attain considerable popularity and make a reputation.

A first novel the coming of which I mentioned some time ago is "Café People," by Harold A. Albert. This book takes one of those mammoth tea shops which are commoner in England than anywhere else in the world and dissects it from the orchestra to the kitchens, at the same time relating the love story of a pair of customers whose acquaintance ripens under the colossal mirrors of the Café Great.

The book is brisk and realistic. Its author has been wise enough to keep to a scene and section of life well known to him. The result is a readable and highly promising book. Mr. Albert has in the last few years made a journalistic reputation by means of hard work and quick observation. Two years ago he was advertised by the London Daily Mail as "the 21 year old author." Since then he has married, tackled two gigantic burglars who invaded his flat, and traveled all through Europe, going as far as Iraq to investigate the truth as to that strange country. And "Café People" is his first novel. It will not be his last or his best, but as an earnest of a lively future it is good enough to go on with.

Animals and insects are to the fore just now in London literary circles. Prof. Julian Huxley has been reassuring those who have feared that ants would conquer man (the notion was started by Maeterlinck), and has at the same time been criticizing the ant's moral character.

Patrick Kirwan has been translating into English Georg Rendl's rather rhapsodic "Way of the Bee," which the publishers think is better than Maeterlinck's "Life of the Bee."

Separate works on the cat, the goldfish, and the lyre-bird have all been lately published. And now the dogs are having their turn, for besides Mrs. Virginia Woolf's biographical study of Flush, the pet dog of Elizabeth Barrett Browning, there is a new book in which Miss Norah James has diverted her attention from tragic human beings to the life of "Jake the Dog."

Meanwhile Mr. Wells' "Shape of Things to Come" is the book everybody is reading in London. It at least deals with mankind.

DEATH PENALTY JURY CHOSEN FOR SCHECK AND PALS

Begin Hearing Bank Murder Testimony Monday.

A jury qualified for the death penalty was completed yesterday to try three gunmen for the murder of a Niles Center bank cashier in the Criminal court of Judge William V. Brothers. The last panel of jurors was accepted by state and defense after five days of questioning veniremen.

One of the defendants in the case is John Scheck, who has been sentenced to die in the electric chair for the murder of Policeman John G. Sevick in the courtroom of Judge Charles F. Molthrop. Scheck shot and killed the policeman while making a break for freedom with a smuggled gun.

Carl Grundhoefer, his companion in the attempted escape, and Frank Keglovitz [illegible] the co-defendants in the present case. The trio is alleged to have shot and killed Harry Mueller, the cashier, during a robbery of the First National bank of Niles Center last May.

Begin Hearing Evidence Monday.

Judge Brothers will hear preliminary defense motions this morning and the hearing of evidence will start Monday morning. Chief among the defense motions is one in behalf of Scheck and Grundhoefer to exclude testimony concerning the occurrence in Judge Molthrop's court. The state will oppose the motion, holding that the testimony is admissible as showing a consciousness of guilt on the part of Scheck and Grundhoefer.

Scheck, who has been handcuffed during his present courtroom appearances, yesterday approached the bench at the end of the hearing and asked if the judge "couldn't do something about these handcuffs."

"There's nothing I can do about it," Judge Brothers told him. "The sheriff is your guardian in this court." Deputy sheriffs said that Scheck would remain handcuffed throughout the trial.

Jewelry Thief Sentenced.

Lewis Grey, 45 years old, was sentenced to one to ten years by Judge Michael Feinberg yesterday for the theft of $4,000 in jewelry from Mrs. Frank Penfield, 5555 Sheridan road, widow of the former county commissioner and zoning expert.

Judge Feinberg denied a motion for a new trial and passed sentence immediately after the jury had convicted the defendant. Grey had taken the stand in his own defense and testified that Mrs. Penfield had given him the jewels.

"She fell for me the first time she saw me," Grey testified. "She pinned a rose on me and called me her big red rose."

Mrs. Penfield denied this and said that the jewels disappeared after a party in her apartment at which Grey had been a guest.

Sentence Six Others.

The sentence of Grey and six other criminals yesterday brought to 452 the number of criminals sent to prison since the opening of the war on crime. The others sentenced are:

WILLIAM CHOPLICK, sentenced to one year to life by Judge Benjamin Epstein for the robbery of Harold Beard of Oak Park on July 12.

EDWARD PIERRICCI, 22 years old, sentenced to one year to life by Judge Donald S. McKinlay for the $78 robbery of John Daniels, 2100 West 50th place, on Nov. 29, 1932.

JOHN SMITKA, 22 years old, sentenced to 20 years by Judge Harry B. Miller under the habitual criminal act for the theft of the automobile of John J. Burke.

WILLIAM JOHNSON, 32 years old, colored, sentenced to one to 20 years by Judge Philip L. Sullivan for the $32 robbery of Horries Griggs, colored, 2922 Cottage Grove avenue.

JOHN J. KEANE, 34 years old, sentenced to one year to life by Judge Philip L. Sullivan for the $11 robbery of Elizabeth Letz, 801 South Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, on June 19.

WILLIAM CAREY, 24 years old, sentenced to one to ten years in the penitentiary by Judge Thomas J. Lynch for theft of clothing from the Ray Stores, Inc., 3479 Archer avenue.

Ralph Perillo, 56 years old, father of nine children, was found guilty of manslaughter by a jury in the Criminal court of Judge Molthrop last night. Perillo shot and killed his wife during a quarrel in their home at 738 South Marshfield avenue on Jan. 12. A motion for a new trial was set for hearing Oct. 27. Perillo faces a penitentiary sentence of one to 14 years if the motion is overruled.

Mrs. Chas. Curry, Evanston, Wins Divorce in St. Louis

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 20.—(AP)—A divorce was granted in the Court of Domestic Relations today to Mrs. Margaret Warfield Curry from Charles Curry, former Evanston, Ill., lumber broker. Charging desertion, Mrs. Curry testified that while she was spending the Christmas holidays with relatives here in 1930 she received a letter from her husband requesting her to take up residence here and not return to her home in Evanston. They were married in 1915 and have two children, Florence, 17, and Warfield, 13.

Knocks Pistol Aside and Routs Robber with Fists

As Noah Ruff, an insurance salesman, neared his home at 1308 West 57th street last night, a gunman stepped up to him and demanded his money. Ruff knocked the man's pistol aside, and fought him. Two shots were fired during the fight and the robber fled, empty handed. A few minutes later Sergt. Michael Nevill of the Englewood station seized Leonard Thorne, 33 years old, 5822 South May street, in the rear of 5710 Throop street. He was armed. Ruff identified him as the robber.

Mrs. Loretta Johnson, 26 years old, of the North Park hotel, 1936 North Clark street, sat up on her wedding night and munched a box of crackers. The bridegroom, Franklin Johnson, left her in anger the next morning, she told Judge Joseph Sabath yesterday in the Superior court. He instructed her attorney, Harry R. Fertig, to draw up a divorce decree on grounds of desertion.

HIJACKING WAVE LAID TO LACK OF POLICE SYSTEM

Conference Told How Michigan Plan Works.

BY HAL FOUST.

Truck hijacking in the Chicago area was analyzed yesterday at the Midwest Police conference, in annual session this week at Northwestern university. The consensus was that the prevalence of these highway holdups is due mainly to lack of police coordination. Suggestions were offered to officials and to shippers for the protection of motor freight against robbery.

"The conference is not an administrative body," said Prof. A. R. Hatton, head of the university's department of political science, "but with this assembly of police talent we are able to offer constructive criticisms."

Capt. Lawrence Lyon, deputy superintendent of the Michigan state police, was the main critic. His words bore weight because highway holdups in this state have been reduced to a minimum. He said that since Jan. 1, three trucks have been hijacked in Michigan outside of Detroit and two or three within the city. He added that men are in the penitentiary or awaiting trial in every case.

Says Illinois Lacks Police System.

"In Illinois," said Capt. Lyon, "you have plenty of policemen and no police system. A truck hijacked in one community is reported to the authorities there. Neighboring communities, counties or municipalities, may hear about it, but they will take little active interest in solving the crime.

"In Michigan, we realized that the state force lacked manpower to patrol the entire state. So our department has concentrated upon a service as a clearing house and coördinating agency for the constabulary of the state. If a filling station is robbed in Kalamazoo, the Kalamazoo police telephone the state police broadcasting station at Lansing. The broadcast is received by state patrolmen, by sheriffs and by municipal police. The countryside, regardless of political boundaries, is on the alert to apprehend the robbers.

"The Illinois police are seriously handicapped for lack of radio service. The radio has been the greatest development in police work since fingerprinting. W-G-N must be thanked for demonstrating the value of broadcasting alarms a few years ago.

Sees Prevalence of Bribery.

"Another weakness in Chicagoland policing is the number of uniformed men with guns patrolling the highways without receiving any salaries. A hungry man is easily bribed. Bribes are not paid to policemen except to violate the law.

"The truck shippers, without waiting for coördination of the police, can help themselves in protecting their merchandise against hi-jackers. In Michigan the highway carriers of new automobiles started a 'check-in' system for keeping trace of moving freight. At certain all night roadside eating places the drivers report and record their arrivals and departures. If a truck is long overdue at its destination, it is easy to locate its approximate whereabouts by calling the report stations."

23 FINISH TRAFFIC COURSE

The first annual traffic school conducted jointly by Northwestern university and the Evanston police department ended yesterday when 23 policemen from various parts of the county received certificates signed by Prof. A. R. Hatton of the university, who supervised the school, and by Police Chief William O. Freeman of Evanston. The police students attended the morning classes, at which they were addressed by members of the Northwestern faculty and engineers who were in Chicago in connection with the recent convention of the National Safety council, and in the afternoon were given instruction in practical traffic control work by the Evanston police. The school opened Oct. 9.

FIVE INDICTED IN CRASH OF NELSON BROS.

'Brains' of Stock Promotion Missing Several Hrs.

Max Meyer, a special partner in the defunct Nelson Brothers company, became the object of a police search yesterday afternoon, shortly after it was reported he had been named by the Cook county grand jury in true bills charging embezzlement and conspiracy to defraud.

Although he had been kept in custody since his arrest on Wednesday, Meyer, regarded as the "brains" of the Nelson company, was turned over to postal inspectors for questioning shortly after noon. After telling his story to them and agreeing to go before the federal grand jury at any time he was summoned, Meyer was permitted to leave the United States court building without a guard.

The postal inspectors, having heard nothing of the reported true bills, apparently did not know that the state's attorney wished him returned as a prisoner.

The furore of the search abated last night when it was learned Meyer had made no attempt to escape and had surrendered anew to the state's attorney.

According to report, two other officials and two employés of the Nelson Brothers company were named in the true bills. It was alleged that through their operations 600 small investors were defrauded of $200,000. Meyer was the only one who had been kept in custody since.

An attorney had appeared before Judge Philip L. Sullivan to apply for a writ of habeas corpus in his behalf during the day, but Prosecutor James J. Cherry, who handles all the blue sky cases for the state's attorney, made a formal answer to the effect that the prisoner was in the hands of the federal authorities and the matter was laid over.

Investigate Mail Fraud.

The government was interested, it was reported, in learning whether the defunct firm had used the mails in reaching customers, or whether the facilities of radio station WIBO had been used in the alleged fraud. The station recently lost its license. The federal trade commission might wish to inaugurate a prosecution, it was pointed out, if broadcasting was involved.

The true bills are reported to name in addition to Meyer, Earl Nelson, president of Nelson Brothers, J. A. Kroll, office manager, Philip Simon and E. R. Hart, the latter two salesmen. Meyer, Nelson, and Kroll were charged with embezzlement and conspiracy to defraud. The two salesmen were reported charged only with conspiracy.

Hold Defendants in Jail.

Assistant State's Attorneys William J. Lynch and Eugene J. O'Connor, who appeared before the grand jury, said that all the prisoners would be held in jail until Monday morning. At that time, it was reported, the indictments will be returned in court and bonds set for the prisoners. The state will ask for $10,000 bonds for Meyer and Kroll and $5,000 for the others.

The assistant prosecutors said that H. E. Stark, bookkeeper for the Nelson Brothers company, who had been held after the raid on the offices at 134 North La Salle street last Tuesday, had turned state's evidence, and testified before the grand jury. His indictment was not sought.

Meanwhile hundreds of men and women appeared at the county building during the day to make complaints against the defunct investment house. All told the same stories that they had given the company money to purchase stocks and had never received their securities.

Four in Gang

Four bandits yesterday waylaid three employés of the Drake hotel when they were returning from a loop bank and robbed them of $3,500 belonging to the hotel.

The money was in the custody of Eric Ericksen, hotel cashier. With him were R. M. Oliver, a house detective, and Miss Florence Hawkins, a bookkeeper. They had taken a taxicab from the First National bank and were approaching the hotel when the bandit car forced the cab to the curb at Seneca street and Walton place.

"Give us the registered envelope," one of the bandits told Ericksen. The envelope containing the cash bore a registry number affixed at the bank, and the bandits had apparently learned of this.

Ericksen surrendered the money and Oliver lost his revolver. The bandits warned the cab driver not to follow them, and drove north, turning into Lake Shore drive just east of the hotel.

INDIANA GRAND JURORS ARE TOLD OF INSULL LOANS

Howard W. Duncan, confessed embezzler from the Northern Indiana Public Service company, spent yesterday before the Lake county grand jury at Crown Point, Ind., describing loans to holding companies by which he charges the company employing him was drained of assets.

Morse DellPlain, president of the public service company, stated when Duncan first made his charges that these loans, at one time during 1931, aggregated $6,700,000. They were all properly secured, DellPlain asserted, and up to Sept. 30 of this year all but $688,901 of them had been repaid.

Duncan pleaded guilty Tuesday to embezzlement of $1,500 from the company and told Judge William J. Murray at the same time that over a period of five years his defalcations totaled $132,000. He offered to give the grand jury evidence of alleged corporate mispractice by his employers which he had been gathering since he started his embezzlements, for the purpose of betting on horse races.

Judge Murray delayed pronouncing sentence on Duncan until Monday, and yesterday Joseph Conroy, attorney for Duncan, arranged with Prosecutor Robert G. Estill to obtain a stay of execution of the sentence until Nov. 7 that Duncan may remain available for the grand jury hearings. He is out on bond at present.

GIRL, 12, FACES KELLY SUSPECT IN U. S. COURT

Gives Testimony to the Grand Jury.

Geraldine Arnold, 12 years old, who brought about the capture of George [Machine Gun] Kelly, confronted Joseph Bergl, Cicero garage man, in the court of United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker yesterday. Bergl, along with Abe and Charles Caplan, owners of the Michigan Avenue tavern, Michigan avenue and Roosevelt road, appeared before Commissioner Walker, charged with obstructing justice by harboring Kelly during his stay in Chicago.

The Arnold girl, who came from Dallas, Tex., to testify against Bergl, was watching the hearing from a room off the courtroom proper when Defense Attorney William Parillo sighted her. Prosecutor Warren Canaday had just moved for a continuance to allow the government to bring more witnesses from Memphis.

"There's the girl witness now," Attorney Parillo said. "Bring her up here and let's see if she can identify these men."

Girl Looks at Defendants.

As a federal agent guarding the girl led her forward the attorney objected that the agent was pointing out the defendants to her. Geraldine stood for a few moments eyeing the three defendants.

"Here's Bergl," Attorney Parillo told her, turning the defendant's head toward her, "Did you ever see him before?" The agent warned Geraldine not to answer. The case then was continued to Oct. 27.

Before the hearing before the commissioner the Arnold girl had spent almost two hours before the federal grand jury which is considering the cases of Bergl and the Caplan brothers.

She is believed to have repeated the story told on the witness stand in a federal court in Oklahoma City, Okla., which aided in the conviction of Kelly and his wife, Kathryn, for the kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma oil millionaire. Kelly and his wife were sentenced to life imprisonment.

Rides with the Kellys.

The Arnold girl became involved in the case when she, her father and her mother, were picked up by the Kellys while hitchhiking in the middle west. Kelly and his wife decided that it would divert suspicion from them if they took Geraldine with them in the automobile as their daughter.

Answers given to government agents in previous questioning is believed to have made up the major portion of Geraldine's testimony before the grand jury yesterday. She recalled coming to Chicago on Sept. 17 with Kelly and his wife. They went to the Astor apartments, the address of which was withheld by the government, and paid a week's rent.

Most incriminating of the testimony is said to be her accurate memory of telephone conversations by Kelly and conversations between the kidnaper and his wife.

Tells of Visit to Bergl's.

Geraldine, who is said to have told agents that she had "a swell time" posing as Kelly's daughter, previously had told of coming to Chicago to go to Bergl's place. It has been charged that Bergl fitted out a car for Kelly and that the automobile was used in the mail robbery on Sept. 22 in which Policeman Miles Cunningham was shot to death.

The Kellys received no visitors in Chicago, the girl told agents, but went to several shows, using taxicabs for transportation. She said that on Sept. 22, the day of the mail robbery Kelly obtained a new car and that they left Chicago hurriedly. Geraldine and her mother, Mrs. Luther Arnold, will return to San Antonio, Tex., under guard of federal agents.

Highland Park Wife Sued by Husband for Desertion

Ralph Fletcher Seymour Jr., 225 Cary avenue, Highland Park, an employé of the Real Estate magazine, filed suit for divorce yesterday in the Circuit court at Waukegan against Mrs. Barbara Mettler Seymour. They were married in 1932 and he charges that she deserted him.

MELROSE PARK BANKER AGAIN FOUND GUILTY

Charles J. Wolf, former president of the Citizens' State bank of Melrose Park, was found guilty of embezzlement of $38,000 by a jury in Judge Walter P. Steffen's court yesterday.

Motion for a new trial was set for hearing on Nov. 3. Wolf had been sentenced to serve one to ten years at a previous trial for embezzling the money from the bank. The case was reversed in the State Supreme court on the grounds that the money was not the property of the bank, but belonged to the Veterans' park district, of which Wolf was treasurer.

Wolf was reindicted and tried for embezzling the money from the park district. The state charged that the defendant had juggled the funds of the district to his own advantage.

Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier, who is reputed to be close to the Roosevelt administration and who was one of President Wilson's advisers, passed through Chicago yesterday afternoon en route from Cheyenne, Wyo., to New York on United Air Lines. He refused to talk on political or economic questions during his half hour stay at Chicago airport, but did say that he is enthusiastic about air travel. He left Cheyenne yesterday morning and was in New York by 9 p. m.

HUNT MAIL THEFT CLEWS TODAY IN CLUBMAN'S SAFE

Mrs. Lebensberger Gives Up Executrix Claim.

Mrs. Luella Lebensberger renounced her rights yesterday as executrix of the will of her deceased husband, Edgar Lebensberger. She did so to enable the public administrator to take full charge of the gambling club at 225 East Superior street, owned jointly by Lebensberger and the slain Gus Winkler, and to facilitate the investigation of the two deaths which complicated the work of federal agents on two mail robbery cases.

Mrs. Lebensberger's action gave the needed authority to Jack Rubens, chief investigator for Public Administrator Halbert O. Crews, to open a wall safe found in the 225 club, where Lebensberger greeted the patrons as boss, but divided the profits with Winkler, known as a public enemy and gang chief. It is expected that Rubens will open the wall safe today.

Saw Winkler at 225 Club.

Winkler's friendship with Lebensberger was disclosed last night by Charles Cole, 4512 North Ashland avenue, head waiter at the 225 club. He said he saw Winkler in the club three times and that on one of those occasions he saw him talking with Lebensberger. Cole said he knew Winkler as Mr. Michaelson.

Sergt. Al Schuetz examined Winkler's expensive car last night in the garage at 3260 Lake Shore drive. He found that the body was made of steel and the windows were bullet proof. The license on the car was issued to a Sotirious Petriois, 6838 Windsor avenue, Berwyn. No such man lives there.

So far the coroner, state's attorney, police, and federal agents have been balked in their search for records that might have been left by either Lebensberger or Winkler pertaining to the disposal of $250,000 of bonds taken in a mail robbery of Dec. 6, 1932.

Rubens found the wall safe in the club Thursday night, behind a picture, but because of Mrs. Lebensberger's being named executrix in the will of her husband, whose death was called suicide, he did not open it. After the widow and two sisters of the supposed suicide appeared before Probate Judge John F. O'Connell, the public administrator was empowered to take complete charge of any assets that might be found.

The gambling paraphernalia had been removed prior to Lebensberger's death. An account kept by the club contained $6,000, but a check was cashed after Lebensberger's death for $4,000, and Rubens is seeking the return of that money.

Bank Cashier Called to Testify.

Myron D. Goldberg, cashier of the National Builders' bank, where the account was kept, was cited to appear before Probate Judge O'Connell Monday to answer questions about the 225 club's account.

Meanwhile, the coroner's jury investigating the killing of Winkler prepared yesterday for resumption of its inquest on Monday. Only a few days ago the jurors visited the spot in front of County Commissioner Charles H. Weber's beer distributing station where Winkler was shot down. Now the jury wants all the records in the case produced Monday, and also wants a number of policemen called as witnesses. Among those asked to appear are Capt. Charles McGurn of the Chicago avenue station, Capt. James Fleming of the Town Hall district, Deputy Chief of Detectives William V. Blaul, Lieut. Otto Erlanson, and Squad Leaders William Penney, Edward Galvan, and Alfred Schuetz.

Unsuccessful efforts to secure release on bail were made yesterday by Joseph Sans, credit manager of the 225 club, and John J. [Boss] McLaughlin, indicted with Lebensberger for possession of bonds stolen in the December mail robbery.

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Stolen, 83; recovered, 59; stripped, 3 [from police records for twenty-four hours ending at midnight Thursday].

2 ARE EXECUTED IN OKLAHOMA, ONE AS A RAPIST

McAlester, Okla., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Ted Patton, the 25 year old slayer for whom more than 2,000 persons sought executive clemency, paid the extreme penalty with a Negro rapist at state's prison shortly after midnight.

Patton, who killed his 19 year old boyhood chum, Robert Wall, died in the electric chair five minutes after the shouting Negro, Charles Dumas, has been pronounced dead.

The youth claimed he killed Wall in self-defense in a fight after Wall had made improper advances toward a girl. But the state said young Wall was shot to death for his car and money.

Bachelors and Benedicts to Dance Nov. 29

Prepare Invitation List for Annual Ball.

BY JUDITH CASS.

NO ONE really has doubted that the Bachelors and Benedicts would have their annual ball this winter, but just the same it is nice to have definite information from this year's chairman, Dexter Cummings, that the party will be given on Wednesday, Nov. 29, in the gold ballroom of the Congress hotel. It was decided at a meeting of the "Bs and Bs" yesterday, and this means that about 500 of the young marrieds and unmarrieds (only a few debutantes, however) will be assured of a gay Thanksgiving eve.

Receiving will be the wives of the Benedicts, who are Mr. Cummings, W. Paul McBride, Luther Hammond Jr., W. Irving Osborne Jr., Robert S. Pirie, Ralph Isham, John McLaren Simpson, and Frederic McLaughlin II. Last year Mrs. Isham and Mrs. Simpson were at the ball, but as unmarried girls, for then they still were Miss Eleanor Dennehy and Miss Constance Hasler, respectively.

The bachelors in the organization are Joseph C. Belden Jr., Malcolm W. Stevenson, Gardner Brown, Donald R. McLennan Jr., A. Watson Armour III., Dustin Grannis, James O. Heyworth Jr., and Gaylord Donnelley. The last three were elected to take the place of the retiring members, Wesley M. Dixon, William B. McIlvaine Jr., and Edison Dick.

The Bachelors and Benedicts' ball always is one of the most important social events of each season—it was omitted one or two years because of conditions, but last year it was resumed—ranking with the Assemblies, although it is given by younger men and the whole atmosphere is younger and less formal than that of the two Assemblies. Only a few debutantes are picked to be included in the invitation list, which numbers usually about 500, and those who are invited feel they definitely have been "recognized."

Louise Dewey Engaged to Edward Byron Smith.

The element of surprise will be lacking at the dinner party Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey are giving tonight at their State parkway residence, for news of the engagement they were going to announce tonight leaked out and was published yesterday, but it will be a joyous occasion just the same, with toasts drunk with enthusiasm and affection to the young couple who are engaged to be married, Louise Dewey and Edward Byron Smith.

Miss Dewey, the younger of the Deweys' two attractive daughters, was presented to society last fall at a delightful "at home" and immediately took her place as one of the most charming and popular of that season's debutantes. She and her new sister-in-law, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey Jr., who was Marjorie Goodman until her marriage on the 5th of this month, always were together, and when Marjorie and "Bud" were married their friends wondered how long it would be before Louise would follow in their footsteps. The bride and bridegroom won't be here to offer their good wishes and congratulations in person, for they still are honeymooning in France and won't be back until Nov. 7 or 8.

Frederick Algers to Attend Dinner.

Miss Dewey's sister, Mrs. Frederick M. Alger Jr., and her husband will be here for the dinner, however, for they are arriving this morning from their home in Detroit to be here for the week-end. The fourth Dewey "child" is Peter, who is away at St. Mark's school, so his good wishes to his sister and her future husband will have to be sent by mail or telegram from Concord, N. H.

Miss Dewey went to Farmington the year before she made her debut and before that she went to school in Paris. She has spent much time abroad ever since she was a small child and lived for several years in Warsaw, when her father was financial adviser to the republic of Poland.

Mr. Smith is also one of four children, two sons and two daughters. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Solomon A. Smith and his brother is Solomon Byron Smith, who is married to the former Barbara Neff, and his sisters are Mrs. M. Scott Bromwell [Marie Smith] and Mrs. George S. Chappell Jr. [Carolyn Smith]. Mr. Smith went to the Hill school and was graduated from Yale in 1932 There are no plans for the wedding, although Mrs. Dewey talked yesterday as if she wouldn't be surprised if it were a winter event of this year.

Tell Engagement of Kathryn Collins.

Another interesting engagement announcement is that of Miss Kathryn Collins to Robert J. Graf Jr., which was announced at a small cocktail party given last night by Miss Collins' parents, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Collins of State parkway. Miss Collins went to the Chicago Latin School for Girls and then to Smith college. This winter she is attending classes at the University of Chicago.

Mr. Graf, who is the only son of the Robert J. Grafs of Woodlawn avenue, is a graduate of the University of Chicago, where he now is working for his master of arts degree. He "prepped" at the Asheville school. Miss Collins has an older sister, Virginia, who was married to Paul McNulty last year, and a brother, "Bud," who is a popular young bachelor. Mr. Graf has one sister, Barbara, who was a debutante two years ago.

A delightful informal dinner tonight will be that which the Robert Hixons are giving in their Lake Forest house for their debutante daughter, Miss Peggy Hixon. About twenty of the debutante crowd have

Twins Aid Kenwood Social Service Club Benefit

These attractive twin sisters, Miss Helen Dodd (left) and Miss Lois Dodd (below), are assisting the committee in charge of the theater benefit the Kenwood Social Service club is to have the evening of Nov. 6. The club has taken over the Grand Opera house, with "Bittersweet" as the attraction for that night, and the money raised will go to benefit several neighborhood stations of the Infant Welfare society. The twins, who are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis H. Dodd of Constance avenue, are noted for their natural beauty. They are graduates of the University of Chicago, where they were among the most popular young women on the campus. Now they are devoting several hours each day to the thrift shop which the Social Service club operates for its benefit at 1461 East 55th street. The shop mascot is Bonzo, Miss Helen's brand new wire haired terrier.

Good Morning!

It is with a feeling of pleasant expectation that most of us go to see a new Richard Dix picture. Because most of us admire this player for the sincerity he injects into his rôles, and, of course, other reasons. Hopefully then, we went deponent, to witness the photoplay at the Palace.

"Ace of Aces" is not a poor picture, but it has little to offer in the way of originality, being just another pretty depressing war film featuring air fights and the personal experiences of the flyers.

The central figure is Rex Thorne, an idealistic sculptor who goes to war, though he doesn't believe in war, because of the importunities of his fiancée, Nancy Adams. She flings the horrid word "Yellow!" at him after he has finished telling her that the men who go to battle remind him of lemmings.

"What is a lemming?" she asks. A lemming, he tells her, is a sort of prolific rodent found in the mountains of Norway. Every so often the lemmings congregate, march to the sea and swim until they drown—the supposition being that they are continually in search of some island that doesn't exist.

She flaunts out. When next we see Mr. Thorne he is a flyer at the front. At first the thought of killing his fellow man grips him with cold fingers of horror—but soon the paralyzing clutch relaxes, then is no more. With the forcing down of his first enemy plane Thorne acquires a lust for blood—a joy in killing. The idealist becomes the "ace of aces"—a slaughterer who sits in the sun and swoops. This method of attack is his own. He has figured that, sitting in the sun, he cannot be seen by Boches looking up. And judging from his success the sun never goes down. The men of his squadron feel that he's not sporting and dislike him heartily, but this hard, ruthless new Thorne cares nothing for their opinion—and is decorated time and again for his exploits.

And now he meets Nancy in Paris, where she's engaged in war work. A heartsick, disillusioned Nancy; a Nancy sick of the whole ghastly mess. But the man she talks to now is not the man she influenced back home. Thorne has tasted blood and his heart is in his killing.

The death of a German boy, whom he has brought down, accounts for a changed attitude which brings forth results that the picture shall show you.

Mr. Dix, his customary sincere, virile self, does well what he has to do, but he has a rôle that doesn't win him much sympathy. Elizabeth Allan is pretty and capable as Nancy, and subsidiary parts are intelligently portrayed.

Excellent camera work makes the air shots and panoramic effects exciting.

John Monk Saunders wrote the story.

See you tomorrow!

String Quartet Plays Second Concert Here

Pro Arte String quartet of Brussels in second concert at Orchestra hall Friday, Oct. 20. The program:
Quartet, D major.....Franck
Quartet .....John Alden Carpenter
Quartet, G minor, Opus 10.....Debussy

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Here was a program about as well balanced as any you will hear in the course of several seasons, put together with the skill that admits and admires climax, and played with the utmost charm of tone and feeling.

The three compositions belong plainly to the same genus, yet in last night's performance had marked and progressive individuality. The Franck work, lovely as it may be, gives a distinct impression of austerity. Mr. Carpenter's single work is considerably freer in matter and manner, with a freedom that goes deeper than the mere fact of a work written without break between movements, but going into the essence of the themes and their treatment. Then came the Debussy, possibly the most colorful of all, and certainly little restrained by shackles of conventional form.

This brilliant organization, Alphonse Onnou, Laurent Halleux, Germain Prévost, and Robert Maas, are doing a notable deed for the cause of chamber music here. Presenting, as they do, three concerts containing the high spots of string quartet composition in Europe and America during the last century, playing it all with the high ability and imaginative insight that they have been displaying, they are not only doing something of artistic importance, but, perhaps more valuable, they are going a long way toward making chamber music popular.

Frederick Stock was indisposed yesterday afternoon and advised by his physician to stay under cover in his own home. Wherefore Eric DeLamarter, associate conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, stepped to the fore and, without rehearsal or the chance of one, conducted the same complex program that Mr. Stock had presented the night before.

What is more, he made a brilliant achievement of the task, both technically and artistically, and with no need of apology for lack of preparation. The audience was his at the end of the Saint-Saëns Symphony, and the suite from Stravinsky's ballet, "Petrouchka," was distinctive, flexible, and full of color and fire. He will take the stand again, tonight when the orchestra plays its popular program.

Player Sought by Hampden to Stay in Films

Evelyn Venable, 18, Has No Kiss Contract.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—A telegram from Walter Hampden, Shakespearean acto-producer, in New York, asking Evelyn Venable to join him for stage runs in "Othello" and "Richelieu," failed to take Miss Venable away from the movies, in spite of her desire to joint Hampden.

The negotiations bring to light how one motion picture kiss almost cost Hollywood the talent of this 18 year old leading woman, regarded as one of the year's finds.

Miss Venable, who is the daughter of Prof. Emerson Venable, classicist of the University of Cincinnati, was coached in the ancient and Shakespearean classics since her early childhood by her father. When she was 16, Hampden gave her an audience, the girl reading the Juliet balcony scene, and as a result of that incident she toured with Hampden as flower girl in "Cyrano" and later, when just turning 17, as Hampden's lead in "Hamlet."

Then the Paramount studio brought her to Hollywood, after several hitches due to Prof. Venable's insistence his daughter take part in no kissing or love making scenes with men.

The father was here when Evelyn, cast in "Cradle Song," as a convent bred girl who finally sees and likes a boy [Kent Taylor] is supposed to kiss the boy. Prof. Venable didn't like that at all. For a time it looked as if Miss Venable's career would end there permanently.

But tactful studio officials soothed him, and finally induced the father's approval to a new seven year successive-option contract, and the signatures on the latter explain why Evelyn is not going east to rejoin Hampden.

It's the first time a studio has signed a contract to keep any parent's daughter chaperoned and unkissed, but it's in this contract, and it's binding. Miss Venable, by the way, says her real love is the stage, and she wants to play in pictures only long enough to accumulate sufficient money to finance her own stage repertoire company.

One reason for the confusion that marked the start, halt and resumption of Anna Sten's work in "Nana" happened yesterday. Ray Jones, still photographer assigned to the troupe, stepped on an electric connection which became short circuited and threw Jones into the air with a flash and a bang. Jones was more astonished than hurt, but Miss Sten fainted.

The deal which producer Sam Goldwyn's friend and brother producer, Joe Schenck, has made to take services of Ronald Colman off Goldwyn's hands nets Goldwyn no money at all, directly, but since Schenck's Twentieth Cestury releases its pictures through United Artists, and since Goldwyn is part owner in the United Artists releasing corporation, you can see for yourself where shrewd Sam still cashes in on all of Colman's films which turn out hits. And none of Colman's films have failed to make money in the past.

According to Bill Hawks, Colman's business manager here, Colman's $2,000,000 libel suit against the Colman Exhibiting corporation will be forgotten as soon as the new Twentieth Century deal is made official and Goldwyn's contract with Colman is definitely surrendered. Colman's deal with Schenck, according to Hawks, is for two starring pictures.

W. C. Fields is playing without his three comedy props, high hat, cane and cigar, for the first time in more than 30 years of comedy work. It's because he's "Humpty Dumpty" in "Alice in Wonderland."

Columbia studio has signed six stars in the last two weeks: Elissa Landi, Grace Moore [long term contract], Joe Schildkraut, Gene Raymond [three pictures], Walter Connolly and Harriette Lake from the New York stage. Besides that contracts of Fay Wray, Col. Tim McCoy and Richard Cromwell were renewed. It's the biggest season this largest of independent studios has ever planned.

THERE are many stories about Mrs. Pat Campbell, veteran of the stage, and the latest is brought back from New York by a friend, Mrs. Leslie Carter, whose flaming hair has been familiar to theater audiences for half a century, was calling on Katharine Cornell, wearing a purple toque, an absinthe green gown, a striped scarf, in the true Mrs. Leslie Carter fashion. Mrs. Pat Campbell dropped in.

"Mrs. Carter, Mrs. Campbell," murmured Guthrie McClintock, Miss Cornell's husband and manager.

"Fancy that, I thought she was dead," murmured Mrs. Campbell, nodding toward her contemporary.

IT was with some interest that we met Mrs. Hervey Allen, having had a conviction that the wife of the author of a book that took four years to write would of necessity have a patient and listless look. Instead we found her blithe and young and blonde, with a nice wide smile and a charming manner. Most of "Anthony Adverse" was written in Bermuda, she said, and there she added typing to her accomplishments. The success of her husband's latest book is pretty exciting, she admits, having had for her own secret conviction that it might be acclaimed after their bones were drying to dust. Their new home in Maryland, on Chesapeake bay, is competing in interest with plans for the movie, purchase of the screen rights having been so recent that little definite as to production has been decided except that the title, "Anthony Adverse," will be retained.

* *

MR. ALLEN himself, in a charming talk after luncheon with Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank's writers' committee at the Trustees' Lounge at the Fair yesterday, gave an explanation—as if one were necessary—as to one of the reasons the book has been so widely read despite its length. Never has there been so large a literate class with so much leisure as now, he said. He followed with other statements exploding the theory that we all are so pressed for time that writing in what he calls "Western Unionese" is all anybody has time to read.

"Why not tomorrow afternoon?" asked his companion. "I've looked over the program and haven't seen a thing on the program worth a tinker's dam."

"That's true, and I certainly would like to play," Mr. Loomis answered, "but, as I am the only speaker scheduled on the afternoon program, I don't really feel I can leave the convention in the lurch."

As he made change he addressed them apologetically.

"I was a little slow this morning," he explained. "Otherwise I'd a got you here sooner. I got a cold and haven't got my usual pep."

THIRD AND LAST

By NORVAL RICHARDSON

SYNOPSIS.

Sheila, known as "Bun" O'Reilly, an American, makes a comfortable living abroad by helping fellow countrymen out of difficulties. Fred Crawford, who works on a Paris newspaper, is her friend and counselor. Bun is appealed to by James B. Finlay, an elderly, wealthy American, to help find his young wife, Helene. He wants no publicity. He had met Helene after the war in Bucharest. He had installed her family, the Bobianoffs, in a villa on the Riviera at Grasse. Her brother, Ferenz, he had brought to America. No trace can be found of Helene and her parents since the last time she returned to visit them. Bun's suspicions are aroused by Finlay's niece, Mrs. Craymer, and her ominous appearing butler. She sympathizes with Finlay and accepts the job and 200,000 francs advance payment. A recent newspaper picture, showing Helene standing with a tall woman in a group at Biarritz, is the only clew Bun has to go on. That night Finlay is murdered. Bun's apartment is broken into by a masked man and woman, her maid, Liberté, bound, and the money Finlay had given her stolen. Bun meets Finlay's son, Robert. His unlikeness to his father and his desire for secrecy puzzles Bun. She feels under obligation to continue the search. In Biarritz the photographer, who took the group picture, identifies the tall woman as the Countess de Vernadon, who has a villa at Grasse. Robert Finlay arrives at the hotel with a woman and registers as Count Morales and wife. Bun motors to Cannes. There she discovers that the Robert Finlay she had met was an impostor. The real Robert Finlay is at Cannes. Bun is attracted to him, but believes he is in love with Helene. He urges her to continue the quest with him.

INSTALLMENT XVIII.

DEFYING DANGER.

Bun ran to the diving board and sprang in. For several minutes she lost sight of Finlay as she pushed far out from the shore. When she turned on her back and floated, she found him close beside her.

"You swim like a man," he commended.

"Coming from a man, I suppose it's meant for a compliment." They had been in the water half an hour when she swam towards the beach. Finlay broke the silence.

"Is it pressing matters to ask if you have decided to help me?"

Bun demurred. It was tremendously pleasant to keep him on tenterhooks. "If I thought I could help you I wouldn't hesitate a moment. But I'm sure I can't. I might even be in the way. I'm pretty sure your impersonator followed me to Biarritz. It's more than likely he's right here now—perhaps watching us from the casino terrace. If I returned to Paris and left you to act alone, it might throw him off the track. He'd probably follow me to see what I was up it. In the meantime you'd be putting something over on your own."

"At home that might not be so impossible. Over here it is. If you forsake me, I'll feel like an abandoned child."

Bun propped her chin in her hand and looked at him slowly. "I can't imagine you feeling or acting like an abandoned child."

"This is not my stamping ground."

"If you buy me a cigaret—there's the boy coming now—I'll try to reach a decision."

He called the vendor of cigarets, bought a package of the American ones Bun chose, and lighted one for her. Then he lay down again and waited for her answer. Receiving none, he went on: "You've made a good start.

"Then—you're no longer carrying out my uncle's request?"

You've found out about the woman in the photograph. Let's look her up—and the villa of Helene's family in Grass. It's near here, isn't it?

Bun waved her hand towards the vague mountains that rose beyond the coast line.

"It might be a good idea to make an exploring expedition after dinner this evening."

"You mean to go to her villa?"

"At least drive by it and see what it looks like. And make some inquiries in Grasse about the Bobianoff family. I have letters to some sort of an agency there."

Bun murmured a low "All right."

"That means you will remain on the job?"

She looked away pensively. "I suppose it does."

That evening they dined together in the hotel. There was a delightful quiet and calm in their surroundings. Bun found with a glow of satisfaction that Finlay knew how to order a good dinner. She never would have trusted Fred with such a task. Poor old Fred! Why was it he was so determined to love her. It was such a hopeless case. And yet——

A woman in a black evening dress was being shown to a table by the maitre d'hotel.

"When did you say you had seen Mrs. Craymer last?" Bun asked, when the woman had given her order and the waiter had left the room.

"Not for several years. Four, to be exact. Why do you ask?"

"She has just come into this room."

"Cousin Thelma! How extraordinary!"

"She is bowing to me now. Shall we go over and speak to her?"

Finlay rose at once. "If you don't mind I think I'll ask her to join us at dinner."

"Do—by all means. But don't tell her anything about our plan to look up the Countess Vernadon. I'll explain later."

"You, Bob! How incredible! And with Miss O'Reilly!" She extended her hand to Bun after having grasped Finlay's warmly. "But what is the explanation?" She looked from one to the other with what Bun decided was the best bit of acting she had seen for a long time.

For a moment, as they sat down, there was a brief awkwardness, then Mrs. Craymer launched forth. "My dear Bob!" Her hand reached for his. "It is all so horrible. You can't imagine how glad I am that you came. Miss O'Reilly phoned me you had arrived. I waited to hear from you. As I didn't—I decided you didn't want to see me, so I hurriedly jumped up and left Paris. My lawyer advised me to leave. He said the moment the newspapers found out that I was Uncle Jim's niece, they'd give me no peace. I only arrived this afternoon."

"How could you have known I was in Paris?"

Bun smiled easily. "You forget the other one I met."

He turned back to Mrs. Craymer. "I telephoned you the moment I reached Paris. I was told you had left there."

"Impossible! I only left there yesterday—not on the Train Bleu—that is too expensive. On a later one."

"It was yesterday I telephoned you."

"But you reached Paris two days before. Didn't he, Miss O'Reilly?" Bun watched her closely and incidentally cursed herself for ever thinking this woman was stupid. Her method of carrying off surprise and bewilderment was worthy of the best histrionic traditions. "There is something I don't understand," she went on, looking from one to the other. Then a quick flash of fear sprang to life in her eyes. "Has something else happened that I don't know about?"

Finlay immediately explained that the man Bun had first met was not himself, only some one playing the part. Mrs. Craymer listened with increasing anxiety.

"You mean some one actually had the audacity to pretend he was you! But this is terrifying! Aren't you desperately alarmed?"

Finlay answered dryly: "Desperately—no. What worse could happen than already has!"

"For yourself, I mean."

"I fear nothing for myself—except a possible failure in avenging my father."

"Then you are going to follow the matter up? I was told in Paris that you had made a statement to the authorities that you wanted to drop the case."

"That was the statement made by my impersonator. I think the authorities now realize they were on the wrong track."

Mrs. Craymer breathed a deep sigh of anxiety. "It all sounds so sinister. Of course we are all going to be involved—I myself, too. I left Paris because I was actually frightened out of my wits. What could any one gain by pretending to be you?"

"The most important thing was probably to find out if some one he didn't know about was following up the case. In this he succeeded."

"You mean Miss O'Reilly?"

Finlay nodded.

"For which Mr. Finlay immediately fired me," Bun added quickly.

Mrs. Craymer gave her a quick glance. "Then—you're no longer carrying out my uncle's request?"

Bun hurried on when she saw the exclamation of protest ready on Finlay's lips. "I came here, very much as you did, to get away from any further implications."

"Then you're remaining some time? I'm so glad."

"I shall return to Paris—perhaps tomorrow."

The third Chicago Tribune School of Cookery will be held the second, third, and fourth weeks in November. Mrs. Ida M. Chitwood, famous home economics expert, in co-operation with Miss Mary Meade, Tribune Cooking Editor, will conduct the sessions. The schedule is as follows:

South Side—Trianon ballroom, Nov. 7, 8, 9, and 10.

West side—Guyon's Paradise ballroom, Nov. 14, 15, 16, and 17.

North side—Aragon ballroom, Nov. 21, 22, 23, and 24.

All schools will open at 12:30 o'clock.

BY MARY MEADE.

Questions and answers have come rolling in this week. If your question isn't answered in the column, don't despair. The mail will bring the recipes or information you request if you've been sure to inclose a stamped addressed envelope.

First for today, Mrs. J. G. L. writes that her husband is fond of pimientos and she would like to have directions for canning them.

CANNED PIMIENTOS.

Wash the pimientos and place in a pan with no water. Place in a moderately hot oven for 8 or 10 minutes, or until the skins blister and crack, watching them so that no discoloration will take place. Remove from the oven and slip off the skins. Then remove the seed pod carefully so that the flesh of the pimiento is not broken. Flatten the pimientos and pack dry in hot, sterile jars. Partly seal and process in a hot water bath for 45 minutes, or for 15 minutes in a pressure cooker at 10 pounds pressure. Remove from the canner and seal immediately.

Miss S. E. requests a recipe for filled cookies such as her mother used to make. Hope these will fill the bill:

FILLED COOKIES.

1 cup sugar.
1-3 cup butter.
1 egg beaten.
½ teaspoon soda.
½ teaspoon salt.
2 cups flour.
2 cups oatmeal.
1 teaspoon baking powder.
½ cup sour cream.

Cream the sugar and butter until light. Beat in the egg. Sift the flour with the soda, salt and baking powder and add the oatmeal. Add the dry ingredients alternately with the sour cream to the butter mixture. Roll thin on a floured board and cut out with a round cookie cutter. Place a teaspoon of filling on a cookie, lay another cookie on top and press the edges firmly together. Bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] until golden brown.

FILLING.

1¼ cups raisins.
½ cup sugar.
1 teaspoon flour.
½ cup water.
½ cup chopped nut meats.

Combine the flour and sugar, add the water and raisins, and cook until thick. Cool and add the nut meats.

Mrs. L. O. writes, "I canned a nice batch of tomatoes last night and sealed them well as far as I can see. But I forgot to add salt to the jars. I'm worrying as to whether or not they'll keep."

Don't worry, Mrs. O. Although salt has some preservative action such a small amount is used in canning tomatoes that it will make no difference. If you boiled the tomatoes for 20 minutes and packed them into hot, sterile jars, there should be no danger of their spoiling.

Mrs. M. M. writes in for a recipe for 24 hour salad.

Smart Woman Is Again Sentenced to Wear Stripes

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Paris is sentenced to another winter of wearing stripes. Stripes are as smart, and as beloved, on wool as they were last summer on silk and organdie. Louise Boulanger makes sports and practical daytime dresses of striped wool and gives them a suggestion of the Chinese around the neckline. They are being worn by very fashionable women under swagger coats of fur or cloth.

The dress in our sketch is made of a wool canvas diagonally striped in brown, salad green and pale beige, a stunning color combination. It has the neckline of a mandarin coat, somewhat modified, and closes on two green leather buttons shaped like flowers. The shoulders are rounded in obedience to the dictates of Paris styles, and below the top the bishop sleeves are gathered on. The dress is a two-piece and the tunic blouse is a bit more than hiplength. The belt is made of brown yarn made into a heavy braid and twined around the waist.

The straight skirt has four gores and the stripes are worked to make chevrons at the front and back. Parisiennes wear the skirt of two-piece striped frocks like this with pullover sweaters for active sports.

Use Contrast of Leather in New Footgear

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Black suede, brown suede, and dark gray suede. No matter what color you elect to use as foot contrast, you'll find most of them combined with some other leather! Get togethers among the leathers are going strong.

For instance, nothing could be more intriguing than soft black suede combined with dull black leather, or the same black material outlined most discreetly with silver . . . or the same idea worked in ginger brown suede and coppery gold. These flattering and feminine pumps and tie oxfords make the most interesting footwear for afternoon and teatime clothes.

If you have a yen for bows, you'll find some good looking suede pumps with either suede or leather bows . . . and the shoppers who have been screaming for short vamps can now subside, for grand assortments of these short, impudent ideas are now available. And the heels are also short in altitude which makes them ideal walking and shopping shoes.

Simple tailored pumps are decorated with clever overlays of narrow perforated strips of kidskin, usually in some distinctive design like curling leaves. The dizzy diagonals and tricky triangles of last season's boots have vanished. Alligator patches appear on other suedes, over the toe tops and hugging the back of the heels, and these wear indefinitely without scuffing or peeling.

New evening scandals have gone entirely metallic. Some thoughtful soul has combined silver and gold leather in order that shrewd shoppers can wear them with practically any colored evening gown.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Plea for Furniture.

"Dear Miss Brown: One of our clients is in a most difficult situation. This family, consisting of a man, his wife, and 4 year old daughter, was homeless. Our organization was able to provide a flat for them and we had hoped to secure a few pieces to furnish it. However, we have been unable to obtain the furniture, and they are now without even a chair. We would greatly appreciate your help in securing a bed, a table, blankets—in fact, any sort of household furnishings. M. M."

This urgent request comes from one of the organized charities. Have you anything you are able to place at the disposal of this needy family?

been invited to dine and play bridge or dance afterwards.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas H. Strawn are entertaining at dinner at the Casino Monday evening for their attractive bachelor friend, Nicholas Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt is due from New York on Monday morning. Mr. Roosevelt served as vice governor of the Philippine islands and has been United States minister to Hungary since 1930. His home is at Hewlett, Long Island.

At 11 o'clock this morning the Drake ballroom will be thronged with fashionables come to hear William Lyon Phelps speak at the first lecture of the Town Hall series. The women's board of the Vocational Society for Shut-Ins is tremendously interested in the success of the lectures this winter because they are receiving a percentage of the ticket sales for the shut-ins.

Mrs. Herbert Bradley (Mary Hastings Bradley) will introduce the speaker, who will talk on "Contemporary Books Worth Reading." The name of Mrs. Eugene Cary Jr. has been added to the list of young women who will usher this morning. The others are the Misses Betty Alexander, Virginia Ashcraft, Mary Cook, Kean Hughes, Jean Hyman, Ruth Seanor, Margaret Wiley, Honoré White, and Barbara Eldridge.

Mrs. Dewes Burgweger, president of the Shut-Ins, and Mrs. Edward R. Litsinger are giving a luncheon for Mr. Phelps at the Drake following the lecture. Other luncheon hostesses will be Mrs. Laird Bell, Mrs. Dexter Fairbank, and Mrs. Walter S. Ross.

World's Fair Horse Show Opens Tonight.

The Stars and Stripes, Russian jewels, and the newest winter fashions will combine this evening to produce a brilliant spectacle at the opening of the World's Fair Horse show in the 124th Field Artillery armory in Washington park. Most of the members of our local sporting world, as well as many from Long Island and the west coast, will be there to review the grand parade and watch the first evening's events.

More than 150 boxes have been built on the arena floor outside the show ring to supplement all of the reserved places in the balconies. For the strings of horses that have been brought from all parts of the country for competition 400 additional stalls have been provided.

The official party of 200, which is to include Gov. Horner, Gen. Frank Parker, and Porter Fox, who is the president of the Horse Show association, will occupy the large box at the north end of the armory. In the other boxes will be, among others, the John Andrews Kings, the Howard Linns, Hill Blackett, the Daniel P. Ordways, the junior John F. Jelkes, the Albert B. Camerons, Dr. Daniel A. Orth, Thomas Leiter, and Mrs. John F. Gail.

P. E. N. Club Will Entertain Barbusse.

The P. E. N. club has invited the members of the writers' group of the social functions committee of A Century of Progress to meet M. Henri Barbusee, the French author, at luncheon at 1 o'clock tomorrow noon at the Casino. M. Barbusse will be entertained by the John Reed Club of Artists and Writers at a banquet at 7 o'clock this evening at the Chicago Woman's club.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hamill are entertaining Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge at luncheon tomorrow before the third and last concert of the Pro Arte quartet at Orchestra hall and the Arts club is giving a dinner for her tomorrow night. Among those who will have guests at the club will be Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, Mrs. Otho Fisher Ball, Mrs. Vernon Herbst, Mrs. Dallas Phemister, Miss Emily Larned, Mrs. Edward A. Leight, and Dr. Julia Strawn.

Mrs. Patrick C. Hill Remains in Vermont.

Mrs. Patrick C. Hill is planning to stay in Charlotte, Vt., until the weather is so cold that she cannot be comfortable there any longer and then she will be passing through Chicago, to the delight of her relatives and friends, on her way to her other home in Fort Worth, Tex. Mrs. Hill is the former "Ginny" Carpenter, and she and her little daughter and perhaps her husband, if he goes north to bring his family home, will be welcomed warmly when they pass through Chicago the middle or the end of next month.

Mrs. George F. McLaughlin told us recently that she is practically certain that her sister, Señora Felipe A. Espil [Courtney Letts Stillwell Borden] and her new husband, the ambassador from Argentina, will not be coming to Chicago this fall. There had been talk of their coming before the Fair closes, but it looks now, according to Mrs. McLaughlin, as if they would not be able to get so far from Washington this fall.

The Prince and Princess Odescalchi are here from Denver to visit their cousins, Mrs. John J. Cummings and Miss Josephine Yeaman of 1531 State parkway. Before her marriage to the Italian prince Princess Odescalchi was Elaine Wilcox of Denver.

A boy born on Wednesday in a foreign country, is of very great interest to Chicagoans, for he is a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morse. He was born in Munich, Germany, to the Baron and Baroness Wolfgang Beck von Peccoz [Martha Morse] and has been named Stefan Georg Wolfgang Beck von Peccoz.

Mr. and Mrs. Morse have been abroad for several weeks. Mr. Morse is expected at home some time next month, but Mrs. Morse will be away longer.

Mrs. S. Cecile Young, who spent the early summer at her family's old place at Lake Geneva, but who has been in the Billings hospital with a broken foot since July, has moved to the Drake hotel.

Miss Diana Thorne Will Visit Chicago.

Today or tomorrow Miss Diana Thorne, the well known New York etcher whose subject is always dogs, is arriving in Chicago with her host and hostess, the Jay Beidler Camps. Miss Thorne has been the guest of the Camps the last several days at their cottage at Mackinac island and will continue her visit with them here during her exhibition at Marshall Field's. The exhibit opens on Monday.

Young Barry Whittaker, the son of the Ralph Whittakers of Winnetka, is going to celebrate his fourth birthday today by taking all of his small playmates to see the Sue Hastings marionettes give a performance of "Winnie the Pooh" at the Winnetka Community house. The program is the first of a series of children's hour programs the Junior auxiliary of the Winnetka Woman's club is sponsoring.

Children who attend the Fair this morning may hear Miss Georgene Faulkner, the story lady, give a program of Lincoln anecdotes at 11 o'clock in the Illinois Host house. Miss Faulkner will appear in costume.

Walter Dill Scotts Give Tea After Game.

After the Northwestern-Indiana game this afternoon at Dyche stadium President and Mrs. Walter Dill Scott have invited several of the distinguished guests who are here for the game to come to their home in Evanston for tea. Among those who have received invitations will be the guests in President Scott's box at the game: Admiral Wat T. Cluverius, Carbon Dubbs, and Harvey Woodruff; John H. Hardin, president of the board of trustees of Northwestern, and the guests in his box: Mr. and Mrs. Philip Connell, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Burnham, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hersey, and the governor of Indiana, Paul McNutt, and the governor of Ohio, George White.

Mrs. Amos C. Miller is opening her handsome Gothic home on the lake in Evanston this afternoon for a recital by the violinist, Prof. Reber Johnson, formerly with the New York Symphony orchestra and now the head of the music department at Oberlin college.

South Shore Club Holds Election Today.

Today is election day at the South Shore Country club. The polls will be open from 1 p. m. until 7 p. m. and the annual meeting will be held at 8 o'clock. The members' party starts at 9:30 in the ballroom. Tomorrow night H. C. Craven will lecture on the jungles and wilds of distant lands, assisted by his trained chimpanzee.

To make possible a visit to A Century of Progress for more than 500 world war veterans at the Edward Hines Jr. Memorial hospital, society will attend a concert by Nina Mariani tomorrow afternoon at the Studebaker theater. A committee headed by Postmaster Ernest J. Kreutgen is in charge of Veterans' day at the Fair to be observed next Saturday.

Among those who have taken seats for the concert are Mrs. William S. Monroe, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. Albert A. Sprague, Mrs. Wentworth G. Field, Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, Mrs. Maurice L. Rothschild, Mrs. Hayden B. Harris, Mrs. Edward Hines, Mrs. Henry M. Dawes, Mrs. Edward B. Butler, Mrs. Charles D. Frey, Mrs. Ernest J. Ballard, Mrs. Rush C. Butler, Mrs. Joseph C. Belden, Mrs. Edison B. Dick, and Mrs. Albert F. Madlener.

Playboy Husband Neglects Woman Who Supports Him

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Marriage IS hard when you draw a lemon such as "Sal" took unto herself on a fatal June day five years ago!

A handsome devil. So goodlooking the movies should have captured him! The girls turn to look. And he looks back at every one of them. Dates them, too, so "Sal" sits home many a night wondering where her liege lord is! He's not with her, it's a certainty. Nor doing any worrying about what kind of a time she's having. A conceited fool in the bargain!

Sal goes all the way as an easy mark, one of those things Barnum said isn't entitled to an even break. She works, at home to keep things nice for the Apollo, and on a wearying job. She earns pretty good money, but turns her salary over to the handsome one, keeping a modest five out for herself. His explanation, according to Sal, is "We'll put our money in the bank." But he keeps the bank book.

We're not the one to advocate walking out on a contract. For various reasons we do not advocate it, among which is that no one but the individual herself can tell whether she'd be happier living miserably with her man or away from him. Some women are like that!

CLASS DAY.

"All of you boys fell down on the Class Day problem I gave you on Sept. 30, so I'll explain it," Prof. Fordney said to his students.

"I stated that a man drove a car around a circular track at the rate of 10 miles per hour, then drove another car over the same course at the rate of 50 miles per hour.

"Now, for example, say the track was 50 miles around. The first car, therefore, took 5 hours to negotiate the distance while the second took 1 hour. Both cars took 6 hours to circle the track. As the two cars took 6 hours to travel 100 miles, the average rate of speed for both cars is obviously 16 2-3 miles per hour. You simply divide 100 miles [the distance twice around the track] by 6 hours.

"On a one mile track the answer is the same because the car traveling at the rate of 10 miles an hour traverses the course in 6 minutes and the car traveling at 50 miles covers it in 1 1-5 minutes—a total of 7 1-5 minutes—or 12-100 of an hour.

"So, regardless of the distance of any course, the average rate of speed equals 2 times the track distance, divided by the total time in hours! Get it?

"Here's another simple one," he continued. "A man stared at a portrait in the drawing room and inquired of his host, 'Who is that?'

"The answer was, 'Well, brothers and sisters I have none, but that man's father [pointing to the picture] is my father's son. Quickly now!"

WHAT WAS THE RELATION OF THE HOST TO THE MAN IN THE PORTRAIT?

Coiffure Artist Can Alter Face with Carefully Chosen Hairdress

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

I recently saw a demonstration on how a face can be appreciably "reduced" by the position of the hair parting and the line it takes.

The demonstration was made by one of the cleverest hair artists in the business. Unfortunately for us, one of his talent is not found in every salon. Nevertheless, you might do a little experimenting on your own with that hair part.

The "model" under experimentation entered the shop with the hair part almost directly over the outer eye corner. Incidentally, too, her hair was badly in need of thinning, and in this department the coiffeur artist of whom I speak is a master. And believe you, there are ways of thinning hair and other other ways of thinning it. I have a feeling that when women become conscious of right and wrong ways of thinning [or dyeing and getting permanents], their want will create better and more artistic work. So I'm all for demanding!

But to get back to the hair part. This hair artist rarely lets the part run a perfectly straight course. Its line influences the swirled movement of the hair in back, or maybe the swirl influences the part. It's not a too obviously crooked line, you understand, rather, just a movement.

The part, as I say, was, acording to the hair artist, all wrong for this particular woman. It broadened her face when her face needed thinning help. The part was moved towards the center what appeared an inch, but really was less. Anyway, there was not the "squared" head top that misplaced parts often give. Then, after the part, the head was studied and a further thinning of hair on the sides at the top of the head was performed.

A clever bit of work was done in the back of the head, just where the skull naturally goes in, to preserve this contour. It really was unbelievable, the "thinned down," refined, if we may use the word, bit of magic worked. So much so, the woman told me later that she was complimented that night on how slender she looked.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

The Yiddish stage, whose activities in Chicago have languished of late because of certain familiar economic conditions, came to life last night with the première of a stock company that has selected the Princess theater, a derelict playhouse of the old Shubert domain, as its headquarters. The history of Yiddish acting in this city covers fifty years, but it is now represented by a resident company within the "loop" for the first time in that period.

Last night's production was "The Little Cantor," an operetta of old fashioned European type—a light comedy of bourgeois character, embellished by occasional songs. Whether it is a new piece or a standard item in the Yiddish repertory I cannot say; at any rate it provided its audience with ample amusement.

Its central character is a merry lad whose life as a holy youth of the synagogue does not prevent him from having a bit of fun with the members of his family. This rôle is acted with a sly, quaint touch by Nellie Kessman, who appears to be a comedienne with a gift for "leading boys."

The performance reveals that the Yiddish language of Chicago has adopted a fair sized English vocabulary. The players often drop into the speech of the native born, and occasionally in complete sentences. The following line will serve as an illustration: "Du machst die goo-goo eyes zu my Nannie." I would be tempted to brush up in my German and become a Yiddish scholar if the words in this tongue were not spelled backwards.

At Five Active Child Begins to "Strut His Stuff"

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Will it help you if I tell you that whatever troubles are bothering you now will probably be outgrown in a few months?

Just now the five and the four and a half year olds are causing a great deal of worry and honest ink to flow.

"My little five year old daughter is just plain disobedient at this period, and I want to see her through this trying time as calmly as possible. She never tells me no; but if I tell her not to do a thing this minute that is just the thing she will do the next moment.

"Then, too, when I say, 'No, you can't do this or that,' she asks the same thing over and over, thinking that finally she will get her way. My mother says, 'Spank her,' but there must be some other way."

There is another way. Five is the age at which disobedience usually sprouts. The five year old is past babyhood; he is pretty capable physically; he's learned a lot; he's conscious of his powers. He's beginning to feel his oats and tries to take the bit in his teeth. Disobedience at five is a perfectly natural sign of a child's development. What mothers need when it appears is to change their way of managing.

Our written in full booklet, "How to Gain Obedience," was planned with this need in mind. It will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

BY ARCH WARD.

This is the day Chicago and Purdue find out where they are going in Big Ten football.

The game will be played at Stagg field before a crowd of approximately 25,000, the largest that has seen a Maroon contest since Yale visited the Midway two years ago.

Purdue, undefeated in its last sixteen games, expects to find itself today. Its showing to date has been unimpressive. The Boilermakers whipped Ohio university [not Ohio State] by only one touchdown and were held to a 7 to 7 tie by Minnesota.

Chicago breezed through Cornell college, 32 to 0, and Washington university of St. Louis, 40 to 0. It appears to be the strongest eleven that has represented the Maroon in several years. But there always is a tendency to exaggerate the potentialities of a team that rolls up big scores on weak opponents.

First in Big Ten Without Stagg.

Chicago enters its first conference game under the direction of a new coach and a new system of play. It will be the first time since the university was founded that it has met a Big Ten foe without A. A. Stagg at the helm.

It perhaps is Purdue's misfortune to be the first conference opponent of the Maroons. It is conceded that Chicago has only one good team, if it has that. The squad is lamentably weak in reserves. But it will be able to muster its maximum strength today. Purdue uses the Notre Dame style of attack, with which the Maroons' new coach, Clark Shaughnessy, is familiar. He encountered it annually at Loyola of New Orleans.

Both teams have strong backfields and question mark lines. Save for Roy Horstmann the Boilermakers have the same ball carriers who last year smothered Chicago, 37 to 0. Paul Pardonner, Jim Carter, Fred Hecker, and Duane Purvis, supported by at least four good substitutes, comprise an offensive combination that ought to develop into a great scoring group if the forwards are able to give them a chance.

Two Maroons Get Test.

The Maroons, too, have a back field that can step. Two of them, Pete Zimmer and Vin Sahlin, elusive in the open field, are experienced workmen. The other two, Jay Berwanger, who specializes in off tackle drives, and Ewald Nyquist, a plunging full back, have not been tested in big league football. Berwanger was a high school star at Dubuque two years ago, and Nyquist at the same time was cracking opponents' lines for Rockford.

Both squads are equipped with good forward passers. The Maroon chuckers are Zimmer and Berwanger. All of Purdue's regular back field men can throw the ball. Purvis is the best. Practice in javelin throwing at track meets has helped him to get great distance on his football tosses.

Chicago's starting line will include four sophomores, Rainwater Wells, end; Robert Perretz, guard, and Merritt Bush and Robert Deem, tackles. Bush, on account of injuries, has not had an hour of scrimmage this fall. The veterans are Ell Patterson, converted from guard to center; John Womer, who has been moved from tackle to end, and Walter Maneikis, guard.

Purdue Prepared for Battle.

Purdue has only two regular linesmen left over from 1932. They are Ed Ungers and Dutch Fehring, tackles. The newcomers are Hass, end; Dennis, guard; Skoronski, center; Febel, guard, and Duggins, end.

Purdue is prepared for a hard fight. Coach Noble Kizer, who came to Chicago last night to attend a Purdue alumni dinner, said he knew the Maroons had been concentrating on this game since the start of practice.

"Since Sept. 15 until the first week in October conference rules permitted Chicago two drills daily, a training table and evening sessions," Kizer said. "They were eating, thinking, playing, and living football for three weeks, while we were prohibited from holding more than one drill a day because our classes opened on Sept. 14. They should and will have an edge on us in condition and it will take just that much better football on our part to produce results."

Veeck's Place Left Vacant Until January

Naming of a successor to William L. Veeck, late president of the Cubs, will not take place until the regular meeting of the directors early next January. This announcement was made yesterday by Philip K. Wrigley, controlling owner, following a special meeting of stockholders for the purpose of filling vacancies on the board of directors and the executive committee.

Mr. Wrigley also announced that he would not add to his present manifold duties by assuming the presidency of his ball club.

"I had thought of it," he explained, "but have definitely abandoned the idea."

World Title Still Objective.

The delay in picking a new executive will not interfere with present plans for reëstablishing the Cubs in the class of pennant producers.

"I have said before that I will try to reach the goal set by my father—a world series winner," said Mr. Wrigley. "The Cubs have paid big money for stars in the past and it will be done again if it is possible to buy what is needed."

Responsibility for consummating deals prior to the naming of a club president will rest with William M. Walker, vice president; John O. Seys, second vice president, and Charley Grimm, team manager.

Holdings Not for Sale.

Mr. Wrigley also picked meeting day as a good time to declare himself on the matter of a sale of his major league baseball holdings. Since the death of Veeck there have been rumors that no less than a dozen men were carrying on negotiations for the purchasing of the club.

"The ball club now is looked upon, at least by us, as a Wrigley institution, and is not for sale," said the youthful magnate.

Two vacancies on the board of directors and one on the executive committee were filled at yesterday's meeting of stockholders. The board vacancy created by the recent death of Adolph Schuettler was filled by the naming of Paul Harper, attorney for the Wrigley estate. John O. Seys, second vice president, was elected to membership on the board and the committee, posts previously held by Veeck.

Northwestern's jinx team—Indiana by name—will trot into Dyche stadium at Evanston this afternoon to see what can be done about making 1933 as memorable for the Wildcats as 1927, 1928 and 1929. On those three occasions supposedly superior Purple elevens folded up before the unlooked for skill of the Hoosiers. And this time the Hoosiers are touted to be tougher than their predecessors.

Against this Indiana powerhouse which held Minnesota to a tie and gave Notre Dame some worrisome moments, the Purple will send a team that still is a mystery despite its brilliant rally against Stanford after the defeat by Iowa. The Wildcat coaches profess to be worried by a lack of offensive strength, but under their hats are satisfied that the improvement against Stanford last week was only the first step toward proving that the Iowa flop was just one of those things.

Hoosiers' Attack Versatile.

The Hoosiers came in last evening, bringing with them an attack respected for its versatility. They can run, pass, plunge and punt and have the kind of a line that helps to make these various modes of advance effective. But the Wildcats had that same sort of thing to contend with in their Stanford battle, and they weren't lacking. Neither were they shy about picking up yardage against the Californians, but the extra punch to put them within scoring range was absent.

Indiana's offense will be strengthened by the appearance of Don Veller, the ace ball carrier, and Wendell Walker, 200 pound sophomore full back. To make sure that Veller would be available for the Purple he was not permitted to aggravate an injury by taking part in either the Minnesota or Notre Dame game. Walker played only a limited portion of the Minnesota contest. This pair may not start today, but if not, they'll be in there sooner or later.

Sullivan Gets Call.

Mainly because of the excellent fashion in which Bob Jones, combination full back and guard, punts for the Hoosiers, Northwestern will open today with Jakie Sullivan at left half instead of Harry Leeper. The Jones toe, capable both as to distance and accuracy, demands the attention of a reliable safety man. That's where Sullivan fills the bill, not to mention his threat as a runner. Another change will be Tangora in Whelan's guard position. The latter has a slight injury.

In its previous battles with the Hoosiers, the Purple has registered 12 victories and 8 defeats. The record between the two teams follows:

1899—Northwestern, 11; Indiana, 6.
1900—Northwestern, 12; Indiana, 0.

Army, Illinois Battle Today Before 40,000

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., Oct. 20.—Fair weather and the arrival of the members of the casts for tomorrow's intersectional football game at the Cleveland stadium perked up ticket sales today. The citizens of this neutral battleground are beginning to appreciate their opportunity, as Mayor Ray T. Miller phrased it at the Rotarian welcoming luncheon this noon, to serve as hosts to those great institutions, the United States Military academy and the University of Illinois.

It is expected that 40,000 hosts and hostesses will be in the stands tomorrow afternoon.

The Army's football squad, three elevens and a scattering of additional incidental substitutes, rode into town this morning. They bivouacked at the University school, where they finished their training in private. The squad was accompanied by a group of nonplaying cadets among whose duties as announcers, radio assistants, and managers is the task of finding a mule to lend dignity to an old Army tradition.

It's a Civilian Mule.

The mule for this occasion, so reports have it, is an ordinary Missouri mule, a civilian mule at that, but it will be mustered into the Army, draped with an Army blanket and for one afternoon it will be king of its kind.

When the cadets play on their home gridiron it is comparatively easy to hustle down to the quartermaster and have a mule issued for the afternoon. But when Army goes on the road, local mules are pressed into service. In the course of recent years quite a few mules have been elevated from the proletariat, and there has been some talk that the local chapters at Chicago, Philadelphia, New York, New Haven, and Champaign, Ill., form a national association.

Illinois' contribution to tomorrow's festivities is a gigantic band of 160 musicians who will march and counter march on Cleveland's lake front. These bandsmen will arrive tomorrow morning on a special train.

Band Emulates Clock.

Scouts have reported that Illinois' band has evolved a new feature, something as devastatingly new as was the Rockne shift fifteen years ago. It promises to force immediate revision of bandmasters' tactics. The Illinois band can form a clock, so it's

BIERMAN DENIES HE HAS RESIGNED AS GOPHER COACH

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Quick and emphatic denials greeted a published report today that Bernie Bierman had resigned as head football coach at Minnesota, effective at the end of the season.

The startling report interrupted weighty huddles about the big intersectional game here Saturday between Pittsburgh's mighty Panthers and Minnesota's scrappy Gophers.

Informed about the rumor he had quit because of dissatisfaction over a reported salary cut as has been general at the university, Bierman said: "I haven't resigned and don't know anything about it."

L. D. Coffman, president of the university, said:

"There is absolutely nothing to the rumor that Coach Bierman has resigned."

Frank McCormick, university athletic director, added: "There is no foundation for the report."

Bierman, first Minnesota alumnus to coach the Gopher team, came here from Tulane after the 1931 season and following a mediocre year in 1932, has shown unexpected strength with a green eleven this fall.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 20.—A Notre Dame team which admits it is high time to show its true power is camped on University Hills tonight awaiting the annual clash with Carnegie Tech in Pitt stadium tomorrow afternoon.

At 2 o'clock Tom [Kitty] Gorman, a broad shouldered lad from the great west side in Chicago, will lead the fighting Irish—magic name in football—into the struggle. When Capt. Gorman calls them off the field his boys at least will be 14 points in front according to all the best guessers, who are exuberant in the anticipation of watching a real old-fashioned he-man battle.

Coach Hunk Anderson, pictured by many as being of the cruel slice-'em-up and rip-'em-apart bone crushing type but who isn't that kind of a guy at all, still is in the grumps and declares he will be happy to win by one point.

The Judge Is in Contempt.

Yet Anderson flared up once late today when shown a statement credited to Judge Walter P. Steffen of Chicago, who is the advisory coach of the Skibos from Carnegie. Steffen predicted rather a handy win over Notre Dame.

"The judge, I am afraid, doesn't know what he is talking about," declared the Notre Dame coach, with no thought perhaps of being cited for contempt of court.

The football boom, which seems to be general all over the United States, hit Pittsburgh soon after the Notre Dame team arrived this morning. Tonight the advance sale of tickets has reached the high mark of 48,000. The weather man has issued a fair and cool promise for the game. The Carnegie Tech managers say there isn't any doubt that the remaining 16,000 tickets will be sold early tomorrow morning, so the battle will be played before a capacity crowd of 64,000 which will pay something like $140,000 for the entertainment.

Another Layden Is In.

Kitty Gorman will be a very happy young man once his team gets into motion. His term of captaincy lasts but a week in the new Notre Dame system, yet he is the first Chicagoan to captain a Notre Dame eleven since the late Knute Rockne did it back in 1913.

And there'll be another proud kid in the Notre Dame lineup at different times during the afternoon. This one is Francis Layden, brother of Elmer Layden, one of Notre Dame's Four Horsemen. Francis, when a youth at the age of 11, back some nine years ago, was allowed to sit on the Notre Dame bench here in Pittsburgh, rub elbows with Rockne, and watch brother Elmer help whip the Skibos.

Tomorrow Elmer of the Four Horsemen will be on the Notre Dame bench watching the kid brother play. Elmer is the coach of the Duquesne university team of Pittsburgh.

Slim shouldered Steve Terebus, left half back, who weighs only 148 pounds, will be the main cog in the Carnegie scoring attack. Around Pittsburgh they liken him to Albie Booth, the elusive Yale midget of a few seasons back. On the Carnegie Tech campus they say he is greater than Booth.

COLLEGES BRING FOURTH ESTATE IN OUT OF RAIN

One Time Big Three Among Last to Bid for Favor of Press

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 20.—The football expert leads a life of pampered luxury at Harvard, Yale, and Princeton nowadays, but it was not always thus and the veterans in our business take pleasure and pride in recalling what sturdy and faithful martyrs to duty we were in the days before the covered press coop and the installation of the electric lights.

Harvard, Yale, and Princeton were the last of the big schools in this section of the country to yield to the plaintive and sometimes petulant outcries of the members of the fourth estate as we suffered at our work on Saturday afternoons or anticipated our sufferings before the big games. Until a few years ago there was neither shelter nor light in the press sections of any of these three football plants.

These sections, being up on the rim, were slightly more exposed to the weather than any of the customers' seats, and it is a fact, provable by experience, if not by any scientific process, that the weather gets colder and generally meaner as soon as the mass of the crowd has left.

They Seemed to Be a Bunch of Sissies.

The demands of the journalists that the football management provide cover over the press coops and lights by which we could see to compose our living, human documents after nightfall were derided for a long time. It was suggested that if delicate young females of the football girl type who contribute so much to the spectacle of big varsity contests and aged alumni and their elderly wives could endure the rigors of the weather, then the sport writers were sissies, indeed, to complain. There was a slur to the manliness of the journalists in this, but, on the other hand, as soon as the games were over these delicate young females and the elderly alumnus [and wife] were free to go to warm places and relax. The journalists' work was just beginning.

I think I always had a secret dread of the loneliness of the football arena after the crowd had left and of being locked in by some inconsiderate janitor and having to climb some barbed wire entanglement in the dark to get out. This happened once to a group of us in Baltimore after an Army-Navy game, and I have several times had moments of awful alarm in the Polo grounds as I tore through the dark, windy tunnels and passes, finding every door locked against me and, in rising panic, thought of the dreadful prospect of being locked in the park until the next week-end. Perhaps, if at Harvard, Yale, and Princeton they had been considerate enough to keep the customers sitting there until we all finished our work up on the rim we would not have felt our distress so keenly.

I disrecall which member of the Big Three was the first to weaken, but I believe it was Harvard, under the athletic administration of Will Bingham, and with Arnold Horween as head coach, which built the first roof and first strung electric lights.

Now the Weather Is Softening Up.

Anyway, they all three relented about five or six years ago, and the job of covering a football game in the Big Three ceased to be an ordeal and became something of a pleasure. And, very strangely, since the stands have been covered, the weather on the seaboard has seemed to soften up, for I do not recall any big game at any of these stadia since the improvements were installed which was played in any such sleet or rain as fell on some memorable occasions before.

The worst experience of all was the game at Yale which is still referred to as the Ducky Pond game. Ducky Pond was the Yale captain and the hero of the afternoon, and upstairs in the coop the rain shortcircuited most of the wires and made pulp of the paper so that a man could not even make pencil notes. Several of the journalists caught bad colds and there

RIVALS MAKE FIRST BID FOR BIG TEN TITLE

Wolverines Are the Favorites.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 20.—Two great football teams—Ohio State and Michigan—worked out here today, each hoping that the bright skies under which they frisked would prevail despite dire prophecies of the weather man, who says it will rain on the teams and 85,000 spectators at the Michigan stadium tomorrow.

There was hope, however, that the weather man's spies were loafing on the job. Yesterday they caused him to predict it would rain today. Instead the sun blazed forth as soon as it nosed above the horizon and continued all day with nary a cloud to hinder it. Today was crisp, but not cold. A repetition of the menu tomorrow would be made to order for football's most magnificent turnout in the central west since 1930. If the government's meteorologist allows precipitation to fall on this great comeback gathering, he is a very wicked man and should be jailed on executive orders from the White House.

Limit Crowd to 85,000.

The official crowd estimate definitely has been placed at 85,000, a few thousand under the maximum. Instructions were given today to withhold construction of some of the circus seats in the interests of traffic in the stadium. The capacity could have been sprung to 87,000 or even 88,000, but to the discomfort of reserved seat holders in the matter of reaching their locations. So what was a couple of grand in a $175,000 house?

It is the sixth sellout in the history of the stadium here, Ohio State being a factor in half of them. Three of the six came in 1927, the year the mammoth structure was dedicated. Ohio State, Navy and Minnesota were the attractions that year. In 1929 the permanent capacity was sold out for Ohio State and Harvard.

Columbus Sends 12,000.

More than 12,000 will attend from Columbus, one of the largest pilgrimages in football history, taking in consideration that a 250 mile trip is involved. A taxi service of six planes will operate for the benefit of gents who feel they have to stay in Columbus tomorrow morning long enough to open their mail.

Tomorrow's clash will be the 30th between Michigan and Ohio State since the series began in 1897. Michigan has won 21 times, Ohio State six, and there have been two ties, 0 to 0 in 1900 and 3 to 3 in 1910. The worst defeat suffered by Ohio State was 86 to 0 in 1902. Ohio State victories were 13 to 3 in 1919, 14 to 7 in 1320, 14 to 0 in 1921, 19 to 7 in 1928, 7 to 0 in 1929, and 20 to 7 in 1931.

Here's How It Stands.

The scores of the complete series follow:

Year.	Michigan.	Ohio.	Year.	Michigan.	Ohio.
1897	36	0	1920	7	14
1900	0	0	1921	0	14
1901	21	0	1922	19	0
1902	86	0	1923	23	0
1903	36	0	1924	16	6
1904	31	6	1925	10	0
1905	40	0	1926	17	14
1906	6	0	1927	21	0
1907	22	0	1928	7	19
1908	10	6	1929	0	7
1909	33	6	1930	13	6
1910	3	3	1931	7	26
1911	30	0	1932	14	7
1912	14	0
1918	14	0		—	—
1919	3	13	Totals	528	130

The Buckeye squad, composed of 33 players, reached Detroit at dawn this morning, went to the Dearborn inn by taxi, and remained there until 1:45 o'clock this afternoon when it came to Ann Arbor and worked out in the stadium. Nothing very fancy was tried out.

Wolves Hide Away.

At the same time the Wolverines held an ultra secret drill in South Ferry field. They picked out a corner of the field where they could not be seen from trees, housetops or university structures. The players used their regular sweaters, on the theory that the spot was so obscure that no one, even with high powered glasses, could read their numbers. Some very tricky stuff was given out at the drill.

The prediction of rain caused each team to claim that a soggy field would be to the advantage of the other outfit. Unbaised sentiment was that rain would hurt the Wolverine cause more than that of the Buckeyes, the greater heft of the visitors being given as the principal reason for this conclusion.

Betting in Detroit was 7 to 5 in favor of Michigan with promise of a shift to even money at least in case of a rain sufficient to affect the stadium turf. Canvass of bookies in Detroit revealed no large wagers. The Columbus plungers were expected to fetch their rolls with them. At any rate there had been no shipment of gelt, most of the early wagering being of a professional character.

AN UNDERTAKER SMILES AS HIS HORSE PAYS OFF

Pancho Lopez Breaks Record for Bill Schmidt.

Bill Schmidt is a Chicago undertaker. Men in that line of business usually are sober and seldom smile. He was out at Sportsman's Park yesterday and no spectator had a broader smile than Schmidt. Here is the reason:

Pancho Lopez, the 4 year old son of Pagan Pan-Kuflya and the pride of his barn, established a new track record for Chicago's half-mile course when it ran five furlongs in 1:01, clipping two-fifths of a second off the time turned in in the previous race by Sun Teatime. The latter equaled the track record held for some time by Hot Shot. Incidentally, Schmidt also won a large wager on his horse. Jockey C. Mills was aboard Pancho Lopez.

Runs His Rivals Dizzy.

When the small field was sent away Pancho Lopez darted to the front and had his rivals dizzy. Pancho Lopez must have been feeling good, because the Spanish named horse flashed by the judges' stand three lengths ahead. Miss Melody was second.

Sherab, the English imported horse for which the Chappell Brothers of Rockford, Ill., paid $35,000, finished third. Pancho Lopez paid $10.22 for each $2 ticket.

Favorites Have Field Day.

Form players had a jubilee when the first four races were won by public choices. Long shot players finally got their inning in the sixth race when American Queen, ridden by Jockey McCray, triumphed in the mile and sixteenth journey. Those who wagered on American Queen received $42.64 for each $2 investment.

Jockey Eddie Arcaro had the honor of winning the daily double at Chicago's miniature course when he booted home Infinity in the second and Gay Follies in the third, completing the combination which paid $14.14.

T. S. Jordan, owned by Stuyvesant S. Peabody, president of the Lincoln Fields Jockey club, showed a remarkable performance in the fourth race. Although the old campaigner—he is now 12 years old—finished fourth, he showed the lads that there is still a chance for him to come back. Jordan was second until his aged legs began to weaken in the final strides. The race was won by Sun Teatime, public choice.

Sun Teatime equaled the track record for the Cicero course when the 4 year old daughter of Sun Briar-Teapot ran five furlongs in 1:01 2-5. This record was held for some time by Hot Shot, which ran in the race and finished ninth.

Duck Hunting Before Sunrise Is Legalized

BY BOB BECKER.

Mr. Waterfowl Hunter, here is important news on the sunrise and sunset regulations which governed duck and goose hunting in Illinois. This year the state of Illinois is not operating under the old game code regulations which stated that no duck hunting could be done before official sunrise. On the contrary, it now is legal in this state to open up on waterfowl exactly 30 minutes before sunrise and to continue to shoot until sunset.

This is the U. S. department of agriculture regulation and in this state the department of conservation is enforcing it. The old game code article which stated that all waterfowl hunters could not start shooting until sunrise and must stop at sunset has been taken off the books.

Clinch Confirms Change in Law.

Confirmation of this change in the state hunting laws was given us by Thomas J. Clinch, the department of conservation inspector, who is in charge of the northern Illinois territory. The exact wording of the article in the U. S. laws which describes the legal hours of hunting waterfowl is found in the service and regulatory announcement issued by the department of agriculture this week. On page 2 of this pamphlet we find section 4, "Open Season on and Possession of Certain Migratory Game Birds." It reads:

"Waterfowl [except snow geese, and brant in Florida and all states north thereof bordering on the Atlantic ocean, Ross' goose, wood duck, ruddy duck, bufflehead duck, and swans] such as rails, coot, gallinules, woodcock, Wilson's snipe or jacksnipe, mourning doves, and band tailed pigeons may be taken each day from half an hour before sunrise to sunset during the open season prescribed therefor in this regulation."

All waterfowl hunters are advised by the department of conservation that this regulation is now in force and wardens are on the job to see that there are no violations of it.

Extra Wardens Patrol North Shore.

Mr. Clinch states that he has extra wardens now patrolling the north shore area and the northern lake country to see that the duck regulations are obeyed and to arrest the pothunters who have been bagging pheasants out of season. Wardens are patrolling Fox lake every day to enforce the regulation making that lake a rest area except between 7 and 9 a. m. During those hours it is legal to shoot on Fox lake. During the balance of the day hunters are required to stay away from the lake.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—"Beat Wisconsin!" was the theme song of a rejuvenated University of Iowa football public tonight in one of the most inspiring rallies ever witnessed on the eve of a conference game. Nigh on to 5,000 students and townspeople paraded through streets decorated with huge ears of corn, bearing flares and cowbells, in which there has been a flourishing trade for the last 48 hours. Starting out from three different corners of the town, they converged in front of the old Iowa capitol building, there to work themselves to a pitch of enthusiasm which has not been attained here for five years.

Coach Ossie Solem and a squad of 25 Hawkeye players were encamped in a Cedar Rapids hotel, twenty-five miles from the scene of the jubilant celebration, and will remain there until shortly before the game time tomorrow.

Solem Wary of Badger Power.

Solem is in perfect accord with the campus sentiment, although he does not share it to the extent manifested by the home folk tonight. Although he personally scouted Wisconsin's defeat by Illinois at Champaign last week, he still has his misgivings about the Badgers' lack of power, if any, and today was still claiming that the three touchdown margin by which they lost to the Illini was far too much for their actual strength, and feels that they have undoubtedly bolstered themselves considerably since last Saturday.

The Badgers were due to arrive this evening at Davenport, there to spend the night. It had not been discovered at a late hour whether or not Coach Doc Spears was bringing with him his captain and star full back, Hal Smith, who had been reported ill last night in the student infirmary at Madison, and it is not known whether he will be able to play. Spears was expected to use Dehnert, who lacks Smith's poundage and line smashing talents, which fact would cause no undue grief among Iowa fans, who have seen the Badger leader in action before to their sorrow.

Porett May Be Lost to Badgers.

The Badgers are also likely to be without the services of Leo Porett, quarter back, who suffered an injury to his hip in the Illinois game, although Solem today contended that Pike, Porett's substitute, appeared to function better in the Badger backfield, if for no other reason than his kicking ability.

The Iowa line itself will not be in top form as far as physical condition is concerned, although all of the casualties are expected to do their bit. Heading these is Francis Schammel, the 215 pound guard who apparently has recovered sufficiently from a leg infection to start the game. The mortality among the guards at Iowa was increased by one last night when Bill Secl, right guard, came down with a severe head cold and was promptly sent to his home in Cedar Rapids to see if he could lick it by game time. Three other guards, Lumir Kouba, Wilmon Haas and Bill Hawkins also are on the injury roster, but all are expected to break into the game, if only to share the work with Schammel and Secl.

Crayne Wears Pape's No. 20.

There is one point on which Solem, who appears to be the party to lead Iowa out of the wilderness in which it has been wandering these last few years, is not fretting over. That is his back field, which includes two of the best ball carriers in the Big Ten in Joe Laws and Dick Crayne. With them will be Dwight Hoover and Russ Fisher with able replacements in Bob Nook, Richards, Ash and Panther. Incidentally, Crayne will be wearing No. 20 on his jersey tomorrow, a figure which brought defeat to Wisconsin in 1929 when Oran Pape was doing big things for the Hawkeyes.

The rivalry between the Hawkeyes and Badgers is one of the most bitter in the conference, having culminated in a free-for-all fight among the fans following the 1929 game at Madison.

Rain Threatens to Cut Crowd.

Overcast skies and light showers this afternoon threatened to reduce the anticipated record crowd of more than 40,000, although the athletic ticket office still had high hopes of breaking the mark of 38,000 set at the dedication of the new Iowa stadium in 1928. Homecomers from all over the country, including five members of the 1903 team were crowding the local hotels to such an extent that fraternity and sorority houses were taking in many of them, while Cedar Rapids and Davenport hostelries also were crowded.

The Hawkeyes have more than one reason for wanting to win tomorrow's game. Paramount among these is the 24-0 drubbing the Badgers handed them at Madison last year. Then, too, there is the business of retaining the joint leadership of the conference, a high estate which they have not reached since 1928. Then, too, in thirteen games with Wisconsin, the Hawkeyes have never been able to win here, scoring their three victories at Madison.

PLAY FOR COUNTY TITLE.

Canton, Ill., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—The third and final game for the Fulton county baseball league championship will be played Sunday when the Canton Fans meet Avon at Avon. Each team has won one game.

said, that tells the time of day, even to the second. The boys just don't go out there between halves and form 3:17 p. m. and wait for time to catch up. They march out there and spell out the time so you can set your watch by it.

This maneuver should be particularly difficult because the bandsmen never have performed on eastern standard time.

Illinois' varsity arrived at Union station shortly before 4 o'clock this afternoon. The players rehearsed at the Stadium and then withdrew to a suburban hotel. Illinois' big stretch of canvas, which had been imported as rain insurance, was stretched over the gridiron, although tonight there was no indication that it would be needed.

New Life in Illini.

Coach Robert Zuppke rode in the van of his troops today, once more holding high his head, as back in 1927 and 1928, when the Illini ruled the Big Ten. Illinois' victory over Wisconsin has injected new life which may provide the spark to help the Illini whip the Army.

Illinois may do just that. In 1929 Illinois took a much better team than Army will have tomorrow and sent it home from Champaign in utter confusion, defeated 17 to 7. That was the Army team of Red Cagle and Big Murrell, and, while there were such fellows as Timm, Yanuskus, Kawal, Burdick, and Peters fighting for the "best team in the land," no one thought they could round up Cagle and make him behave for 60 minutes.

The next year Army entertained at the Polo grounds in New York and came out in front, 13 to 0. So this short series is even up. Tomorrow should break the tie, and the loser then may tie it up next year at Champaign.

Buckler Player to Watch.

Jack Buckler of Waco, Tex., who expects to get his commission in 1935, is star designate for the Army. This 159 pound half back is no novice at the game. He's had three freshman years, one at Texas Tech, another at Baylor university, and, of course, his plebe year at the Point. Texas Jack is certain to do Army's punting and passing, and Army hopes he will do its running.

Unless Capt. Herman Walser plays, Illinois probably will stand pat on its back field of Beynon, Froschauer, Lindberg, and Snook. There's been some talk that Zuppke would use a pair of shock tackles so that Elbert Gragg and Bart Cummings might take a first quarter lesson in Army attack from the vantage of the bench.

GEHRINGER SIGNS CONTRACT WITH TIGERS FOR 1934

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Frank J. Navin, president of the Detroit American league baseball club, announced today that Second Baseman Charley Gehringer has renewed his contract for another year with the Detroit Tigers.

Gehringer, confirming Navin's announcement, said he was actuated in signing by reports that he had said he expected to be made playing manager of the Detroit club, succeeding Stanley R. [Bucky] Harris, who resigned. He denied he had made any such statement, and said the position never had been offered him.

Navin said he had not offered the managerial position to Gehringer. He said no manager has been selected, and declared he did not know when the selection would be made, or who would get the job.

Edwards, Canadian Star, Wins 880, Loses 440 Yd. Run

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Phil Edwards, Canadian Olympic middle distance star, today won the 880 yard run, but was defeated in the 440 yard event in the annual intercollegiate track and field meet here. Running for McGill university, the former New York university athlete, finished 10 feet back of Bill Fritz of Queen's, in the quarter mile. Fritz was timed in 50 4-5 seconds.

THINGS YOU MAY NOT KNOW About FOOTBALL STARS

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

IOWA CITY, Ia., Oct. 20.—Nick Lukats, who will be on the spot during the 1933 season because he will be working out of the left half back position, regarded as the most important ball carrying job in the Notre Dame back field, also has been on the spot before, although you'd never know it from the way the Perth Amboy, N. J., Hungarian lugs a ball around a football lot. When Nick is wearing a football costume football is the only topic on his mind, but that's not the only costume he has worn.

Last spring Lukats, who with Dan Hanley, is the sole survivor of Notre Dame's last national championship team, made a tremendous hit as an entertainer at the South Bend school. He was master of ceremonies in the Monogram club revue, doing a bit as a Negro impersonator and then coming back to wow them as Groucho Marx. Black, curly hair is part of the reason—the rest is sheer ability. If that isn't enough indication of Nick's versatility, consider the fact that he's a tennis star, and once ranked seventh among the nation's boy players.

Krause Gets Into All Sports. Whata Man!

Lukats is far from being the only Notre Dame player with diversified talents. There is Edward [Moose] Krause, the Chicago boy who came from De La Salle institute with a ready made reputation as a football player and as leader of De La Salle's two national championship basketball teams. He has not only maintained the pace in these sports, but also has played first for the baseball team and won his track monogram as a weight man.

The quietest man on the Notre Dame squad off the field happens to be the real savage when the going is tough. He's Hugh John Devore, the end who helped to route the Army last year. When players of the Notre Dame caliber begin to marvel at a teammate's audacity and courage, he must have something, and the consensus is that Devore has more than enough. His dark features have often given the impression that he's an Italian or a Frenchman, but it so happens his father's people came out of Donegal and his mother's from Limerick. While captain in the St. Benedict's prep eleven in Newark, N. J., the team had just completed a successful play against a Princeton prep school team. One of his teammates said to Devore, "What this team needs is a few more of us wops." You never hear of Hughie except on a football field, for that's his way.

Elser Walks 20 Miles a Day with Statements.

The Notre Dame squad is so large that it's difficult to describe them at length. Here are a few of those things you may not know about them:

Don Elser, the Gary sophomore back, trained for this season by serving delinquent tax statements, a job which kept him walking 20 miles a day . . . Steve Banas plays piano and writes verse as facilely as he totes a football. A Slovenian, Steve spent seven of his younger years in Europe . . . Tony Mazziotti, seeking the job at quarter, hails from the same neighborhood as Frank Carideo, Westchester county, N. Y. . . . Ray Brancheau is a dirt farmer and road builder during the summer and an archer in his spare time . . . Tom Roach is co-publisher of and writer for the school's football review.

Dominic Vairo comes from a real Notre Dame football town—Calumet, Mich.—which produced George Gipp, Hunk Anderson and Ojay Larson . . . John [Red] Tobin will talk or play contract bridge or golf at any time . . . Harry Wunsch's work as a theater prop man licked him on weight a year ago, so he shed 25 pounds laboring in a warehouse this summer . . . John Michuta is the school heavyweight champion and also won a title in Detroit's Golden Gloves tournament . . . Fred Carideo, who trains as a lumberjack, is a cousin to Frank. . . . Andy Pilney will ride a horse or a motorcycle with little if any provocation. . . . Frank La Borne, whose lack of weight has hampered him, lost ten pounds last summer when he shivered for five hours in an Atlantic sailing mishap.

Jenkins Gives Hawks Fourth Defense Man

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—After the longest and the most strenuous workout the Chicago Blackhawks have had since starting training on the ice of the Illinois university rink for the opening of the National Hockey league season, Manager Gorman today was convinced he had made no mistake in developing Roger Jenkins, former right winger, into a defense player.

If Jenkins continues to improve at his new position nothing can keep him from becoming a Blackhawk regular, Gorman said. This means that worries over the defense positions are practically over. Abel, Conacher, Coulter, and Jenkins would then constitute the most stalwart defense quartet in the league.

Manager Gorman also announced that Jack Leswick, center, and Bill Kendall, right winger, have made the grade and will be in the Blackhawks' lineup when they face the New York Americans in the first game of the season at the Chicago Stadium Nov. 9. Both were stars in the American association last season.

The result of the workout, aside from the brilliant play of Jenkins, Leswick and Kendall, was so gratifying that Manager Gorman called off the afternoon practice.

Evanston and Oak Park to Clash Today

Evanston and Oak Park, perennial contenders for the Suburban High School league football championship, will meet this afternoon at Oak Park stadium. Each has scored one victory in league competition, defeating the same team, Deerfield-Shields of Highland Park.

The game heads a heavy schedule which includes the second round of contests in the sectional races of the Chicago Public High School league. In the south section Morgan Park, defending champion, will seek its second consecutive victory against Phillips at 110th and Hermosa streets. Harrison Tech, rated as powerful as the team which won the league title in 1931, faces Crane Tech at Mills stadium in a west division contest.

Austin Battles McKinley.

The Harrison-Crane game expert will be part of a double-header at the west side field. In the other contest, which will start at 12:30 o'clock, Austin will meet McKinley.

In a pair of north section games Lake View will meet Roosevelt at Logan Square park, while Schurz will play Senn at Loyola field.

Proviso, which is tied for the Suburban league lead with Evanston and Oak Park, will face Deerfield at Maywood. In the game Sleepy Pearson, star half back, will make his last appearance in a prep game. Pearson, who scored 46 points in Proviso's five games this season, will be 20 years old next week, thus being ineligible for further high school competition.

New Trier Wins, 26 to 0.

Led by Dahl, left half back, New Trier overwhelmed Marshall in an nonleague game at Winnetka yesterday. Dahl scored two touchdowns, one in the first quarter and the other in the third period. Lineup:

PERSONALITY NO ASSET IN COURT, LEVINSKY FINDS

"My personality will beat this," King Levinsky, the prize fighting pride of Maxwell street, remarked yesterday to a court attaché when he appeared before Municipal Judge Frank M. Padden.

The Kingfish was defendant in a suit for $176 brought by Jack Silver, head of an automobile radio sales agency. Silver said that he delivered three automobile radios to the Levinsky clan in June, 1932, and has yet to receive his payment.

"Why didn't you pay the bill?" Judge Padden asked the Kingfish.

"The radios weren't any good," replied Levinsky.

That ended the personality display. Judge Padden entered judgment for Silver.

Midwest League Will Present Title Trophies

HOCKEY MANAGERS MEET.

Managers of all teams in the Chicago Amateur Hockey association will meet at the Coliseum Monday night.

Bears Select Back Field for Packer Battle

Nagurski, Corbett, Sisk and Brumbaugh will be the starting back field of the Bears against the Green Bay Packers in the National Professional Football league game tomorrow at Wrigley field, while the visiting foursome is expected to be Grove, Herber, Bruder and Hinkle.

Corbett has been going well all season, as has Sisk, and from now on they are likely to be used more than ever. Corbett is an excellent punter, and much of that duty from now on is his.

The Packers are scheduled to arrive this evening for a night's rest before the battle.

Passes Worry Halas.

What to do about Green Bay's forward passing attack is the problem that Coach George Halas has been attempting to solve during the Bears' drill this week. Putting stoppers on Herber, the leading thrower, would settle it, but Herber operates behind a line that is the equal of the Bears. Thus Halas instructed the Bears to be on the alert for Johnny Blood, Lavie Dilweg, Al Rose, Hank Bruder, and Clark Hinkle whenever there is a possibility of a forward pass.

Blood always has been a jinx to the Bears. He ranks as one of the best pass catchers in the league this year.

Kurth Opposes Lyman.

Joe Kurth, formerly of Notre Dame, will start at right tackle for Green Bay. He will be opposed by Link Lyman, who will outweigh him by 50 pounds.

WEATHER JOLTS PITT PLANS FOR GOPHER BATTLE

Wind, Rain Predicted at Minneapolis Today.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 20.—[Special.]—With the promise of cold, disagreeable weather, Coaches Bernie Bierman of Minnesota and Dr. Jock Sutherland of Pittsburgh were forced to change their strategy in preparation for the intersectional game at Memorial stadium here tomorrow. The weather man predicted cold, rain, and a high wind, a distinct departure from the calmer Saturdays on the Gophers' three previous football encounters.

Coach Sutherland rolled into Minneapolis with 32 Pitt Panthers today. His first question concerned the weather. He had learned that high winds often are prevalent in this vicinity, and was plainly perturbed on learning that circumstances may not be conducive to the versatile style of running and passing attack that he had planned using.

It's an "Even Money Game."

The Pitt tutor also appeared disturbed over the installation of his team as a 10 to 6 favorite. "This is nothing more than an even money game, and I don't like it," he declared emphatically.

In Chicago he had been told that his boys were in for a hard tussle. He admitted that he had spent an uneasy night as a consequence, after first feeling that his team would win without unusual difficulty.

Ineligibility of Jay Bevan, St. Paul Gopher sophomore guard, was announced late tonight. Bevan failed to clear up a scholastic failure at Macalester college last year, and as a result he will have to wait until 1934 before he can play with Minnesota.

Sutherland Shifts Lineup.

Bierman planned no changes in his lineup except the use of Harpole in Bevan's place, but Coach Sutherland indicated he will use Rooker instead of Baxter at left end, Hoel instead of Meredith at left tackle, Munjas in place of Hogan at quarter back, and Weisenbaugh in place of Weinstock at full back.

MAGICIANS DO THEIR STUFF AS CONCLAVE OPENS

They'll Have a Carnival Tonight.

There were magical doings galore in the Hotel Sherman yesterday as the midwest magical conclave was opened.

For instance, at the hour Al Smith of the brown derby and fat cigar was to have left New York for a World's Fair reception in his honor today, another Al Smith popped up on the hotel's mezzanine floor, and casually flicked the ashes from a fat cigar. Then suddenly there was an explosion that sounded like a dynamic blast.

"Sure, I'm Al Smith," remarked the intruder.

"Listen," he said "removing the cigar from his mouth. A flash of light and another bang, bang! "Now wouldn't that be a swell gag to get off on Al when he comes to town tomorrow?"

A reporter turned to Troseth, the Tricky Trickster, who by virtue of his office as president of the Chicago assembly of American Magicians, which is host during the conclave, isn't always up to tricks. "Is this Al Smith," the reporter asked.

No Brown Derby Here.

"Sure," the Tricky Trickster replied. "You see he has on a gray felt has and comes from Minneapolis. Now if he had on a brown derby . . . Say, Al, where's your brown derby?"

The reporter heard a new voice interrupting: "Say, have you seen this one? No? Well now, let me place this ball in your hand, how many are left in my hand? Two. That's right. Now you have two in your hand and I have one left. Now let me place the third in your hand. You have three, is that not so? Yes. Now place one of them in my hand. Close your hand tight. Now open it. My, my, you have three balls in your hand." The reporter looked up. It was Mr. Smith performing the trick.

"Don't worry," said the Tricky Trickster. "These fellows have to keep pace with the times. They delve into all the sciences, and use the latest inventions. We even have it on good authority that English magicians are using the buzz saw to saw in twain the beautiful lady in the box. The old hand sawing method is clear out of date."

15 Years Learning Trick.

Last night the three day convention opened with an informal exchange of tricks. Elmer Gylleck, Chicago architect, caused billiard balls to disappear and brought them back again out of thin air. It took him fifteen years to accomplish the trick.

"I practiced eight hours a day at first," he said, "now it is easy, and it takes my mind off my work. Another favorite is calling twelve giant playing cards [9 inches long] out of my pocket and putting them back again."

Carl W. Jones, publisher of the Minneapolis Journal, was present to show off his latest trick, as was Eugene Berstein, Chicago attorney, who demonstrated spirit rappings and hypnotisms, and Henry Brower, a Chicago shoe salesman, who plucks silver dollars out of the air.

This afternoon the magicians will hold a contest and the latest magical inventions will be given as prizes. The magic carnival will begin at 7:30 o'clock this evening. It will be followed by ten acts of magic by professional entertainers at 9 o'clock. Tomorrow the magicians will descend upon A Century of Progress.

YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE SOLVED

MRS. C. H. DENNIS, WIFE OF EDITOR OF NEWS, IS DEAD

A Native of Illinois and an Evanstonian.

Jeannelle Wilson Dennis, wife of Charles H. Dennis, editor of the Chicago Daily News, died in the Evanston hospital yesterday afternoon. She had been seriously ill since late in July and her condition became critical about three weeks ago.

She came of Illinois pioneer stock. Her father, the late William Oliver Wilson, a leading resident of Edgar county, was a son of an early settler at Palestine, one of the first of the Wabash river towns. Her mother's father, Col. Maxwell Blackburn, a landowner of Edgar county, came to Illinois from Kentucky in the early years of last century. He commanded a regiment of frontiersmen enlisted for service in the Black Hawk war.

Widely Known as Painter.

In her girlhood Mrs. Dennis studied at the Chicago Art institute. Her skill in portraiture was well known to her friends. In recent years she organized many exhibits of paintings and art objects in Evanston and Wilmette which attracted wide attention and were participated in by many of the leading artists of the central west. By appointment of Mayor Bartlett she was a member of the Evanston art commission.

Mrs. Dennis was a member of the Cordon club, the College club, the Women's University club, the Municipal Art league, the North Shore Art league, and the University Guild of Evanston. By appointment of Gov. Horner she was one of the official hostesses at the Illinois Host house at A Century of Progress.

Husband, Daughters, Son Survive.

She is survived by her husband, two daughters, Ruth Elizabeth Dennis, and Mrs. Julian P. Anderson, both of Evanston, and a son, William Andrew Dennis, of Paris, Ill.; a brother, Maxwell Blackburn Wilson, is also a resident of Paris.

The funeral will be held at the family residence, 1225 Michigan avenue, Evanston, at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, conducted by the Rev. Paul A. Wolfe of the First Presbyterian church of Evanston. Burial will be at Paris, Ill., on Monday.

BOOST IN TAXES RESULTS IN LOSS TO PEOPLES GAS

Third Quarter Shows $151,910 Deficit.

The Peoples Gas Light and Coke company lost $151,910 in the three months ended Sept. 30, James Simpson, chairman, said yesterday in a letter to stockholders explaining why directors found it necessary to interrupt dividends for the first time in twelve years.

While the third quarter is normally the poorest in the fiscal year, the company earned a net profit of $393,808, or 57 cents a share, in that period last year.

The loss, Mr. Simpson pointed out, brought net income down to $1,531,177 for the nine months ended Sept. 30. This is equal to $2.26 a share. The company has already paid out $2.25 a share to stockholders this year. The recently enacted Illinois corporation act specifies that dividends may be paid only out of earnings or earned surplus.

Earned Surplus in Question.

There is some question, Mr. Simpson explained, whether the company's surplus of $3,365,896 can be properly regarded as earned surplus. An examination of the company's records for several years back must be made before this question can be settled.

The $1,531,177 net for the nine months this year is less than half of the net income of $3,353,911 reported in the corresponding period of 1932. The per share net was equal to $4.89 for the 1932 period. Net income was $2,339,949 for the twelve months ended Sept. 30, equivalent to $3.46 a share, against $4,948,849, or $7.21 a share, in the preceding year.

By careful economy the company was able to cut expenses by $1,100,000 in the nine months as compared with the same period of 1932.

Taxes, NRA Offset Economy.

This economy, however, was more than offset by the increases in local, state and federal taxes and higher operating costs growing out of the application of the NRA, Mr. Simpson said. An estimated $300,000 annually will be added to the company's expenses through operation under the recovery act, he said.

While this increase in expense is taking place the company is being caught between the pressure on one side for lower rates and the rising tax bill.

The added taxes which the company has been called upon to bear this year include an additional $448,052 in the personal property levy, $600,000 under the state sales tax, $67,000 under the federal capital stock and excess profit tax. The company is also required to pay the expense incurred by the Illinois commerce commission in regulating its affairs.

The company is contesting the increase in the personal property tax and the application of the sales tax to gas sales, Mr. Simpson pointed out.

Pushes Sales Campaign.

Despite these difficulties the company is pushing its campaign to broaden its market through the sale of gas for space and water heating, Mr. Simpson said.

The condensed income statement for the third quarter, with 1932 comparisons, follows:

	Three months ended Sept. 30 1933.	1932.

Better Times Are Near, Says Myron Taylor

MYRON C. TAYLOR.

Faith that the early future has better times in store for this country and the world was expressed here last night by Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation. Mr. Taylor spoke before 250 representatives of various branches of the steel industry at the dinner concluding the two day convention of the American Institute of Steel Construction at the Stevens hotel.

Mr. Taylor did not speak specifically on any of the phases of the administration's recovery program, but urged support of the President as the "plain duty" of every citizen.

His speech followed receipt of a message from Roosevelt asking the steel men to have faith in the nation and its government.

President's Message.

The President's message said, "Our country as a whole has made definite progress toward better days. However, we still have a long road ahead of us, and if we are to be successful every one of us must have and must demonstrate his faith in the nation and its government.

"I sincerely hope that every unit of the steel fabricating industry, operating under the code of fair competition, will demonstrate in helpful fashion the faith it has in the national recovery program."

To show that this country and the world as a whole are making headway toward recovery, Mr. Taylor cited the report of the National Industrial conference board that the depression reached its depth about the middle of last year and since then recovery has been making slow but substantial progress.

Points to Conditions Year Ago.

"If one doubts that, at least as far as this country is concerned," the steel executive said, "let him compare present conditions with those that obtained a year ago and answer whether he would exchange.

"Out of the fermentation caused by this upheaval will come, slowly but surely, plans and policies which in effect will adjust production to consumption and the relation of men and women to production, and from that point onward we will start upon another cycle, in which opportunity for leisure will form a part, and through the proper use of that leisure we may further develop a new American type of progress.

"There is no doubt that President Roosevelt has caught the spirit of these impressive changes, and in an hour of peril and need, has lent himself to the task of leadership.

Asks All to Aid Program.

"It is the plain duty of every American to give him the utmost of counsel and cooperation in these great undertakings. Industry has never lacked courage. It has shown its staying powers throughout this great depression. Its faith in the future is undimmed. Industry will carry on."

Col. Henry M. Waite, deputy administrator of the federal public works program, chided the steel men for not being more prompt in taking advantage of the opportunity to sell steel rails to the railroads under the plan put forward by the President.

"As you know," he said, "50 per cent of the prospective tonnage is dependent upon a decided decrease in the price of rails. Isn't it time that industry spread its overhead, and not try to figure it all on a possible tonnage that would at least help to start the wheels moving?"

PREMIER-PABST CHEESE DIVISION BOUGHT BY KRAFT

The purchase of the cheese division of the Premier-Pabst corporation, Milwaukee, by the Kraft-Phenix Cheese corporation was announced here yesterday by J. L. Kraft, president of the Kraft-Phenix, and Harry Pearlstein, president of Pabst.

The business will be operated without interruption, continuing in the hands of Premier-Pabst until Nov. 1, when it will be transferred to Kraft-Phenix. Kraft will take over all inventories, trademarks, patents, and supplies, including one country plant at Mosling, Wis.

Expansion of the Pabst brewing facilities will be made possible by the release of space now occupied by the cheese division. It is understood that the cheese division will eventually be consolidated with the Davis Cheese company of Plymouth, Wis., a subsidiary of Kraft-Phenix.

ALL GRAINS RISE TO DAY'S LIMITS; U. S. BUYS WHEAT

Early Gains Shaded by Profit Taking.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

What was regarded as further government buying of futures made its appearance yesterday and advanced prices in a manner that must have gratified farmers. The top figures of the day were 5 cents above Thursday's finish, the maximum permitted under the exchange regulations. Rye was carried up a like amount, while corn soared 4 cents and oats 3 cents, also the limits for one day's operations.

While the best figures were not maintained, due to extensive profit taking, wheat was 2⅜ to 4 cents higher for the day. The December delivery, which had proved strongest lately, showed the most weakness yesterday and closed at 81½ to 81⅝ cents, after selling as high as 84¼ cents, going to 3 cents under May, against 1½ cents under at the finish on Thursday.

Other Grains Higher.

Corn closed ⅞ to 1¼ cents higher, with December at 42¾ to 42½ cents. Oats gained 1½ to 2 cents, with December at 31⅝ to 32 cents. Rye was 2½ to 2¾ cents up for the day, with December at 53½ cents. Barley was unchanged to 1½ cents higher, closing with December at 44 cents.

According to pit brokers yesterday was the fourth consecutive day of buying of wheat futures for government account. While there was considerable doubt as to whether all of the business attributed to the Farmers' National Grain corporation was for official relief purposes, the purchases have been effective in advancing prices, as the buying has appeared whenever there was evidence of a sinking spell.

At the top figures yesterday wheat showed a recovery of 13½ to 16⅝ cents from the low on Tuesday and oats were up 6½ to 7⅝ cents for the same period, while corn was up 7⅝ to 7⅞ cents from Saturday, when the lowest levels of the season were established.

Prices Churn Violently.

Price changes in all grains were violent during the day and at one time actual trading in wheat futures in the pit was over 1 cent out of line with the quotations on the blackboard.

The threatened farmers' strike failed to have any effect on sentiment, but it was regarded as likely to force the administration's hand as far as action in lifting prices was concerned. There were numerous views expressed both by the trade and by politicians as to what should be done to help restore the purchasing power of the producer.

Buying of wheat futures attributed to the government yesterday was largely in the May delivery, which had some effect in widening its premium as compared with the December option. Winnipeg showed considerable strength early, but failed to follow the full upturn in American markets later, although closing 1⅞ to 2⅛ cents higher. There was unconfirmed rumors of large export sales of Manitobas, but only 750,000 bushels were finally confirmed.

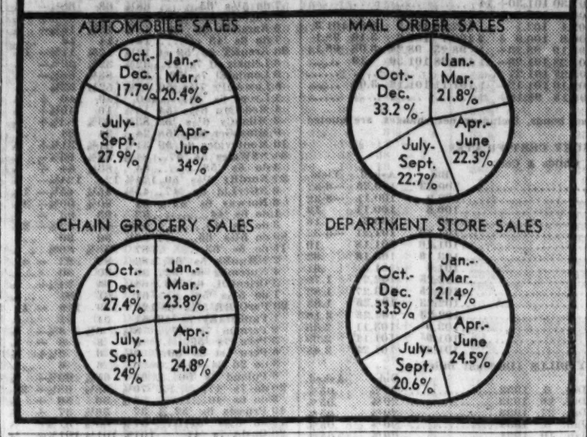
MEAT PACKERS' ANNUAL SESSION OPENS MONDAY

The twenty-eighth annual convention of the Institute of American Meat Packers will be held next Monday and Tuesday at the Drake hotel. The institute is the trade, research and educational organization of the meat packing industry.

The speakers on Monday include C. L. Harlan, live stock statistician of the national department of agriculture; W. H. Spencer, dean of the school of business of the University of Chicago; Charles E. Herrick, chairman of the institute's committee on foreign relations and trade; J. M. Pelton, chairman of the committee on accounting; Frank I. Badgley, head of the industrial relations department, Swift & Co., and George M. Foster, chairman of the institute's special labor committee.

On Tuesday representatives of the AAA, the hog producers' committee and the cattle producers' committee will hold a symposium on the AAA program with reference to the live stock and meat industry. In the afternoon the marketing agreement of the meat industry will be discussed. Edward Charles Elliott, president of Purdue university, is announced as speaker at the annual dinner in the Palmer house Tuesday evening.

The Last Quarter Is Best of the Year for Many Lines of Retail Business



Foreign Bond Salvage Up to Citizen Group

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—Authorized by the last congress to form a government corporation to protect American investors in defaulted foreign bonds, President Roosevelt today declined to act beyond stimulating the formation of a private protective agency.

"It would not be wise for the government to undertake directly the settlement of private debt situations," declared a White House statement issued following a conference between the President and 14 business leaders whom he urged to form a private association.

FRANK O. LOWDEN.

Investments Exceed 7 Billions.

Americans have scattered seven or eight billion dollars in investments in 40 countries, according to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who attended another conference on the question this morning. Of these investments about two billion dollars' worth are now in default, he said.

Authority was given the President and the federal trade commission under title Two of the Securities act to form a federal corporation which would protect the interests of investors in these defaulted securities. Recognizing "a duty within the proper limits of international law and international amity to defend American interests abroad," the White House statement today nevertheless definitely turned its back on the procedure contemplated in the law.

Agency Not Government Group.

Secretary Hull also emphasized that the private association which the President was urging would have no connection with the government or with banks which had floated defaulting bonds.

Those attending the conference with the President were: Laird Bell, Chicago; Hendon Chubb, New York; W. L. Clayton, Houston, Tex.; John Cowles, Des Moines; Herman Ekern, former attorney general of Wisconsin; Ernest M. Hopkins, president, Dartmouth college, Philip La Follette, ex-governor of Wisconsin; Mills B. Lane, Savannah, Ga.; Frank O. Lowden, ex-governor of Illinois; Orrin K. McMurray, University of California; Roland S. Morris, former American ambassador to Japan; Thomas D. Thacher, former solicitor general; J. C. Traphagen, New York, and Quincy Wright, University of Chicago.

In addition, Charles Francis Adams, former secretary of the navy; Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war; J. Reuben Clark Jr., former ambassador to Mexico, and others who had been asked to share in this work were unable to be present at this meeting.

CHICAGO BUREAU FOR INVESTORS SAVES MILLIONS

The Investors Protective Bureau, 10 South La Salle street, in cooperation with the state's attorney's office and representatives of the securities department, has been instrumental in effecting refunds totaling $20,500,000 to investors who had lodged complaints against "shady" brokers, according to a bulletin sent out yesterday.

"We are now in the midst of a financial campaign," said Mortimer C. Grover, manager of the bureau, "and are deserving of support from members of the investment field, particularly in these times when our facilities are being taxed more than ever before."

The bureau is supported financially by voluntary contributions from members of the stock exchanges, newspapers, banks, investment bankers and special subscribers. It is active in campaigning against "bucket shops" and illegitimate, fraudulent and unethical security practices.

Modified Code for Retail Stores Given to Roosevelt

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—(AP)—A modified code for the retail stores was placed before President Roosevelt late today by Donald Richberg, counsel for the NRA. Early action is in prospect.

EXCHANGE TRADE DESERTS FRANC; DOLLAR HIGHER

Political Situation in Europe Cause.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 20.—The seeming European political situation today caused another sharp rise in the American dollar. Foreign exchange trading was marked by a continued flight from the French gold franc which only a few days ago was the refuge of timid capital.

The dollar rose sharply to 71.75 cents in gold, as measured in terms of the franc, an advance of nearly a cent and a half over yesterday's final price of 70.33 cents. Other currencies also encroached on the franc as talk of French desertion of the gold standard increased. The anxiety was heightened by fears that the Daladier cabinet "economy budget" would be sacrificed to perpetuate the present government.

Sharp Rise Against Franc.

The dollar's advance against the franc was sharper than against other foreign currencies. The franc sold down to 5.44 cents, the lowest price since Aug. 24, and closed at 5.46, down 11 points on the day. Other principal foreign currencies also closed below last night's quotations in terms of U. S. funds. The British pound closed 1¾ cents lower at $4.53½ and the Germany mark closed at 33.30, down .7 of a cent from yesterday.

The Italian lira was off .14 of a cent at 7.34½ cents. Canadian dollars closed at 96.62½ cents, compared with 96.68¾ cents the preceding day.

The early rise in the dollar caused the treasury to post a lower price for newly mined gold. The bid posted this morning was $29.13 an ounce, a decline of 5 cents from yesterday's posted quotation.

Report Rush for Gold.

Reports of heavy buying of gold in the London bullion market continued. With so many leading currencies on a "managed" basis and the franc in some danger of following the pound and the dollar, there has developed a rush for gold.

It is impossible to trace the source of the buying, but it is thought that it is coming from all sections of the world. Buyers are taking great care, however, to cover their identity.

In some instances, it is said, orders coming from continental banks are actually for the account of British and American purchasers.

INDICATE DODGE SECURITY PERMIT WILL BE REVOKED

The hearing of Paul C. Dodge & Co., called to show why the firm's license to conduct a securities business in Illinois should not be cancelled, was concluded late last night, and Rupert F. Buppus, state securities commissioner, indicated that he would recommend cancellation of the license to the secretary of state.

Paul C. Dodge was underwriter for the stock of Pfeiffer Brewing company. The stock was sold under an agreement which, it is reported, provided that money realized from the sale of stock be deposited in escrow until it should reach a sum sufficient to assure proper financing of the company, with the proviso that if the amount realized did not reach the stipulated sum prior to Jan. 11, 1934, the money would be returned to stockholders.

It was alleged that Paul C. Dodge & Co. effected the release of the escrow fund for the use of the company before the agreed amount had been raised.

NORFOLK ROAD PURCHASES 10,000 TONS OF RAILS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 20.—With orders for about 800,000 tons of rails overhanging the market and scheduled to be placed as soon as the carriers and steel manufacturers agree on the price, the Norfolk and Western has taken the initiative by placing an order for 10,000 tons of 131 pound rail.

A total of 7,500 tons of the order was allocated to the Carnegie Steel company, while Bethlehem Steel corporation received a contract for 2,500 tons.

Court Approves Valuation on Illinois Life's Assets

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson yesterday approved the report of Master in Chancery Jacob I. Grossman which set a cash value of $4,240,000 on the assets of the Illinois Life Insurance company. A number of agents and policy holders had objected to the valuation as too low. The judge also denied an appeal from his order of July 22 approving a contract for reinsurance of policy holders in the company by the Central Life Assurance society [mutual] of Iowa.

BUILDING GAINS LAST MONTH DUE TO PUBLIC WORK

New York, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The F. W. Dodge corporation today reported that September construction contracts in states east of the Rocky mountains amounted to $122,61',700, an increase of nearly 16 per cent over the August total of $106,131,100 and only slightly below the September, 1932, total of $127,526,700.

The largest gain was made in public works, which had a September total of $57,323,800, against $32,002,500 for August. The gain was accounted for largely by additional contracts for highway construction and levee work in the Mississippi valley.

Nonresidential building amounted to $37,977,300, compared with $32,796,600 for August; residential construction started in September totaled $23,889,900, compared with $21,937,000 for August; public utilities contracts for the month were $3,425,300, against $19,395,000 for August and $4,522,700 for September, 1932.

The corporation reported new construction projects planned in September amounted to $846,726,700, the largest monthly total since April, 1930.

Third quarter net was equivalent to $1.02 a share against $1.04 in the second quarter and 85 cents a year ago.

Net profit aggregated $5,949,442 for the first nine months, as against $5,709,209 in the comparable 1932 months.

Higher Costs May Boost Railroad Dining Car Prices

Railroads may raise the price of meals to dining car patrons owing to the rapid advance in costs of supplies and operation under the NRA, N. L. Patterson, superintendent of dining car service of the Illinois Central lines, told the annual convention of dining car superintendents meeting yesterday at the Congress hotel. The average price of a meal, he said, is now 90 cents.

Veil Torn Off Life Insurance Asset 'Values'

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Receivership for the National Life Insurance Company of the United States of America suddenly brought to the attention of the company's 112,000 policy holders the fact that it had been carrying in its investment portfolio a long list of stocks of fictitious valuations.

Although this was a shock to most of the policyholders it was no surprise to insurance men. More than a year ago the insurance superintendents of the various states met and agreed that in view of the sharp decline in market values of all stocks it would be good policy to permit the insurance companies to value the stock holdings in their statements at approximately the June 30, 1931 levels.

* *

This was regarded as a device to protect weak companies. Strong companies raised objections, but these objections were overruled. Thereupon companies that were in a position to do so set up special reserves on the liability side of their statements against depreciation of stocks held.

So anxious were the insurance superintendents to protect the weak companies, however, that they would not permit the strong companies to label these reserves in such a way that the public could understand what they were for.

That is how the National Life of the U. S. A. was able to carry in its statements a list of bank, railway, and other stocks at prices far above their actual market value.

Gold Franc, Yardstick for Dollar, Gets Rubbery.

The chief remaining yardstick for measuring the United States dollar appears to be getting rubbery. During the last few days the dollar has been stronger in terms of French francs, but it by no means is certain that the dollar advance has been due to strength of the dollar. Part of it is probably due to weakness of the franc.

Chicago banks report that during the last week there has been a shift in the flow of money and capital. For months funds were being transferred from the United States to London and Paris as Americans and foreign investors fled from the wobbling dollar. The amount of American capital exported during the last few months has been estimated at between a half billion and a billion dollars. In addition, there were heavy withdrawals of foreign balances.

* *

Now that a healthy run has developed on the franc and the war scare has arisen, Paris has lost its attraction as a haven for investors fleeing from the dollar. Doubt concerning the ability of the French to balance their budget has been a factor.

Speculators in foreign exchange have been less active during the last few days, and banks report substantial transfers of funds from France to New York. Foreign investors are again looking with some favor on American securities.

"We'll Do What Washington Tells Us To," Banker's Opinion.

A pretty good idea of the trend of thought among bankers these days may be derived from the remarks of a prominent Milwaukee banker who was in Chicago yesterday. He was asked whether his bank would sell preferred stock to the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

"My guess is that we will," he said. "I think banks all over the country will sell preferred stock. We're in the army now and we'll all do what they tell us to do in Washington. It's no longer a question of whether we think it's good policy. There are too many ways in which the administration can apply the squeeze. If Washington says it's preferred stock, then it's preferred stock."

* *

One step in connection with the sale of preferred stock that is not particularly relished by bankers is the necessity of calling special stockholders' meetings to vote on such issuance. Not only is there a tendency these days for stockholders to be critical of bank management but the disclosures of the special senate investigating committee has put ideas in the head of stockholders.

In banking circles generally there is a growing suspicion that the grilling by the senate committee of the Chase bank officials has been timed to occur just when the administration is applying the squeeze to bank managements in a number of other ways. It is regarded by bankers as part of the program to force banks to comply with administration demands and submit to closer government control.

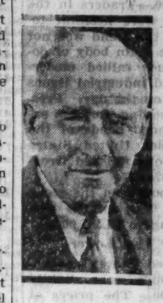
He has been connected with these companies in an executive capacity for the last six years.

Herbert M. Cole, managing editor of the Boston News Bureau, was elected president of the Boston publishing subsidiary, succeeding Bancroft.

WIGGIN REVEALS DEALS IN STOCK OF CHASE BANK

Shares Bought, Sold by Subsidiary.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—(AP)—How a subsidiary of a Chase National bank affiliate bought the bank's stock to keep the market steady while it was selling blocks of the same securities costing high into the millions was set forth in detail today before the senate banking committee.



T. W. LAMONT.
[Acme Photo.]

Albert H. Wiggin former head of the Chase bank, related the story under questioning by Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, but labeled it a "common practice" in contending that buying power was necessary to hold prices stable.

Before resuming the questioning of Wiggin in the afternoon session, the committee decided to send each member of the New York Stock exchange a questionnaire about pool and trading operations which the exchange governing board had declined to distribute. A complete agreement between brokers and the committee on the form of the questionnaire was announced late in the day by Pecora.

Exchange Declines to Act.

"There is no occasion for further inviting the cooperation of the exchange," he said. "We invited it and didn't get it."

The decision of the governing board was transmitted verbally to the committee earlier by Roland L. Redmond, counsel for the exchange. Previously it had been given in letters from Richard V. Whitney, exchange president.

In the course of Wiggin's testimony, Pecora developed that an opportunity was put before the banker by Thomas W. Lamont Jr. of J. P. Morgan & Co. to make $150,000 in a stock transaction. Wiggin smilingly added that he did not take advantage of the chance.

A telegram addressed to Wiggin en route on a train at Douglas, Ariz., signed "Tom," which Wiggin identified as being from Lamont, was produced. It read:

"The Van Ness boys of Cleveland have just organized Alleghany corporation, being a holding company, to take over their principal investment in railroad shares. Yesterday we issued 35,000,000 of collateral trust bonds. Today Guaranty is offering 25,000,000 preferred stock. We are making no offering of common stock, but have set aside for you and immediate associates 10,000 shares at cost to us, namely, $20. The counter market is quoted at $35. Please wire promptly your wishes. I am sailing for Paris tonight. With best regards.

"TOM."

Says He Incurred Loss.

"Did you make any money?" asked Senator Couzens [Rep., Mich.].

"No, sir; I lost money," replied Wiggin.

"Because you didn't take advantage of the market at that time?" interjected Pecora. Wiggin nodded assent.

Pecora turned back to querying Wiggin about a stock trading account engaged in by the Metpotan corporation, wholly owned by the Chase Securities corporation, an affiliate of the bank. This account, Pecora developed, traded in $103,000,000 of the stock of the bank and its affiliate, showing a profit of $321,000 when it ended in July, 1930, with 38,440 shares on hand.

Pecora brought out that the trading account was authorized to buy as well as sell the stock after Wiggin had said the sale was desired to obtain wider distribution.

"You must have some purchasing power to sustain a sales campaign," Wiggin replied, "and to keep the market steady."

"There was no way for the public to know that purchases and sales were being made by the same people?" asked Pecora.

"I don't know that, but the public undoubtedly knows that's a common way of doing business," answered Wiggin.

Asks if Public Is Informed.

"Weren't you creating the appearance of an active market when, as a matter of fact, that wasn't the situation?" broke in Senator Adams [Dem., Colo.], a banker and lawyer.

Before Wiggin answered, Pecora asked if those conducting trading accounts announced they were operating, "or do they take pains to keep that from being known?"

"There is no advertisement of it but there's no concealment," Wiggin replied. He denied Pecora's contention that buying and selling operations through an account primarily bent on selling was, in its elementary fundamentals, a wash or fictitious sale, and said that he did not know "that this led anybody, anyway," into the market.

Several brokers and Redmond, Pecora and the committee then decided to send the questionnaire directly to stock exchange members, after modifying it slightly to meet various technical objections from brokers and the exchange. The brokers held that in its original form, the questionnaire would not supply accurate information without requiring exorbitant expenditures by the stock exchange members.

State Auditor Commended in Handling Bank Affairs

Edward J. Barrett, state auditor, was commended for the "thoroughness and competency" with which he handled the banking situation in Illinois during and since the moratorium, in a resolution adopted yesterday by the executive committee of the Illinois Bankers association.

Chicago and Cleveland Reserve Rate Cut; Part of Credit Plan

The Chicago and Cleveland federal reserve banks yesterday followed the example of the New York reserve bank by cutting the interest rate at which member banks may borrow funds. The 3 per cent rate, which has been in force since last spring, was reduced to 2½ per cent by both the middle western banks. New York's rate is now 2 per cent, compared with 2½ per cent formerly.

The slash in the rediscount rate is another step in the ambitious credit expansion scheme which the government is attempting to put across through the federal reserve system. The program is now being pushed on many fronts.

Bond Buying Part of Plan.

The reserve banks are buying government bonds at the rate of around $35,000,000 weekly for the avowed purpose of piling up cash in member banks and forcing an expansion of commercial loans. Through the RFC the government is "unfreezing" deposits in closed banks through loans on assets intended to allow banks to liquidate or reopen.

The significance of the cut in the rediscount rate is minimized in financial quarters. It is pointed out that member banks are showing no desire to borrow from the federal reserve. In New York and Chicago the member banks are not indebted at all to the reserve banks at present.

Like the bond buying program, the effect of the cut in the rediscount is not expected to show immediate results.

BANKERS' BILLS CUT.

New York, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The New York Federal Reserve bank has reduced its buying rate for bankers' acceptances in the open market to ½ of one per cent for maturities up to 90 days, it was announced today. The rate had previously been 1 per cent. The action was taken to bring the bill buying rate more in harmony with the rediscount rate, which yesterday was lowered from 2½ per cent to 2 per cent.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 20.—Traders in the listed bond market were hesitant today and as a result the trend was not clearly defined. The main body of domestic railroad issues rallied moderately, but utility and industrial issues were slightly lower on the day. Pressure against the leading foreign exchange rates weakened bonds of the foreign group, while United States government obligations finished irregular, 4-32s up to 3-32s off.

The turnover in bonds on the stock exchange was less than on the previous day, amounting to $9,581,000.

Fourth Liberty 4¼s Lower.

Dealings in United States government long term bonds were slightly more than $1,000,000. The prices of the Fourth Liberty 4¼s, called and uncalled, sold off fractionally.

In the foreigns, the so-called gold payment issues were a target. French Government 7½s and 7s lost 2½ and 2¼ points, respectively, and Swiss government 5½s dropped 1⅝ points. Dutch East Indies loans were depressed 3 to 3¼ points. All of these issues, however, are still selling at high premiums. German bonds turned reactionary as did many of the Scandinavian loans.

Rails Are Irregular.

The principal gains in domestic railroad bonds amounted to a point or two, but at the same time several infrequently traded issues in the rail group lost several points on the day. In the utilities, New York Rapid Transit bonds closed unchanged to 3½ points down.

Setbacks in the domestic bond group on the curb exchange ranged from fractions to 5 points. Only a few issues which were at all active closed higher. Heavy trading in Russian bonds on the prospect of recognition resulted in gains of ⅞ of a point to 2 points.

For thirty-nine weeks ended Sept. 30 net profit was $1,734,066, equal to 76 cents a share.

A National Bank Reorganization.

Investors' Guide: Kindly reply to the following: In the reorganization of a national bank the depositors are asked to waive 50 per cent of their deposits, such waived deposits to be secured by deposit with three trustees, as collateral with rights of substitution, of certain depreciat.d securities [of very uncertain value], the deposits waived to be repaid by the trustees from dividends if, when, and as declared by the trustees from such collaterals paid or collected. Is there any law or ruling which binds a depositor to execute such waiver when 75 per cent [in amount] have waived? Also, what position does the depositor occupy if he refuses to execute such waiver and demands the full amount of his deposit?—M. S.

Answer — A representative of the controller of the currency informed us that in the event debtors of a national bank to the amount of 75 per cent of the bank's deposits agree to a reorganization plan the remaining depositors [representing 25 per cent] are bound by that reorganization plan regardless of the views of the dissenting depositors.

If a dissenting depositor believes that the plan is unfair or unjust he can write to the controller of the currency at Washington, D. C., filing a complaint and citing his reasons. The representative with whom we talked informed us that all such complaints are carefully investigated.

STOCKS REGISTER GAINS DESPITE EFFORT OF BEARS

Russian Recognition Talk Proves Helpful.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 20.—Washington rumors of impending recognition of Russia and the sharp recovery in wheat were credited as the helpful factors in a moderate rally in stock prices today. A widely held belief that some sections of the list had become oversold in the heavy liquidating movement of the last two days probably aided the recovery to some extent.

Brokers were assuring their customers yesterday afternoon that the reaction had already sufficiently discounted the turnabout of inflationary psychology and some of the overnight comment indicated a strong opinion that conditions were ripe for an upswing in prices today.

The rally got under way gradually, following a steady opening, but gained ground persistently after the first hour. Mining shares were outstanding in the rebound with the oils running a close second. Rails and general industrials were well represented in the more notable gains of the day.

Active Shares Up 1 to 3 Points.

The improvement averaged 1 to 3 points for the run of active issues. Volume was around 2,700,000 shares which compares with yesterday's total of 2,900,000.

Big scale buying seemed to center largely in stocks which have been the weakest performers of late. Alaska Juneau and United States Smelting were leaders in the gold mining group which had been under pressure for some time on growing indications that greenback currency is not so close around the corner as had been imagined. Homestake Mining recovered nearly 7 points of its losses, finishing a day of ups and downs at 309¾.

Whisky stocks were fairly active and at their best were up 3 to 5 points, but their gains were materially shaded in most instances by later selling.

Union Pacific was an outstanding strong spot in the rails, forging ahead some 4 points on active turnover. New York Central and Atchison also came in for good buying.

Celanese Active Feature.

Celanese was an active individual feature, advancing more than 2 points in heavy trading. Other speculative favorites of the day included Allied Chemical, Western Union and Union Carbide.

Motors came in for fair support, particularly Chrysler, which rallied nearly 3 points with the aid of its favorable third-quarter earnings report. General Motors and Auto Accessory shares were strong.

Farm Implements capitalized both the wheat upturn and the Russian recognition reports to better their positions.

Some railway equipment issues persisted in taking the downward course. General Railway Signal lost more than 4 points.

Bear forces tried to start a selling drive two or three times, but their efforts did not get far. Impared margin accounts were blamed for liquidation in spots.

The market sliped off from its best levels in the late afternoon and trading was extremely dull in the last hour.

HOGS RALLY AS FARMERS HOLD BACK SUPPLIES

Prices Up 10 to 20 Cents; Cattle Are Steady.

As a result of the recent pounding of the hog market, farmers are holding back shipments in an attempt to bolster prices. Yesterday's offerings at Chicago totaled only 7,000, about the lowest on record for a Friday.

Buying orders were limited, but the narrow demand was enough to elevate better grades 10 to 20 cents and clean up most of the starvation receipts. Practically all of the principal local houses, those carrying the heaviest stocks of pork in storage, continued to buy lightly and were willing to take on only enough to keep the fresh pork trade supplied.

Consequently there was a slow clearance later for anything that was not good enough to get out on the early bulge, and for stock arriving on the market after early activity subsided.

Average Advances 10 Cents.

Smaller interests dealing almost entirely in fresh pork bought top classes of 160 to 235 pound averages as high as $4.60 to $4.70, the tops for the day. The general average advanced 10 cents to $4.25. The action of the hog market this week on light receipts has been disappointing. Current quotations show losses of 75 to 85 cents compared with Monday, last week, the high point of the year.

During the last two days the Chicago market has handled only 16,000 hogs. This compared with 28,993 a week ago, and with 41,078 two weeks ago. Today's run is estimated at only 5,000. The tonnage of pork in the receipts was even lighter than receipts figures indicated, since the average weights of hogs this week have been running lightest since last March.

It is believed in the trade that the incentive on the part of the packers carrying big stocks of storage will be to move out stock before the tax of 50 cents per hundredweight is levied on inventories as of Nov. 5.

Cattle Receipts Shrink.

After a week of some of the heaviest cattle receipts in almost two years the movement of supplies from the country has decreased materially. Yesterday's arrivals at Chicago totaled only 1,000, hardly enough to test quotations. The scant supply was soon cleaned up at mostly steady prices, although quotations in many divisions are at the lowest levels in years.

Nothing in yesterday's run was good enough to bring more than $6.00. Some 1,033 pound averages reached this line, with the bulk at $4.50 to $5.85 and commoner grades down to $3.00. Odd lots sold as low as $2.00. Butcher stock reached new low levels.

Lambs recovered more ground yesterday when supplies fell short again. Prices ruled strong to 25 cents higher. All interests were aggressive in the natives at $7.00 to $7.25, sorting offerings lightly on this basis. Westerns sold at $7.25 and under.

LARD PRICES UNCHANGED AFTER WIDE VARIATIONS

Lard prices moved within a range of about 50 cents and closed with prices unchanged except for January, which was 2½ cents lower. There was a good volume of business but an unsettled feeling as the result of the announcement of the processing tax which was not taken favorably by packers and the provision trade in general.

Cash lard was unchanged with a fair trade, regular being 4.95 cents, loose 4.80 cents, and leaf 4.85 cents. Liverpool lard was generally unchanged. Exports of lard were 1,162,850 pounds.

Bellies were 5 to 10 cents higher on futures with deliveries of 150,000 pounds on October sales. Cash lots were steady at 4.62½ cents. Prices follow:

GLENWOOD ARMS QUICKLY PLACED ON PAYING BASIS

Goes from Receivership to Profits in 6 Months.

BY AL CHASE.

Putting an apartment building into the hands of the bondholders and placing it on a paying basis in six months after foreclosure proceedings, receivership, and other steps in reorganizing the bond issue, is the record achieved in the Glenwood Arms apartments, at 6726-28 Glenwood avenue, according to E. M. Nolen, The latter is president of the Glenwood Arms Building corporation which now owns the property.

Mr. Nolen announced last night that following a meeting of the stockholders it was voted to pay a dividend of $1 a share. He also stated that the Glenwood Arms apartment building, which contains thirty-five furnished one-room kitchenette suites, is now 100 per cent rented.

Had $92,500 Mortgage.

The building was financed with a first mortgage bond issue of $92,500, since paid down to $91,500, underwritten by the Ritchie Bond and Mortgage company. Following default of interest payments, bonds were called on Aug. 12, 1930, by the bondholders' protective committee, of which Joseph W. Cremin is secretary.

Foreclosure proceedings were instituted and a receiver appointed. The income during the receivership was sufficient to pay all the taxes and all of the reorganization expenses.

The bonds were all converted into stock in the newly formed Glenwood Arms Building corporation, and the apartment building became the property of the bondholders. They elected their own officers in the corporation last April.

Reserve in Treasury.

"All the taxes and insurance have been paid and there is a reserve in the treasury after voting the first dividend," said President Nolen.

The members of the bondholders' protective committee, of which Mr. Cremin is secretary, are: F. A. Hill, C. K. Anderson, Charles R. McCabe Jr., and Wells Hawtin.
